HARRISON SAYS COMMITTEE WILL ACCEPT TAX BILL

Chairman Expects Some Changes, However—Several Democrats Suggest Substitutes.

ASK FOR ESTIMATES ON NATIONAL INCOME

Senator Bailey Thinks 'Most Constructive Way' Might Be to Encourage Business Recovery.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, May 2.—Despite alternative proposals, and continued opposition from business leaders, Chairman Harrison (Dem.), Mississippi, of the Senate Finance Committee today forecast the House tax bill would be reported to the Senate without "much trouble."

His statement came at the conclusion of the third day of hearings, in which criticism of the administration tax plan was mingled with suggestions for other ways to raise revenue.

Even Democratic members of the committee joined in suggesting substitutes. Senator Bailey of North Carolina advanced the idea that the "most constructive way" to balance the budget might be to encourage business recovery rather than to lay new taxes.

Bailey and Senator King (Dem.), Utah, joined in asking Treasury experts to estimate what revenue would be realized from the present tax laws if the annual national income should rise to $70,000,000,000. King already has proposed a substitute for the pending bill, based mainly upon higher income taxes.

Probably Be Some Changes.

But as the hearings recessed until next week, Harrison told newspaper men, "I don't think we are going to have much trouble getting this bill out of the committee." He added, however, that there probably would be some changes in the measure.

The committee chairman's statement was in accord with plans of congressional leaders to push the tax and relief bills through Congress during the next month and wind up the session before the Republican National Convention June 9.

House leaders said the deficiency appropriation bill carrying the $1,500,000,000 for next year's relief program would be released from committee the latter part of next week, and sent to the Senate by the week following.

Bills likely to delay adjournment, however, include the Frazier-Lemke farm refinancing bill, calling for the issuance of $3,000,000,000 in new currency, on which a House vote is scheduled May 11, and threats of Senate Munitions Committee members to force a vote on their war tax bill.

Attack by John W. O'Leary.

In the tax hearings, the administration proposal for assessing corporations on the percentage of income they failed to distribute continued to be the chief target of business spokesmen.

(Under the House tax bill, corporation would be taxed up to 42½ per cent of their net income, depending upon how much of it was turned into surplus. This tax would supplant existing corporate levies. Corporation dividends would be made subject to the normal individual income tax.)

John W. O'Leary of Chicago, representing the Machinery and Allied Products Institute, leveled the heaviest fire at this plan, contending it would bring "social insecurity" and intensify "the peaks and valleys" of industrial activity.

Summary of His Points.

O'Leary summarized his opposition to the bill as follows:

"1. It will generate uncertainty and lack of confidence.

"2. It will deepen and lengthen depressions.

"3. It will foster inefficiency and obsolescence.

"4. It will penalize new corporate enterprise, expansion of industrial activity and development of new products.

"5. It will multiply taxation on depreciation reserves from which funds must come for capital equipment purchases.

"6. It will impose heavy penalties on uncertain profits.

"7. It will be a tax on capital rather than income for companies showing serious capital losses because exemptions for capital loss are limited.

"8. It will foster unfair competition by its multiplicity of 'relief measures.' "

TWO STEAMERS REPORTED IN COLLISION; ONE SINKING

Canadian Planter Said to Be Foundernig Between Cape Cod and Nantucket.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, May 3 (Sunday.)—The Radio Marine Corporation early today received a message stating that the steamers, City of Aukland and Canadian Planter, had collided and that the latter was sinking four miles northwest of Cross Rip Lightship. The message said the Aukland was standing by.

The City of Aukland sailed from Halifax, N. S., April 27 for Boston and New York; the Canadian Planter was on its way from New York to Boston and Montreal.

Cross Rip lightship is between Cape Cod and Nantucket. Neither the cost guard nor other sources here had heard of a collision.

MAN SPURNED BY EX-FIANCE IN STORE KILLS HER AND SELF

Glendale (Cal.) Pair Quarrel; Shoppers Witness Shooting.

By the Associated Press.

GLENDALE, Cal., May 2.—Shoppers in a downtown department store witnessed a double killing tonight in which a man and a woman, former sweethearts, were the victims. Police said Lee Walter Keenan, 28 years old, shot and fatally wounded Miss Annie Huffman, 26, and killed himself.

Witnesses told police Miss Huffman said in a loud voice: "I don't want anything to do with you." Several shots followed.

A roommate of the murdered woman, said Miss Huffman had sought to break off the affair with Keenan.

SEAMEN'S UNION EXPELS 19

Leaders in Outlaw Strike Barred From Jobs on 80 Lines.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, May 2.—Vice-President David E. Grange, of the International Seamen's Union of America, announced today that Joseph Curran, chairman, and 18 other leaders in an outlaw strike against ships here had been expelled from the Eastern and Gulf Sailors' Association, Inc.

Grange said the action would bar them from employment on ships of 80 lines which signed contracts permitting the union to fill all crew vacancies. All the men are in the sailor class. Curran was a leader in a crew strike at San Pedro, Cal., in March against the Panama-Pacific liner California and later assumed leadership of the rank and file revolt here against the union's contract and its officers.

Witnesses said the planes collided and a terrific explosion followed. They saw one of the pilots drop away from his machine and drift to earth under the spread-out parachute. The ripcord had been pulled by flying wreckage.

NATHAN HARRIS OUSTED AS HEAD OF CONGREGATION

Leader Among Orthodox Jews for 40 Years Removed as President of Chesed Shel Emeth.

DISPUTE OVER MANAGEMENT

Vice-President Shapiro Refuses to Discuss Action Until After Meeting of Directors.

Controversies which arose over the management of Chesed Shel Emeth Congregation and of the congregation's cemetery association resulted last week in the removal of Nathan Harris, leader among St. Louis Orthodox Jews for more than 40 years, as president of the congregation. Chesed Shel Emeth Synagogue is situated at Page boulevard and Euclid avenue.

Morris Shapiro, 7360 Amherst avenue, University City, vice-president of the congregation, said he could not discuss Harris' ouster until after a meeting of the board of directors, which he said he would call this month. He said Harris had been out of the city recently and in poor health. Harris could not be reached at his home, 6954 Columbia avenue, University City.

Harris' Supporters Out-Voted.

The Post-Dispatch was told that feeling has run high in the congregation in recent weeks over charges in connection with Harris' leadership. A considerable group remained loyal to him, but was outvoted at a meeting last week.

One complaint was said to have grown out of an order for construction of a parkway and drive leading to the Harris lot in the cemetery, at 7500 Olive boulevard, University City. Members felt the drive was unnecessary and took up space which might have been used for graves, it was said.

Harris, founder of the Jewish Orthodox Old Folks' Home, 1438 East Grand avenue, and of the Jewish Sheltering and Aid Society, 5030 Maple avenue, has been called the "mayor" of the Orthodox Jews of St. Louis and has many times been called on to arbitrate disputes.

Testimonial Dinner Last Fall.

A testimonial dinner, attended by about 2000 persons, was given at the Old Folks' Home last September in honor of Harris, after he succeeded in raising $35,000 to pay off a mortgage on the home. A purse of $2200 was presented to him by William L. Igoe, president of the Board of Police Commissioners, and congratulatory messages were read from Gov. Park, Gov. Horner and Mayor Dickmann.

Harris, 69 years old, has aided in formation of several Hebrew congregations and schools and sponsored campaigns for the relief of Jews in distress in other parts of the world.

Active as Organizer.

Coming to this country when a young man as an immigrant from Russia, he got a job in a St. Louis pants factory, but soon gained a position of leadership among his fellows by organizing the first union of boys' trousers workers in St. Louis, and obtaining wage increases for them. He later entered the clothing business and then became a real estate operator, but his success as an organizer continued to be reflected in his activities in lodge and church work.

BIG NAVAL MINE DEPOT STARTED ON WELSH COAST

Great Secrecy Maintained at Milford Haven; Air Center to Be Set Up in North.

By the Associated Press.

CARDIFF, Wales, May 2.—Land valued at $500,000 has been purchased by the British admiralty at Milford Haven for the construction of a large naval mine depot.

Already the ground has been leveled and approach roads constructed.

The greatest secrecy is being maintained and the curious are met with "no admittance" notices near the works.

The Milford Haven urban council has been notified by the admiralty that the probable water requirements of the new depot will be about 14,000 gallons of water for each working day of eight hours.

Further north, at Pwllheli in Caernarvonshire, the air ministry is proceeding with a scheme to establish an air armaments center and aviation field on the Lleyn peninsula, which juts out into the Irish sea. This it is estimated will cost $1,250,000.

The air ministry's plan met considerable local opposition.

ACCUSED OF USING RATTLESNAKES TO KILL FIFTH WIFE

Man Held in Los Angeles Found Method Too Slow, Drowned Her in Bathtub, Companion Says.

THRUST HER FOOT IN BOX OF REPTILES

Bite Failed to Kill Her—Witness Tells How He Helped Throw Body Into Fishpond.

By the Associated Press.

LOS ANGELES, Cal., May 2.—A weird murder plot in which a woman victim was alleged to have been bound and her foot thrust into a box of rattlesnakes and later drowned by her husband was related today to Deputy District Attorney Eugene Williams.

Williams said a witness told him how Mrs. Mary Emma Busch James, fifth wife of Robert James, a barber, was gagged and her foot held in a box of snakes. When that failed, Williams said, the woman was drowned in a bathtub. He said he would ask the Grand ury to indict James for murder.

Williams related the story after questioning C. H. Hope, 38 years old, night manager of a beach cafe. He said Hope told him:

"The Sunday before they found her dead, I took a box of rattlesnakes I got for James at Snake Joe's, a snake farm in Pasadena, to James' house in La Crescenta.

Wife Tied to Table, He Says.

"That Sunday when I walked into the house at 11 o'clock in the morning, James had his wife tied down with ropes to a breakfast table he had pulled out into the kitchen from the breakfast nook. She had on nothing but a nightdress and her eyes and her mouth were covered with adhesive tape so she could not see or scream.

" 'Go to the garage and get that box of rattlesnakes!' James said to me. I brought him the box of snakes.

"He took the box of snakes and set it on the floor. Then he took his wife's left foot and stuck it down into the box where the snakes were all coiled up together, shaking their rattles and hissing.

Victim Bitten, He Relates.

"I know one of them stuck its fangs into her leg, but all the snakes did not rise up and wrap themselves around her. Some of them might have been too old and lazy.

"After a while James took his wife's leg out of the box and told me to take the snakes away. I left, taking the snakes back to Snake Joe's in Pasadena. When I came back that Sunday night he told me to drive the car into the garage. He had a bottle of whisky and we drank.

" 'She's not dead yet!' he said. 'The rattlesnake poison is not working right. I'm not going to waste any more time. I'm going to drown her.'

"He stayed in the house and I stayed in the garage with the whisky. At 4 o'clock, James came out and said: 'Well, she's dead now. I'll clean up the place. Then I'll collect the insurance.'

"He went back into the house. A half hour later he came out again. He told me: 'I've got everything cleaned up, and I want you to help me carry out the body.' "

Body Found in Fish Pond.

The woman's body was found in a fishpond on the night of Aug. 3, three weeks after her marriage to the barber. It was James and a friend who reported the discovery of the body to authorities.

A long insurance litigation followed in which James asked for double indemnity on the grounds of accidental death. He was arrested April 19 on a morals charge involving a niece, Lois Wright. He pleaded not guilty.

James has said his previous wives were Maude Duncan, Birmingham, Ala.; Vera Vermillion, Emporia, Kan.; Minona Wallace, Los Angeles, Cal., and Ruth Thomas of New Orleans, La. The first two wives divorced him. The third died and the fourth obtained an annulment after living with him one day. He married Mary Busch on July 19, 1935.

Says Accuser Is "Screwy."

James was confronted by his accuser in the county jail, where he has been lodged since April 19. His only comment on Hope's story was: "You'll find out that guy Hope will tell you anything. He's screwy."

District Attorney Buron Fitts took James and Hope to the home where Mrs. James died. James, handcuffed to an officer, watched

3000 SHELTERED UNDER GUARD IN LEGATION WHILE CITY IS LOOTED

Haile Selassie on Way to Djibouti, French Somaliland, With Family, Sir Sidney Barton, English Envoy Reports.

PALACE SACKED BY MOB, IT IS SAID

American Missionaries Remain at Posts — Disorders Expected to Continue Until Arrival of Italian Army.

By the Associated Press.

LONDON, May 2.—Most of the foreign population of Addis Ababa slept in guarded compounds tonight after Ethiopia's civil authority collapsed with the flight of Emperor Haile Selassie.

The British Government was informed that armed robbers in the Ethiopian capital were burning, looting and shooting.

(The State Department in Washington was informed by Cornelius Van H. Engert, United States Minister resident in Addis Ababa, that the Ethiopian capital was in flames at 5 p. m.)

Sir Sidney Barton, the British Minister, in whose legation compound 3000 foreigners were sheltered, reported to the Government early this evening that the situation in Addis Ababa was satisfactory so far as the lives of foreigners was concerned.

Palace Reported Sacked.

Sir Sidney reported the precipitate departure of the Emperor on a train for Djibouti, French Somaliland, in a message over the legation wireless station. With him, the dispatch said, went the Empress and Crown Prince Asfa Wosan.

Although the British Minister, who talked to Haile Selassie before he left town, reported his destination was Djibouti, advices received by the German Government suggested he might have gone into hiding elsewhere.

The French Government was informed the imperial palace was sacked by a mob soon after the Emperor and his family left. The French Government, too, was given to understand that Haile Selassie had started for Djibouti.

British Legation Defenses.

The British legation, armed with machine guns and bomb-proof dugouts, is said to be equipped to shelter Britons and foreigners "in any emergency."

The defenses of the legation are manned by 150 Sikhs. The defenses include a double barbed wire enclosure as protection against riots and also the only supply of gas masks in the city.

(In Washington, the State Department said the United States Government accepted the British offer of asylum under the British flag for Americans who remained behind in Addis Ababa. There are 53 Americans, including Engert and his wife and children, in the capital.)

British reports said the confusion in Addis Ababa probably would last several days, until the Italian vanguard arrived and restored order.

King Not Abdicating.

It was stated officially that the British had received no report that the Emperor was abdicating. Authoritative sources said they considered he remained legally the Emperor until he formally renounced the title. In actuality, however, these sources considered Ethiopia was without an Emperor at present.

The Emperor's precipitate departure, on the day on which he had called all able-bodied men to march against the Italians, in a last-stand defense of his capital, resulted in chaos in Addis Ababa. His sudden about-face, after his repeated statements of his determination to de-

DR. SCHACHT AGREES TO STAY AS BANK HEAD

Differences With Hitler Patched Up at Conference at Instance of Goering.

By the Associated Press.

BERLIN, May 2.—Dr. Hjalmar Schacht agreed tonight to remain at his post as Nazi Minister of Economics and president of the Reichsbank after receiving Adolf Hitler's assurances of faith in his economic policies. Hitler and Dr. Schacht composed their differences at a conference.

The chief incentive for the conference was furnished by Gen. Hermann Wilhelm Goering whose appointment as supreme executive over foreign exchange and raw materials questions subordinated Schacht to second position in German commerce and industry.

Goering, who also had a talk with Dr. Schacht, agreed to use only a small corps of adjutants as a connecting link with ministries and departments under his new office. He declared he would confine himself, with the exception of this small administrative staff, to using the existing machinery for co-ordinating Germany's raw materials and foreign exchange needs with her resources.

Dr. Schacht, who has differed with the Reichsfuehrer before, was reported to have the support of Gen. Werner von Blomberg, chief of the Army General Staff.

"Blomberg realizes only too well that when others have already been forced to give adulterated bluish milk, Schacht still manages to serve cream," one official said. Therefore, this official continued, it is to the army's interest to have Dr. Schacht remain in control of Germany's economic life since otherwise the stupendous demands arising from Germany's rearmament program could not be met.

Dr. Schacht, who was known to have started his three-hour discussion with Hitler by offering to resign, remained at the Chancellory for lunch with Der Fuehrer for the first time in months.

The League of German Industries announced today its fund for advancing foreign exports would be continued for another year at approximately 1,000,000,000 marks ($400,000,000).

DECAPITATED OFFICER FOUND

Italian Flight Lieutenant Was Forced Down Early in War.

WITH THE SOUTHERN ITALIAN ARMY, GORRAHEI, Ethiopia, May 2.—Native troops under the command of Gen. Rodolfo Graziani today found the decapitated body of Flight-Lieutenant Minniti, who was forced down behind the Ethiopian lines in the early stages of the war. The Italians also recovered the body of Radio Sergeant Zannoni.

Their bodies were given military salutes and placed on an airplane, which started for Mogadiscio, enroute to burial in Italy.

PUBLISHER KNOCKED DOWN WHEN HE ASSAILS ROOSEVELT

Mayor of Nogales, Ariz., Floors Tucson Man During Speech at State Convention.

By the Associated Press.

TUCSON, Ariz., May 2.—Mayor Andrew Bettwy of Nogales floored William R. Mathews, publisher of the Arizona Daily Star, Tucson, with his fist today as Mathews denounced President Roosevelt before the State Democratic convention. Mathews, struck on the jaw, dropped to the platform.

Delegates led Bettwy from the stage. Mathews regained his feet and attempted to continue his remarks but his remarks were drowned out by booing and shouting. Police were called in to maintain order.

Bettwy, twice candidate for Governor of Arizona, returned to the platform a few minutes later and apologized "for losing my temper. It would not be a Democratic convention without a fight. I am sorry I had to be the first to start something." Mathews refused to prefer charges.

The publisher had said: "I realize that you don't want to hear what I am going to say. I know it will not change a single vote yet I am glad that Democrats still recognize a man's right to express his opinion."

The crowd soon set up a din.

REPORTED ITALIAN CHOICE FOR "ETHIOPIAN EMPEROR"

Lij Yasj, Grandson of Menelik, Said to Have Been Selected.

By the Associated Press.

DJIBOUTI, French Somaliland, May 3 (Sunday).—Last reports reaching Djibouti today from Addis Ababa before telephone lines were cut indicated that Italian planes dropped pamphlets announcing that a son of Lij Yasj, grandson of the great Ethiopian Emperor Menelik, would be the "new Ethiopian Emperor." He is said to be living in Tajura; French Somaliland.

(Lij Yasj, who succeeded to the Ethiopian throne in 1913 after Menelik's death, but was overthrown in 1916, was said in reliable quarters last November to have died after a lingering illness, during which he was virtually a prisoner of the Government.)

The imperial family of Haile Selassie is expected to reach Djibouti about 10 a. m.

EGYPTIAN NATIONALISTS WIN

Election of Chamber Passes With Only One Disturbance.

CAIRO, May 2.—The Nationalistic Wafd party was believed to have won a clear majority in the election of a new chamber of deputies today.

In contrast with the situation several months ago, election day passed quietly except in Upper Egypt, where two persons were killed and 34 were injured in clashes in several villages. (Many persons were killed last autumn and winter in riots between Wafdists and police. The Wafd party demands the establishment of a nationalistic regime in Egypt, free from British influence.) Although election returns will not be available before tomorrow, the ballots listed 70 Wafdists as without opposition.

ROME CELEBRATES EMPEROR'S FLIGHT

Impromptu Rejoicing in Advance of Official Order at Capital.

By the Associated Press.

ROME, May 3 (Sunday).—Italian press dispatches from Djibouti, French Somaliland, early today said Emperor Haile Selassie and his family would reach that city by special train today after fleeing from Addis Ababa.

The news of the Emperor's departure caused an impromptu celebration here last night.

Newspapers printed extras. Crowds packed around news stands, snatching up the papers as fast as they were delivered for sale.

The joy of victory was expressed without the regimentation prepared by the Government, which had ordered the nation to prepare for a nation-wide "adunata"—a mobilization in honor of the Italian army's arrival in Addis Ababa.

Venice held a premature adunata, today. Milan, Turin and Genoa did the same yesterday. Sirens blew, bells rang, and citizens quit work and paraded with cheers of victory—until they found out it was a mistake and returned to await the official call to celebrate.

Marshal Pietro Badoglio's forces already were close to Addis Ababa on the way from Dessye. The troops were not moving as fast as when they started. Heavy rains had set in, bogging the narrow highway, and landslides were frequent.

Badoglio's communique today did not state the exact position of the advancing column. Correspondents said a column of troops from Eritrea, moving down the old caravan trail, had joined the motorized column of Italians and that the two forces were proceeding together to the city.

The advanced point of the motorized column, which will make the triumphal entry into Addis Ababa is composed of detachments of every Italian service participating in the war.

Premier Mussolini conferred with his supreme naval commission. The situation in the Mediterranean where Great Britain has massed a powerful fleet, is said to have been considered.

FRANCE SENTENCES DOCTOR FOR STERILIZATION OF MEN

Gets Three Years After He Admitted Operations, Barred from Country When Term Is Over.

BORDEAUX, France, May 2.—Dr. Norbert Barthozek, Austrian surgeon, was sentenced to three years in prison today after being convicted of "simple assault" in connection with sterilization operation which he admitted performing.

The district court also fined him 200 francs (about $13) and barred from France for 10 years after his imprisonment ends. He was accused of performing operations on fathers who desired to have no more children.

JOPLIN MEETING OF DEMOCRATS TO ATTRACT 15,000

City Hard Pressed to Handle State Convention —Harmony of Pendergast Type to Prevail.

SENATOR CLARK TO BE KEYNOTER

Selection of Delegates-at-Large Chief Business — Women to Have Equal Representation.

By the Jefferson City Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

JEFFERSON CITY, May 2.— Mssouri Democrats will begin converging on Joplin tomorrow for the Democratic State convention, with indications that all available housing facilities will be crammed with Democrats before the convention assembles on Tuesday. The conventon will formally inaugurate the party's 1936 campagn in the State.

Estimates of the attendance vary from 15,000 to 20,000. The latter was made today by James P. Aylward of Kansas City, holder of the triple titles of Democratic National Committeeman, chairman of the Democratic State Committee, and chairman of the Jackson County (Kansas City) Democratic Committee.

Aside from being a Statewide rally of the Democrats the convention likely will be a humdrum affair, with the Pendergast Democratic organization of Kansas City in full control.

None of the fights which regularly have developed in past Democratic conventions is in prospect, except for minor differences over selection of some of the district delegates of the national convention in Philadelphia, in June. The "harmony" which has prevailed in Missouri Democratic politics since 1932 is expected to continue.

Convention's Chief Business.

The principal business of the convention will be the selection of 26 district delegates to the national convention (two from each of the 13 congressional districts); selection of eight delegates at large, each with one half vote; selection of 15 presidential electors, one from each of the 13 districts and two at large; election of a Democratic National Committeeman and National Committeewoman, and adoption of resolutions, which will serve as a preliminary platform for the State campaign.

The 26 district delegates to the national convention will be nominated at district caucuses to be held by State convention delegates from each of the 13 congressional districts on Tuesday morning. These district nominations are subject to approval by the State convention.

Nominations for the district presidential electors also will be made at the district caucuses, and must be ratified by the convention.

Equal Place for Women.

The eight delegates-at-large to the national convention, which begins on June 23, will be elected by the convention. Under the Democratic State Committee call for the State convention, four of the eight delegates-at-large will be men and four will be women. No alternates will be chosen.

The slate for the four men delegates-at-large includes Gov. Guy B. Park, United States Senator Bennett Champ Clark of St. Louis County, who will be the convention keynoter; United States Senator Harry S. Truman of Kansas City and Thomas Van Sant of Fulton, a banker.

More than 20 women have been suggested as candidates for the four places assigned to the women as delegates-at-large. Among those prominently mentioned are Mrs. W. M. Doss of Springfield; Mrs. Margaret Hunt of Columbia; Miss Ann Jablonsky, City Committee woman from the Eighteenth (St. Louis) ward; Mrs. Lula May Barry of Trenton, secretary of the Democratic State Committee, and Mrs. Lawrence McDaniel of St. Louis.

Sam Wear, Springfield attorney, is the probable choice for permanent chairman of the convention.

Aylward to Be Re-elected.

Aylward will be re-elected as Democratic National Committeeman. He recently was elected for the remainder of the term of former National Committeeman W. T. Kemper of Kansas City, expiring with the State conveneion. Kemper resigned from the post.

Mrs. Nat S. Brown of St. Louis is unopposed for Democratic National Committeewoman, to succeed Mrs. Charles B. Faris of St. Louis, who was not a candidate for re-election.

Both national committee posts are for four-year terms, the selections to be made by the State convention.

The official State convention delegate roll totals 3158 delegates. The apportionment of delegates to the counties was on the basis of one delegate for each 250 votes, or major fraction, cast for United States Senator Truman in the 1934 election. However some of the counties elected delegates with a half vote each and other to increase their representation, chose delegates with one-quarter vote each. Hence the delegate total will be materially increased above the original roll.

The resolutions, or platform, largely will be confined to an indorsement of the candidacy of President Roosevelt for renomination, and commendation of the national and State Democratic administrations, with perhaps some chiding of Democratic National leaders not aligned with the present administration. The platform will contain no aggressive declarations which might alienate Republican or independent voters who joined in the Democratic landslide of 1932.

TOWNSEND TO BE WITNESS IN HOUSE HEARING TUESDAY

Founder of Pension Movement to Be Examined on Basis of Other Recent Testimony.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, May 2. — The congressional inquiry into the Townsend old age pension plan will shift to Washington Tuesday, when Dr.. F. E. Townsend, founder of the movement, will appear before a special House Investigating Committee.

Members of a sub-committee who have been holding hearings in California and Michigan will return with new testimony to be used as a basis for questioning the elderly retired Californian who proposed payment of $200 monthly pensions to all persons over 60.

Into the record will be inserted 1,197,539 affidavits from members of 3464 Townsend clubs which Representative Tolan (Dem.), California, said he had received in protest against the investigation. Gavagan (Dem.), New York, and Collins (Rep.), California, conducted the Los Angeles hearings. Hoffman (Rep.), Michigan, investigated Townsend activities in Michigan.

Directors of the Townsend movement, meeting in Baltimore, said their national convention this summer in Kansas would be "the answer of the Townsend clubs and the Townsend Legion to the congressional investigation."

James R. Sullivan, special committee counsel, has indicated recent questioning of Robert E. Clements, co-founder of the organization and former national secretary, was background work for the examination of Dr. Townsend. Bell (Dem.), Missouri, is chairman of the committee.

HARRISON SAYS COMMITTEE WILL ACCEPT TAX BILL

ber of "anybody's brain trust" but a spokesman for the Manufacturers' Association of Connecticut, protested against any new taxes without balancing the budget.

"The present bill," he said, "while it presumes to add some hundreds of millions to the Government's revenue, indicates no intention of balancing the budget."

At this point, Senator Bailey asked if the present tax structure would not bring in enough revenue to balance the budget if business was encouraged to the point of raising the national income to $70,000,000,000.

Bailey said the national income had already risen $17,000,000,000 and said it might not take that much additional rise to bring Federal revenues up to $6,000,000,000 a year. He asked Treasury experts to submit figures on that point.

Another substitute tax proposal came from Stanley A. Sweet, president of Sweet-Orr & Co., New York clothing manufacturers. He asked that taxes be levied on the basis of three-year profits, instead of on the income for a single year.

The undistributed corporate tax on the basis of a single year's operations would be "dangerous and possibly fatal to the average concern," Sweet said, contending that if the law had been in operation in the past his company "would have passed out of existence long ago."

silently as Hope re-enacted details of his story.

He pointed out the table on which he said Mrs. James was tied, led officers to the garden and indicated the place on the lawn where, according to his story, the woman was placed after being taken from the fish pond.

James' fourth wife, Mrs. Winona James, was found dead face down in a bath tub Oct. 14, 1932, at Manitou Springs, Colo. James said then he thought she fainted from the effects of injuries suffered in an automobile accident on Pikes Peak and had fallen into the tub. The Coroner held that death was due to drowning.

NEW AUTOMOBILE WORKERS' UNION INDORSES ROOSEVELT

Takes Action When Reminded It Is in Line With Policy of Lewis Group in A. F. L.

SOUTH BEND, Ind., May 2.—The convention of the newly-formed United Automobile Workers of America, A. F. of L. Union, today indorsed the candidacy of President Roosevelt without a single dissenting voice after voting down two to one an hour before a similar resolution proposed by the Bendix local of South Bend.

The convention reversed itself after Homer W. Martin, new international president, reminded the delegates that Roosevelt was the choice of the committee on industrial Union organization headed by President John L. Lewis of the United Mine Workers and that the Lewis committee had offered to aid the automobile union in organizing the industry. The union was admitted to full membership in the A. F. of L. this week. It has been on probation during a formative period.

The convention voted to launch a $250,000 organization campaign in the industry, to work for a 30-hour week, higher wages, seniority rights and collective bargaining and to oppose piece work and speed-up production. Milwaukee was awarded the 1937 convention.

ADDIS ABABA EASY PREY TO INCENDIARIES

Buildings Flimsy, Water Scarce and Fire Protection All but Nil.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, May 2.—Addis Ababa is what Americans would describe as shanty town. A general fire has been one of the greatest fears of the population. All water, except what little may be obtained from a few wells, must be carried into town from surrounding hills.

In anticipation of such a fire emergency as developed today, the Belgian police directors had huge water barrels kept filled at various points. One old-fashioned pump engine is the sole fire-fighting apparatus.

The American legation is in a more dangerous position than any other legation in a fire. It is less than a mile from Star of Haile Selassie Square—the center of town. Grass-thatched tukul houses which would burn in a few minutes, surround the legation grounds.

These grounds are not large, standing at the top of one of the many hills on which Addis Ababa is built.

In the center is the gray stone legation building—opened only two months ago when Acting Minister Cornelius Van H. Engert's wife, his two little children and a governess arrived in the capital from Egypt. After eight months' separation the Engerts were reunited because they thought all danger was over for this year. A few days later they saw the first Italian plane.

Four naval radio operators, sent by the United States Government to operate its new radio station, the most powerful in Ethiopia, lived with their monkey pets in a barracks behind the legation home.

Vice-Consul William Cramp has been living in a house in the heart of town. Except for the Seventh Day Adventist Hospital, the American missions in the region are a safe distance from the city.

The Sudan Interior Mission, headed by Dr. Tom Lambie, is about five miles to the southwest and the first Presbyterian mission, headed by Dr. John Cremer, of Grand Rapids, Mich., is about five miles to the northwest.

The Seventh Day Adventist Hospital, under Dr. George Bergman, of Los Angeles, is in a hollow between the railroad station and the old palace.

This palace, built by Menelik, consists of several cheap, wooden frame structures which would be an easy prey to fire. A dozen lions and leopards are kept in iron-barred wooden cages at its entrance.

Even in the European section of the town—the central part—nearly all buildings are ramshackle, one-story huts. Surrounding this part of town are several tukul villages. Several monuments and triumphal arches in the capital are actually made of cardboard on wooden frames.

Stone buildings are rare. One is the new palace built by Emperor Haile Selassie.

TREASURY RECEIPTS INCREASE

Deficit $2,637,373,000 for 10 Months.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, May 2.—The Treasury wound up the month of April with receipts still on the increase but with a deficit growing toward three billion dollars.

It had collected during the first 10 months of the fiscal year total revenues of $3,330,624,850, as compared with $3,090,000,000 in the same period last year, and had spent $5,967,997,515, as compared with $5,859,078,116, while the excess of expenditures totaled $2,637,372,665, against $2,768,461,126 last year. With but two months of the fiscal year remaining, the deficit, under latest estimates by Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau, which presuppose charging up the cost of the bonus in that time, is scheduled to grow to $5,966,600,000 by June 30.

LOOTERS FIRE CAPITAL AFTER ETHIOPIAN EMPEROR FLEES

fend Addis Ababa was interpreted in official quarters here to mean the collapse of Ethiopia's armed resistance to Mussolini's campaign.

Authoritative sources said they could neither confirm nor deny a report that the Emperor would be taken to Palestine aboard a British ship.

These same sources said they understood that some of the Emperor's Ministers had accompanied him and the royal family from Addis Ababa.

Looting and Burning.

Armed gangs of disbanded soldiers and bandits were reported pillaging the capital. Many houses were unguarded, for hundreds of the inhabitants had fled to the hills in anticipation of the expected arrival of the Italian soldiers who are on the way up the mountains over the road from Dessye.

Foreigners who took refuge in the British Legation compound heard the shots of rioters in the streets. Fires were reported to have been started.

More than 20 American missionaries now remaining in or near the capital expect to remain at their posts in three hospitals during the Italian entry into the capital.

In event of an aerial bombardment before the Italians enter, the medical missionaries have made elaborate plans to transport their patients to trenches dug in the hospital grounds.

The missionaries, who are reported to comprise the largest class of American residents in the Ethiopian capital, must depend on their own defenses for protection against riots and disorder. The majority of them are quartered nearly 10 miles from the British Legation and they would be forced to pass through native quarters to reach the other side of the city.

Flight by Plane Abandoned.

It is understood that some time ago British officials considered a plan to evacuate its nationals by airplane if need arose. The plan, however, was decided to be impracticable because of the number of British and the fact that the rarified air of Addis Ababa makes the takeoff of airplanes with heavy loads impossible.

The inadequacy of the American Legation's defenses in Addis Ababa has been acknowledged by Engert, American Mininster-Resident.

Besides being in a more dangerous situation on top of a hill on the opposite side of the town from the British Legation, the small dugout is not large enough for any persons except the Legation's own staff.

British sources said if an Italian Government were set up in Addis Ababa, it would be difficult for Great Britain to recognize it officially. With the League of Nations' Council meeting May 11 to reconsider the Italian-Ethiopian situation, it was stated the British Government's position remained unchanged.

Britain's Position.

The official British attitude is a refusal to countenance negotiations outside the covenant of the League. However, it was pointed out that if the departure of the Emperor caused the Italians to arrange peace terms with whatever kind of government may have been left behind, a new British policy must be formulated.

Anthony Eden, Foreign Secretary, conferred with officials in the Foreign Office nearly six hours after Sir Sidney's report reached London.

Ethiopian Cabinet Reported in Flight by Auto.

By the Associated Press.

PARIS, May 2.—The French Legation in Addis Ababa informed its Government tonight that Emperor Haile Selassie's Cabinet Ministers were fleeing southwest from Addis Ababa by automobile. The legation reported that the Ministers were expected to go to Gorai, 60 miles southwest of Addis Ababa. (Gorai should not be confused with Gorrahei, the southern Ethiopian city near Dolo.)

The imperial archives of Ethiopia were loaded in automobiles accompanying the Ministers. French officials said Emperor Haile Selassie would be treated with "the utmost courtesy" at Djibouti if he "chooses to go that far in the train" from Addis Ababa.

The question was raised in Paris tonight whether the Emperor, as Commander-in-Chief of the Ethiopian armies, should be interned, as provided by international law, when he steps on foreign soil, but officials said he would first be considered as chief of state, a status allowing freedom of movement.

The French Government received official reports confirming British Government advices that mobs in Addis Ababa were pillaging, shooting and burning in the streets of the Ethiopian capital.

French sources suggested that the Emperor's sudden decision to quit Addis Ababa resulted from opposition he had encountered in recent conferences with his Ministers, army chiefs and feudal lords. Previously he had been expected to go to Western Ethiopia in an attempt to reunite his army while the rainy season checked the Italian advance.

The French considered their nationals in Addis Ababa were safe under the protection of askaris armed with automatic rifles to defend the French legation. The legation also is surrounded by several lines of barbed wire. Shelters have been prepared in the compound against air bombings. The staff of the legation and employes on the French railroad running to Djibouti were reduced to a minimum 10 days ago. Their families were sent to Diredawa, where they were placed under the protection of a company of Senegalese troops, after which they were to proceed to Djibouti. The rest of the French colony in Addis Ababa, composed chiefly of Somalis, Armenians and Syrians, have left the capital.

MISSOURI SOCIALISTS DON'T WANT TO WIN

In Convention They Draft Platform of Protest Against Present System.

The Socialist party, which has seen numerous well-worn planks of former platforms pilfered during what its leaders refer to as the "seven years of the crises," convened yesterday for a two-day State convention at St. Louis headquarters, 1603 South Jefferson avenue, to draft the 1936 platform and nominate candidates which it knows cannot be elected and which, curiously, leaders say they would not wish to see elected.

The talk was of issues instead of men. The speeches of regulation convention length were forceful denunciation of the social order.

Martin Lechner, secretary of the Socialist State Committee, explained to the 50 delegates, half of them from out-state, that election of State officers with the exception of such candidates as may be nominated for membership in legislative bodies, was not desirable, since public office would make them a part of the capitalistic system of government.

Nevertheless, a State ticket is to be nominated at today's session of the convention, not in the expectancy that the party's lack of success in Missouri will be changed but for the purpose of providing a medium for the registering of a protest vote against the "capitalistic system" represented by the major political parties.

The convention was opened by George Duemler, St. Louis attorney and chairman of the Socialist State Committee. Paul Preisler, instructor in bio-chemistry at Washington University, was named chairman of the convention, and Mrs. Mary Duemler, wife of the State chairman, convention secretary.

Delegates to the national Socialist convention to be held at Cleveland May 23 to 25, selected by a Statewide vote prior to the convention were announced as Barnett Cohen, Robert Saunders, George Kovaki, Duemler and Lechner.

EIGHT HELD IN ALLEGED PLOT TO KILL PREMIER OF SPAIN

Police Say One of Prisoners Confessed Naming Three Others as Instigators.

MADRID, Spain, May 2.—Eight persons alleged to be conspirators in a plot to assassinate Premier Manuel Azana were held incommunicado tonight while police investigated possible ramifications. Police said a "confession" was made by one man implicating three of the men held as the instigators of the plot.

Police said Emiliano Carmelo Ruano, a former member of the Spanish Legion, who made the purported confession, said the plot was started several months ago when Azana was organizing the left parties into the "popular front" which later swept the elections.

Today in the town of Alomarde, province of Granada, an extremist was killed and several others were wounded in a fight with civil guards who were endeavoring to prevent the destruction of a church.

GENERAL NEUTRALITY PROPOSAL BY U. S.

Washington Wants Buenos Aires Conference to Consider Plan Open to All Nations.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, May 2.—Conclusion of a new neutrality convention, open to the signature of all nations, has been proposed by the United States Government for consideration by the forthcoming All-American Peace Conference in Buenos Aires.

A "tariff truce" among the 21 American republics, involving a pledge to create no new trade discriminations, also has been offered by this Government as a subject for the conference agenda.

Announcement of the proposals was made today by the State Department, in making public a list of items which the United States recommended for consideration by the Inter-American parley summoned recently by President Roosevelt with the object of perfecting peace machinery in the Western Hemisphere.

U. S. Rules Proposal.

In addition to the perfection of existing inter-American peace treaties and the possible conclusion of new peace pacts, the United States recommended:

"Conclusion of a convention open to all nations supplementing and clarifying existing rules concerning rights and duties of neutrals with reference to certain classes of trade and commerce; and consideration of steps looking to a more comprehensive restatement of international law pertaining to neutral and belligerent rights and duties."

This was in line with a recent statement by Secretary of State Hull that this Government intended to ask all the other nations of the world to join it in clarifying and implementing existing neutrality safeguards, which, he held, proved so inadequate during the World War.

Agenda Recommendations.

These recommendations also were made for the conference agenda:

Improvement of communications between the American republics, including steamship communication and a Pan-American highway.

Facilitation by Government action of the exchange of teachers and students between the American republics.

Inter-American trade, with emphasis on the creation of a tariff truce among the Americas, study of principals of equality of trade opportunity and consideration of steps looking toward insuring application of those principles.

In transmitting its suggestions the State Department advised the subcommittee that the United States Government might desire to present further proposals.

COUNTY CLERK INDICTED, GIVES BOND FOR $1000

Walter E. Miller Denies Embezzlement and Says That His Accounts Are in Order.

TRUE BILL SPECIFIES $105 AS AMOUNT

Auditors Last Summer Found Accounts Lacking $7000 — Money Later Produced From Cabinet.

County Clerk Walter E. Miller surrendered at the Sheriff's office in Clayton yesterday afternoon and gave bond of $1000 on a charge of embezzling county funds.

The indictment, returned by the St. Louis County grand jury which made its final report to Circuit Judge Julius R. Nolte, alleged Miller, on June 10, 1931, converted to his own use $105 in fees paid him in excess of the amount he was legally allowed to retain. Miller denied any embezzlement and said his accounts were in order.

Witnesses whose names were indorsed on the indictment were Henry P. Ruck, Miller's chief deputy; Eugene P. Lordan, an accountant employed by the firm which conducted an audit of Miller's books, and Clarence Hackmann, an employe of the St. Louis County Bank.

When the auditors, employed by the County Court, checked Miller's bank records last summer they found his accounts lacked about $7000 of the amount he should have had. Miller was absent when the examiners sought to question him, but Ruck told them his superior had about that amount of cash accumulated during the "bank scare" of 1933.

Pending Miller's return, the auditors sealed the safe in the office vault which had been found to contain $1111. The following day Ruck directed them to a filing cabinet in the vault and produced from a drawer currency in $5, $10 and $20 denominations amounting to $7371.

Serial numbers of the bills were listed and Federal Reserve agents were asked to supply the dates on which the various certificates were issued. Of those examined, the auditors reported, only 10 bills for a total amount of less than $100 were found to have been issued before March 5, 1933, when a bank holiday was declared by President Roosevelt. Most of the bills had been issued in 1934 and 1935.

When questioned about 11 checks for a total of $10,282 which records of the State Auditor at Jefferson City showed had been sent to Miller although his records did not show their receipt, the auditors reported Miller said this represented money due him personally for extra work in preparing income tax books for the State from 1927 to 1932. The examiners said they found a record of the receipt of 31 other such checks in Miller's office.

WIDOW PAYS TO COLLECT INSURANCE; DOESN'T GET IT

Stranger, to Whom She Gave $24, Was to Have Returned With $5000 Check April 13.

Mrs. Kathryn Downey, a widow, 1018 Art Hill place, asked police yesterday to find a man to whom she gave $24.25 April 13 when he told her that amount would be required for "fees" in connection with establishing proof of the death of her husband, James Downey, so she might collect the face amount of a $5000 life insurance policy.

Having been told by her husband before his death recently that she would be well provided for, Mrs. Downey said she was not surprised when the stranger, a personable man of 45, called on her and said he was a representative of a company in which her husband had carried a $5000 policy. After the stranger had suggested that he relieve her of the procedure necessary to establish her claim, she gave him the amount he said would be required.

When he did not return April 21 with a check, as he had agreed to do, Mrs. Downey became suspicious and made a report to police. She said she was not familiar with her husband's affairs and did not know what company had written insurance on his life. She was unable to find a company of the name given by the stranger.

WPA SUPERVISOR OUSTED AFTER PART IN ELECTION

Democratic Veteran at St. Joseph Helped Register Hundreds of Men on Relief Jobs.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

ST. JOSEPH, Mo., May 2.—Fred J. McGinnis, former county liquor supervisor, has been reguested to resign as Buchanan County WPA supervisor because of recent political activities, it was learned from a reliable source tonight. Noble R. Aldrich, District Director, would not state whether he had requested the resignation, but did say, "Mr. McGinnis will not be with us after Monday."

McGinnis took a leading part in registering hundreds of WPA workers here for a special county bond election March 24. Republicans charged that the interest of the WPA was not in obtaining the passage of relief and refinancing bond issues at that election but in having all WPA employes registered and eligible to vote in the April 7 city election. In that city election, the Democrats succeeded in electing all of their candidates from Mayor Phil J. Welch down.

McGinnis is a veteran Democratic worker. It is understood he has been receiving $175 a month as WPA supervisor and that no successor will be named.

McGinnis took a leave of absence from the WPA for the city election campaign. He did not return to the WPA office until April 20.

RUBBER SHOES FOR HORSES ADOPTED BY ST. LOUIS POLICE

Equipment Tried Experimentally Five Years Ago on Rear Hoofs Becomes Standard.

Rubber shoes for horses used by St. Louis mounted police, tried experimentally on rear hoofs five years ago, have become standard all-round equipment.

Although rubber horse shoes have been used since 1904, it was only in recent years that their practical value was established, according to Frank McCarthy, horseshoer for the 22 mounts used for traffic work in congested districts. He said they provide a better footing for the horses but more work for him.

Horses must be shod about once a month. Four shoes cost $2.90.

Mrs. Dorothy R. King charged general indignities and desertion. They were married at Kansas City June 6, 1931, and separated last September. By stipulation, Mrs. King was awarded $18 weekly alimony and $150 attorney's fees.

KARPIS WAS TOO SCARED TO TALK WHEN CAPTURED

Federal Agents Took Boastful Gang Leader Without Shot and "No Outside Tips."

By the Associated Press.

ST. PAUL, May 2.—Alvin Karpis, hunted for three years as leader of a gang charged with two major kidnapings, had boasted that he "wouldn't be taken alive." But J. Edgar Hoover said today that, when captured, in New Orleans, last night, without the firing of a shot, Karpis was "so damned scared he couldn't talk." Karpis "shook all over—his voice, his hands and his knees."

Hoover, head of the Federal Bureau of Investigation, who, with eight other Federal agents, brought Karpis here by plane, said today, at Chicago, after leaving here by air for New York:

"Karpis' arrest was brought about entirely by Department of Justice agents. There were no tips from outsiders and no reward will be paid." Rewards totaling $7000 had been offered for apprehension and conviction of the gang leader.

When Karpis would be arraigned and whether he would be tried first for the $200,000 kidnaping of Edward G. Bremer, St. Paul banker, or the seizure of William Hamm Jr., St. Paul brewing company head, who paid $100,000 for his freedom, District Attorney George F. Sullivan was not ready to say. Hamm was kidnaped June 15, 1933, and Bremer Jan. 17, 1934.

Authorities in Washington said the 26-year-old ex-convict faced the prospect of spending the remainder of his life in Alcatraz Island prison if convicted of either the Hamm or Bremer kidnapings. A death penalty might be asked under the Lindbergh law, if the trial should develop that a victim had been injured while held, legal authorities in the capital added.

Demands for His Custody.

At least two other demands for custody of Karpis were indicated. Hoover told reporters Karpis was wanted for three kidnapings, including those of Bremer and Hamm, the killing of a Sheriff, 15 bank robberies, three or four small holdups and complicity in the killing of 'three or four other fellows."

Postal authorities said they would like to try Karpis for the $46,000 mail train robbery at Garrettsville, O., last Nov. 7, if he did not receive a death sentence on some other charge. Fred Hunter, also wanted for the Garrettsville holdup, and a woman, named Ruth, also were captured with Karpis in New Orleans.

At West Plains, Mo., Sheriff Ed Threlkeld of Howell County said he had asked that Karpis be brought there for trial for the killing of Sheriff Roy C. Kelley in December, 1931, but he did not expect his request would be complied with.

Hoover related that agents had been trailing Karpis for two or three days before his capture last night. When definite information was obtained, they surrounded the apartment in which he lived with Hunter and the woman, planning to raid it. But, before they could enter, the three emerged.

"We nabbed them after they had entered their car," Hoover said. There was a rifle in the back seat but Karpis or Hunter didn't have a chance to reach for it. Neither carried pistols."

The capture, he continued, "rings down the curtain on all the principals in the Barker-Karpis mob," charged by the Government with perpetrating both the Hamm and Bremer abductions.

One Member Still at Large.

Karpis' seizure followed by only a few days his indictment for the Hamm kidnaping, and capture of three others as plotters in the crime. The only member of the gang still at large is Harry Campbell, long an associate of Karpis. Asked if Campbell now would succeed to designation as public enemy No. 1, Hoover replied: "We don't give them any rating in the Federal Bureau of Investigation. They are all yellow rats to us. That was proven last night."

Indicted here several days ago for the Hamm kidnaping, along with Karpis and his former partner, Arthur (Doc) Barker, now serving a life term in Alcatraz for the Bremer abduction were: Bryan (Byron) Bolton, in jail here awaiting sentence on his guilty plea in the Bremer case; Elmer Farmer, serving a jail term for the Bremer abduction; John Peifer, St. Paul night club operator; Charles Fitzgerald, Los Angeles, and Edmund C. Bartholmey, former Bensenville, Ill., postmaster. The latter three were arrested in the latest roundup of Hamm suspects, which the Department of Justice termed solution of the case.

When he is removed to the county jail, Karpis will be housed in the same building with Bolton, Fitzgerald and Bartholomey. Peifer is free on bail.

Other former members or associates of the Barker-Karpis gang serving prison terms for the Bremer kidnaping are William Weaver, Harry Sawyer, Cassius McDonald, Harold Alderton, Volney Davis and Oliver Berg. Several members, including Fred and "Ma" Barker, mother of Arthur and Fred, William Harrison and Fred Goetz, have been killed.

Fisherman and Hunter.

Saying Karpis had been under surveillance by Federal agents for two or three days before his capture, Hoover asserted the gangster, "quite a fisherman and hunter," had been in and out of New Orelans.

"Notwithstanding plastic surgery on his face, he was easily recognizable from his photograph" the Federal agent chief said. "He had two scars on his ears, apparently for the purpose of lifting his face, and a cut into the lobe of each ear, but he looks exactly like his picture.

"When we had definite information he was in New Orleans, we surrounded the apartment house in which he lived with Hunter. Within three minutes after their arrest, there were more than a thousand people swarmed around Karpis' car and the apartment house."

Karpis, Hoover said, also had had his finger tips treated in an effort to disguise his fingerprints.

Hunter and the woman taken with Karpis, named as Ruth by the authorities, were held in New Orleans. Authorities planned to return Hunter to Ohio to answer to charges of participating in the Garrettsville robbery.

Hoover said at Chicago today, concerning the "girl named Ruth," captured with Karpis and Hunter, that she was an Arkansas girl. "She has been traveling under several names," Hoover added, "and we do not know with certainty which is the right one." She is said to have posed as Hunter's wife but was not.

Hoover said Karpis' face was lifted by Dr. Joseph B. Moran of Chicago, now missing and supposedly killed by gangsters.

"He (Karpis) told me he paid $350 for the job," Hoover said, "but it wasn't worth 35 cents. We knew him immediately."

Karpis was wearing thin summer apparel when he arrived here in a temperature just above freezing, and was hustled to an armed automobile, surrounded by machine guns, and taken direct to the agents' headquarters in the Federal Building.

In coming here the plane made a short stop at St. Louis for refueling around midnight. The party was tied up at Kansas City from 2 a. m. until 5:30 a. m. by the weather.

Looking for Karpis' Aids.

Federal agents, Hoover said, were making a "diligent search" for persons who aided Karpis in dodging arrest.

"We knew he had been fishing along the Gulf coast for some time," Hoover said. "The case now develops into a search for those who harbored him, including doctors, automobile mechanics and the pilots of several privately owned planes he used in his travels."

Hoover thought Karpis probably would be arraigned Monday on charges of kidnaping Hamm. Hoover, in saying no crimina loccupied the post of "Public Enemy No. 1," remarked, "It's old man politics who always occupied this spot."

He said his department would like to take into custody William Mahan, regarded as the only principal in the George Weyerhaeuser kidnap case now at liberty; Harry Campbell and Thomas H. Robinson Jr., wanted for the kidnaping of Mrs. Berry V. Stoll of Louisville.

Ruth Red Haired, About 20, Known as "Girl in White."

By the Associated Press.

NEW ORLEANS, May 2.—The identity of the red-haired "girl in white" arrested with Alvin Karpis is being guarded by Federal agents — if they know themselves. She is in her early 20's.

Identified only as "Ruth," she is being questioned along with Fred Hunter.

David W. Magee, inspector in charge of the Federal Bureau of Investigation here, said search of the apartment where the three lived yielded "plenty." The apartment was put under guard and even the owner and manager was denied entrance.

Mrs. J. S. Meyer, owner of the apartment, described the diminutive Karpis as "not much more than a boy, so small and delicate looking" and so kind to his "wife"

MRS. PUHSE DIES IN ILLINOIS PRISON

Granite City Woman Planned Murder of Husband—Her Admirer Executed.

By the Associated Press.

DWIGHT, Ill., May 2.—Mrs. Gertrude Puhse of Granite City, serving 99 years for complicity in the murder of her husband, Charles W. Puhse, died at the women's prison last night of cancer. She was 45 years old.

Her daughter and son, Mildred, 23, and Earl, 21, who were at the bedside, said they would take the body to Granite City for burial.

Mrs. Puhse and her admirer, Thomas J. Lehne, former Venice policeman, were sentenced to death by a jury for the murder of Puhse, 47-year-old steel worker, who was shot to death as he slept on Jan. 26, 1934. Her sentence was commuted to imprisonment two days before the execution date. Lehne died in the electric chair at Chester penitentiary April 23, 1935, after stating that he preferred death to long imprisonment.

A Coroner's verdict of suicide was returned in Puhse's death on his wife's statement that he choked her and fired a shot at her before turning a revolver on himself. Police, learning that Lehne, a widower, and Mrs. Puhse had been intimate, questioned them and reported that the pair confessed plotting to get Puhse out of the way. Mrs. Puhse confessed that she left the door to her home unlatched, the night of the murder, so that Lehne could enter and obtained her husband's revolver for Lehne. The latter told police he shot Puhse and then fired a shot through the wall to bolster Mrs. Puhse's story, prepared in advance, that her husband tried to kill her before he shot himself. Lehne repudiated his confession at the trial, contending the statement was obtained under duress.

MAN, SHOT BY BARTENDER IN THIRD STREET TAVERN, DIES

John T. Pascheluk Ordered Held for Coroner After Death of John T. Miller.

John T. Miller 41-year-old laborer, who was shot in the abdomen last Tuesday by John T. Pasheluk, bartender at a tavern at 1424 South Third street, following a quarrel, died yesterday at City Hospital.

Pasheluk, who was rearrested at his quarters in the rear of the saloon and ordered held for the Coroner, told police at the time that the quarrel grew out of an argument which his wife, Mary, had had with Miller and two other men a few nights before the shooting over selling beer on credit. Pasheluk said he had been warned that Miller was "going to get" him.

According to witnesses, Miller was coming down the stairs from his room at 1426A South Third street when Pasheluk went out into the yard and told him to stop. Pasheluk said he fired one shot at Miller with a .38 caliber revolver after Miller kept coming toward him in a menacing manner. At the hospital after the shooting Miller said that Pasheluk shot at him without provocation.

BOY SEEKING JOB WITH SNAKES HIKES, ST. LOUIS TO CHICAGO

Jerome Leonhardt, 13, Says Parents and Teachers Frowned on His Hobby.

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, May 2.—Thirst for knowledge about snakes brought Jerome Leonhardt, 13 years old, of 7128 Drury lane, St. Louis, to Chicago tonight on foot. Park Policeman Thomas Carey found him hiking wearily under the weight of two knapsacks and a canteen.

The officer said Jerome told him he left home because neither his teachers in Maplewood Junior High School nor his parents showed any enthusiasm about his desire to collect and study snakes.

The boy said he was planning to see some big snake men here, and, if they couldn't give him a job with snakes he was going to New York.

"I have caught dozens and dozens of snakes found around St. Louis," Jerome told Policewoman Dorothy Tedell later. "Plenty of rattlesnakes and copperheads. I got the only cottonmouth water moccasin ever found near St. Louis. This fellow was so good-natured I let him lie on my bare stomach and after crawling around he rolled up and went to sleep. But one day my mother found him in one of my dresser drawers. She killed him with a broom."

Mrs. Tedell took Jerome to the Travelers' Aid Society, where he will stay until arrangements have been made with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Carl Leonhardt, for his return.

He ordere them to get behind the counter and then took the money, which was insured, from the cash register. He fled on foot.

A TOUCH OF ENGLAND COST ENGLISHMAN $15

Smooth Talker About Big Order Nicks A. Cyril Daldy on Bad Check.

The elaborate plan of an imposing stranger to swindle A. Cyril Daldy, proprietor of the Georgian House, 4942 Maryland avenue, specialist in Georgian and Sheffield silver, resulted last week in the net loss to Daldy of $15 and the price of a lunch.

To thus enrich himself, the swindler, apparently an English gentleman from tweed to twang, spent two days convincing Daldy, also a Britisher, that he was a high-salaried motion picture company executive and connoisseur of antique silver objects of art.

He introduced himself as P. J. McCready of Hollywood last Monday in Daldy's shop. He spoke glibly of old England, the motion picture industry, silver, and important screen personages. He would like to order six George IV goblets for his old actress friend, Helen Hayes, who wanted them for her husband, Charles MacArthur, who had admired some of them in the McCready mansion in California. Three or four thousand dollars? Right-o.

Tuesday noon after a luncheon engagement, Daldy and his guest returned to the shop where a pair of early Georgian fruit plates, rather rare, caught his fancy. At $250 they were a bargain, he declared, and, by Jove, he'd take them, and let Daldy know when to deliver them as soon as he took possession of a furnished Kingshighway apartment he had rented nearby. He pressed a check for $1750 as part payment for the purchases, on Daldy, but recalled suddenly as he was leaving, that he was a little short of cigarette money.

Would Mr. Daldy mind cashing a small check for $15? Mr. Daldy did not mind, and with the $15, the affable customer walked out of the door and has not returned. Both checks, drawn on a downtown bank, were rejected because McReady had no account.

CONTRACTOR FOUND HANGED FROM RAFTER IN HIS GARAGE

Theodore Albrecht, 52, Had Spent Morning Putting Up Screens at Home.

The body of Theodore Albrecht, 52 years old, a contractor, was found at noon yesterday hanging from a rafter in the garage at his home, 4169 Tyrolean avenue. His wife, Lena, found the body after she had missed him.

Police reported he had apparently stood on an automobile bumper, tied a clothes line around his neck and attached it to a rafter, and had then stepped off the bumper. Mrs. Albrecht said she knew of no reason for his action. He had spent the morning putting up window screens. Two grown children also survive.

STEIWER URGES RESTORING SANITY TO GOVERNMENT

G. O. P. Keynoter in Long Island Speech Assails "Incompetence" of New Deal "Manipulators."

By the Associated Press.

JAMAICA, Long Island, May 2.—The Republican choice for convention keynoter—Senator Steiwer of Oregon—tonight called the New Deal "contradiction confounded with confusion" and said "we will unfetter the American economic system."

Speaking before the Queens County Republican Club, Steiwer criticised economic policies of the administration and made repeated references to the remarks last Saturday night by President Roosevelt in New York.

"There is only one conclusion," he said, "and that is that the untrained and immature manipulators of the New Deal administration are not competent to administer the governmental affairs of the American people."

Steiwer, attacking New Deal spending, declared "in various parts of this country substantial sums of this money are being diverted to go into the pockets of politicians who are loyal to the New Deal."

"You can't beat a man with five billion dollars to spend," he said in discussing prospects of a Republican victory in the coming campaign.

He added: "But I agree with Gen. (Hugh) Johnson that five billion dollars can defeat the man."

Citing the State of Maine as an example, he said that money sent there for flood relief, for which the administration sought to take credit, came out of gasoline tax receipts to which the State would have been entitled in any event.

"There is an attempt being made," he said, "to bribe the people of Maine with their own money to support the New Deal."

"Most numerous remedies will be suggested," he asserted. "A budget balance is imperatively needed, but equally important is restoration of sanity in Government. The American people have a right to expect a sense of responsibility in all governmental officials.

"We must go back to the civil service. We will go forward to a new understanding of our practical problems, and, if I estimate correctly the temper of the American people, we will establish in this nation, Government by law in lieu of the present system of personal Government, based on executive discretion."

He said the New Deal "has degenerated from bad administration of the NRA to bad thinking with respect to present economic objectives."

Steiwer recalled the words of the President that "wages ought to and must go up with prices" and replied that "while wages were increasing 8 per cent the cost of living has increased approximately 20 per cent."

"The President coupled higher wages for workers with more income for farmers," the Oregon Senator said. "Both are desirable, but the increased income for farmers, if accomplished by a program of scarcity or by a processing tax, means higher living costs for the consumer and a decrease in real wages for those who work in the cities.

"The crowning glory of the President's philosophy as quoted in his declaration for lower taxes. How can there be a hope for lower taxes when we confront a steadily mounting cost of government?

"We will not repudiate the destitute nor starve those who are in need but we must courageously take our position that public money voted for relief of the destitute will be employed to feed hungry mouths and not to feed hungry political manipulators working under the direction of Mr. Farley."

SUPREME COURT OUSTS UTILITY AT CAMPBELL, MO.

Holds Arkansas-Missouri Power Co. Has No Right to Operate After Expiration of Franchise.

By the Jefferson City Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

JEFFERSON CITY, May 2.—Ouster of the Arkansas-Missouri Power Co. from Campbell, Mo., where the company has been operating, without a franchise, in competition with a municipally-owned electric light and power plant, was ordered by the Missouri Supreme Court en banc today in a suit filed by Attorney-General McKittrick at the instance of the City of Campbell.

The Court held the company had been unlawfully using the streets and alleys of Campbell since expiration of a 20-year franchise on Jan. 5, 1935.

The company was allowed six months in which to remove its poles, lines and other equipment. The Court retained jurisdiction to issue any further orders that may be deemed necesssary.

Second Ouster in Nine Days.

This was the second utility ouster ordered by the Court in nine days based on expiration of franchises and refusal of the towns affected to renew the grants. The Court last April 23 ordered ouster of the Missouri Utilities Co. from California, Mo. That company had been operating in California for seven years without a franchise, and had been competing for more than a year with a municipal electric plant.

The Arkansas-Missouri Power Co., which has its home office in Blytheville, Ark., operates electric properties in about 30 Missouri towns, principally in Southeast Missouri. After the company's franchise in Campbell, originally issued for 20 years, expired on Jan. 5, 1935, the company announced it would continue to operate, despite refusal of the city to renew the franchise and instructions from the Board of Aldermen to the company to vacate the streets.

Reasoning of Court.

Judge E. M. Tipton, who wrote the opinion, overruled company contentions that the quo warranto proceeding was not properly filed, and that the city was without legal authority to maintain the action. The company contended the ouster proceeding actually was instituted at the behest of the firm of Fairbanks, Morse & Co. of Illinois. This firm specializes in furnishing equipment for municipally-owned water and electric plants. The Court did not discuss this allegation in the opinion.

"Consent of a municipality is a condition precedent to the right to use the streets and alleys of said municipality in operating a private electric plant and its distribution system," Judge Tipton said, in overruling the company's contention it had a right to continue operation in Campbell.

"In granting such a franchise the municipality acts as the agent of the State," the Judge said, "and it may grant a franchise for a term not to exceed 20 years, or refuse the franchise, and it may refuse to renew or extend the franchise. Without the consent of the municipality no right exists to operate an electric plant therein; and without such consent no right to so operate the plant exists after the termination of the franchise unless the municipality does some act that would stop it from asserting that such right does not exist. There is nothing in the Public Service Act of 1913 that in any way dispenses with such consent."

Other Rulings Cited.

The opinion cited with approval previous rulings of the Missouri Supreme Court that the certificate of convenience and necessity issued by the Public Service Commission to utilities does not have the effect of a franchise and that issuance of such a certificate by the commission is dependent on the consent of the municipality in which the utility proposes to operate.

Judge Tipton overruled a company assertion that the city was estopped from maintaining the ouster proceeding.

"The mere fact that the respondent (the company) was permitted to operate from the date the franchise expired until its contract with the relator (the city) for street lighting expired on May 12, 1935, would not alter the situation," he said. "The fact that a utility continued to serve a municipality after its franchise expired would not, in itself, give the utility any renewal rights."

The municipally-owned electric plant in Campbell was placed in operation on Oct. 2, 1934. The evidence showed the municipal plant is serving about 300 customers in the town and the company is serving about 20.

E. I. BENNETT, CHARGED WITH WIFE MURDER, OUT ON BOND

Coroner Returned Accident in Case of East St. Louis Man; Prosecutor Obtained Warrant.

Ernest I. Bennett, East St. Louis restaurant manager charged with the murder of his wife, Mrs. Margarete Bennett, who was shot to death early Wednesday at their home, 555 North Twenty-first street, was released yesterday on a $10,000 bond.

A Coroner's verdict of accident was returned Thursday but Assistant State's Attorney Wendell J. Phillips obtained a murder warrant. Bennett, who contended his wife was shot accidentally as they struggled for a revolver during an argument about her alleged association with another man, waived a preliminary hearing. His attorney, Charles L. Cray, obtained his release on a writ of habeas corpus granted by City Judge Ralph Cook. A City Court grand jury will consider the case when it convenes May 11.

Bennett's bond was signed by his mother, Mrs. Clara Bennett, owner of the restaurant he managed at 301 South Tenth street, and James S. Ledbetter, a grocer. Mrs. Bennett attended the funeral of her daughter-in-law Friday with the two Bennett children, Dolores, 17, and Howard, 12. Their father, then a prisoner in the city jail, did no seek permission to attend.

LOUIS C. WALDMAN SEEKS NOMINATION FOR SHERIFF

Commissioner of Weights and Measures Files for Post in Democratic Primary.

Louis G. Waldman, Commissioner of Weights and Measures by appointment of Mayor Dickmann, filed his candidacy yesterday for the Democratic nomination for Sheriff.

While some politicians have thought that Waldman might make the race with the Mayor's backing, he has not claimed the support of Dickmann and the Mayor has refrained from announcing that he is backing any candidates so far. The only other candidate who has filed for the Democratic nomination for Sheriff is James J. Fitzsimmons, now Chief Deputy Sheriff of the criminal division and Eighth Ward Democratic Committeeman. Many members of the committee, including leaders of the opposition to Dickmann, have indorsed Fitzsimmons' candidacy.

Waldman, who resides at 6028 Cates avenue, was president of a war veterans' group which supported Dickmann for Mayor in 1933 and he was in charge of the St. Louis office of Russell L. Dearmont, a candidate for the Democratic nomination for Governor in 1932, who carried St. Louis. In 1930 Waldman ran for Circuit Clerk at the request of a citizens' committee. He was in the army overseas eight months during the World War and has been active in the American Legion and Society of the 40 and 8.

DUCKS FORCED DOWN ON TOWN IN STORM, 4000 ARE KILLED

Unusual Incident Last Fall Described in Journal of Minnesota Ornithology.

ST. CLOUD, Minn., May 2.—The killing of 4000 ducks in one northern community last fall was described today in the first issue of the Journal of Minnesota Ornithology.

Thief River Falls in Northwestern Minnesota was the scene according to the article by Dr. Thomas S. Roberts, director of the Minnesota Museum of Natural History, Minneapolis, who attributed the slaughter to weather conditions.

Dr. Roberts, whose ornithological studies have earned wide attention, relates that two warm days drew the duck flight from the North full strength. Then on Oct. 30, snow and sleet beat the birds to the earth.

"The migrating ducks caught the reflection of the city lights in the sky, his narrative stated, "and the air was full of quacks and crashes as the birds struck the ground and were killed or crippled.

"Hay-fields near the city were covered with a smooth layer of snow and the flocks crashed down into them, perhaps because they looked like lakes."

When residents awoke the next morning, the account continued, ducks cluttered the streets and lawns.

RUN-OFF ELECTION IN FRANCE TODAY

Voting Will Determine Complexion of Next Chamber of Deputies.

By the Associated Press.

PARIS, May 2.—The flow of gold from France has injected a new element into the French political situation which will be crystallized tomorrow in the run-off election for the Chamber of Deputies.

Bankers said anxiety was already shown in the steady flow of gold abroad from the Bank of France. French hoarders have ceased buying gold because of fear the metal might be requisitioned. The amount of gold withdrawn from the bank in the last five weeks was $247,358,000.

The stock market recovered from a sharp break early in the week, but financial writers continued to write of possible monetary dangers including the possibility that the franc would be devaluated.

After showing a decided trend toward the left in the balloting of last Sunday, the voting tomorrow will determine definitely the composition of the next Chamber of Deputies. Traditionally, the complexion of the Government is based on the political composition of the Chamber of Deputies.

Leaders of the "Popular Front," made up of Communists, Socialists, and radical-Socialists, say they are confident of victory. This coalition is opposed by the "National Front" made up of Rightists.

The official figures on the election: Total registered voters, 11,927,852; number of voters on the first ballot, 10,054,749; absentees, 15.7 per cent as compared to 16.6 per cent in 1932; candidates running on the first ballot, 4817; candidates running on the second ballot, 4947.

FIRST BOLIVIAN PRISONERS OF WAR LEAVE PARAGUAY

Five Hundred of 16,500 Held Depart From Asuncion by Way of Argentina.

By the Associated Press.

BUENOS AIRES, May 2.—Fighting men, who lost their freedom in the long "War of the Chaco" between Paraguay and Bolivia, started for their homelands tonight. They were the first detachments in the some 20,000 prisoners of war held by the two nations.

About 500 enlisted men and 20 officers of the Bolivian army left Asuncion by a river boat to go to Bolivia. The 500 were the first of the 16,500 Bolivian soldiers who have been held in Paraguay. A similar detachment of Paraguayans, held in Bolivia, will start from the northern country as soon as railroad facilities are available.

The war weary men, some of whom have been in custody as long as three years, are being repatriated under the Bolivian-Paraguayan accord reached Jan. 21 with the help of the six neutrals, Argentina, Brazil, Chile, Peru, the United States and Uruguay. Special trains of the Argentine State Railways are being used in transporting the Bolivian prisoners from Paraguay through Argentine territory to the frontier.

Among the Bolivians now returning to their homeland, are enough officers to lead an entire army. Paraguayan figures showed three Bolivian colonels in encampments, as well as 15 lieutenant-colonels, 23 majors, 32 captains, 45 lieutenants, 240 sub-lieutenants, 33 cadet officers and 12 sub-officers.

Both Bolivian and Paraguay, through the peace conference commission on prisoners, paid for the maintenance of their respective nationals in enemy camps. The resultant "clearing house" transaction gave Paraguay the equivalent of $1,500,000 in cash.

By the Associated Press.

JEFFERSON CITY, May 2.—Thomas Tierney, 17-year-old senior of Roosevelt High School, St. Louis, won the American Legion-sponsored State interscholastic oratorical championship here tonight. He spoke on, "Our Constitution, Yesterday and Today."

It was the second major contest won by Tierney this year. On March 16, he won the oratorical contest sponsored by Washington University, with the subject, "Youth's Opportunities."

Charles Brown of Springfield was second, Miss Wanita Underbrink of Lewistown was third, and Carl Kenage of Raytown was fourth. All spoke on the Constitution. The four places carried cash awards of $100, $75, $50 and $25.

The judges were Federal Judge Albert L. Reeves of Kansas City, Federal Judge C. B. Davis of St. Louis, Supreme Court Judges Ernest S. Gantt and William F. Frank, Dr. F. L. McCluer, president of Westminster College, Fulton, and Dean Frank L. Martin of the Missouri School of Journalism.

JUST MISSES GREETING SON SHE HADN'T SEEN IN 40 YEARS

Kentucky Mother Arriving at Tennessee Farm, Is Told "He Died Two Hours Ago."

By the Associated Press.

GAINSBORO, Tenn., May 2.—Mrs. Nancy Jane Alexander was denied by two hours today the reunion she had planned with the son she hadn't seen in 40 years.

James Pryor was a lad when his mother and father separated. It was agreed the boy should stay with his father. His mother moved to Hendersonville, Ky. After a divorce she became Mrs. Alexander.

James' father died and he lost word of his mother. Last January Mrs. Alexander, 63 years old, advertised for her son in a weekly newspaper.

Pryor, 47, saw it and communicated with her. Mrs. Alexander planned an immediate visit to her son, but became ill. Today she arrived at the farm home of James.

"Is this James Pryor's place?" she asked. "Is he here?"

"Well—no," was the reply. "You see, he died two hours ago—pneumonia."

BORAH MOVE LOSES IN UTAH

G. O. P. Delegates Going to Cleveland Uninstructed.

By the Associated Press.

OGDEN, Utah, May 2.—Utah Republicans, rejecting an attempt to pledge the State's national convention delegates to Senator Borah for presidential nominee, voted today to send an uninstructed group of eight.

The resolutions committee had recommended to the State convention that the delegation go uninstructed, when James Devine, former State Prison Warden, made the move for a Borah-pledged group. Former Secretary of Agriculture Arthur M. Hyde spoke, saying the issues were "free economics versus collectivism; liberty versus dictatorship."

PAROLED CONVICTS' FRAUD PLOT NIPPED

Two Admit Scheme to Buy Merchandise in Name of State, Resell It.

Two paroled convicts, who figured out while they were in prison that one way to get along in the world would be to buy merchandise in the name of the State purchasing agent and then resell it, were reflecting on the fallacy of that idea yesterday in cells at Police Headquarters as police looked into the status of their paroles.

Groundwork for the scheme had been laid Friday when detectives arrested Fred Behnning, 46 years old, and Lee Hodges, 42, but there had been no purchases, and no chance to resell anything.

Behnning and Hodges were picked up at Third and Olive streets on suspicion. When detectives went to their room in a hotel at 4044 Delmar boulevard as a matter of routine investigation, they found a rubber stamp with the inscription: "Approved, George C. Johnson." Johnson is the State purchasing agent.

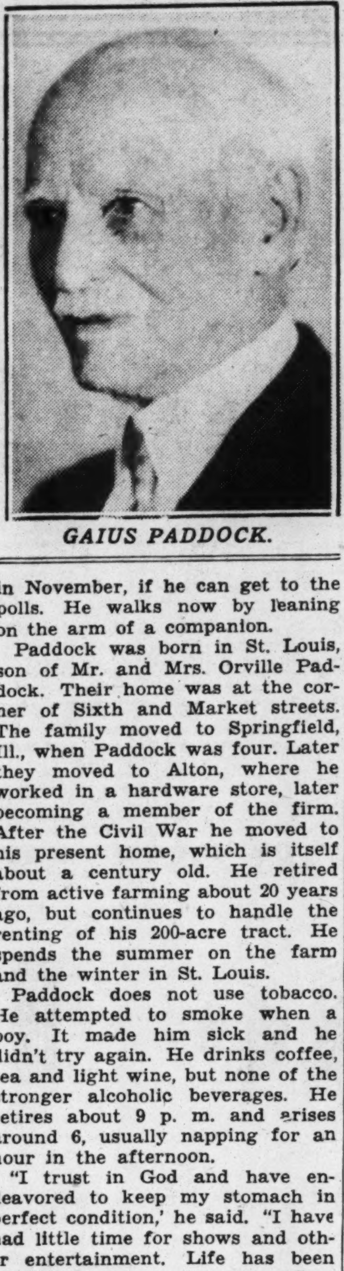
Behnning and Hodges, police said, readily told of their scheme when asked about the stamp. They were having another stamp made, they said, with the inscription: "State Purchasing Agent," and planned to fit the stamps together so that their orders would appear official.

Genuine bills of lading, bearing Johnson's signature, which Behnning and Hodges intended to copy, and business forms with the letterhead of a fictitious firm through which they planned to operate were also found in the room. The fake firm's letterhead described it as "dealers in uniform cloth for institutions." The address given for the firm was that of the hotel, and the letterhead stated that it had branches in "New York, Chicago and Cincinnati."

Behnning was released from the penitentiary about two weeks ago after serving part of a two-year term for robbery at Springfield, Mo. Hodges was released last March after serving part of a two-year term for tampering with an automobile at Neosho, Mo.

Gaius Paddock Gets Ready To Mark 100th Birthday

Expects May 14 to Be Just Another Day—Still Supervises Farm and Is Making Unfriendly Study of New Deal.



GAIUS PADDOCK.

Gaius Paddock, who returned to his country home 10 miles north of Edwardsville last week after spending the winter with members of his family in a St. Louis apartment, is dividing his time among supervision of his large farm, an unfriendly study of New Deal policies and preparations for the observance of his one-hundredth birthday on Thursday, May 14.

Of those three major interests, he enters into political discussions with the greatest zest. Poor circulation in the ankles, a recent affliction, makes it difficult for him to give the personal supervision to the farm that he did until a year or so ago.

The one-hundredth birthday will be just another day, except that relatives, neighbors and friends will be dropping in. They do that almost every Sunday anyway. His chief interest in the anniversary is to know whether it will feel any different to enter the second century of life. He's been curious about that since he passed the 90 mark and promised himself to go on to a hundred.

But politics, especially as concerns the New Deal, is something that really gives a person something to live for, Paddock tells his friends. He wants to see what happens to the New Deal and how its successor is going to come out. He reads a lot, with the aid of glasses, remembers virtually everything he reads, and passes judgment with a mind as clear as it ever was.

Always a Republican of the Hoover-Knox conservative type, Paddock voted against the New Deal four years ago "on general principles," although the two daughters with whom he lives, ardent proponents of prohibition repeal, supported Roosevelt. He will vote against Roosevelt again in November, if he can get to the polls. He walks now by leaning on the arm of a companion.

Paddock was born in St. Louis, son of Mr. and Mrs. Orville Paddock. Their home was at the corner of Sixth and Market streets. The family moved to Springfield, Ill., when Paddock was four. Later they moved to Alton, where he worked in a hardware store, later becoming a member of the firm. After the Civil War he moved to his present home, which is itself about a century old. He retired from active farming about 20 years ago, but continues to handle the renting of his 200-acre tract. He spends the summer on the farm and the winter in St. Louis.

Paddock does not use tobacco. He attempted to smoke when a boy. It made him sick and he didn't try again. He drinks coffee, tea and light wine, but none of the stronger alcoholic beverages. He retires about 9 p. m. and arises around 6, usually napping for an hour in the afternoon.

"I trust in God and have endeavored to keep my stomach in perfect condition,' he said. "I have had little time for shows and other entertainment. Life has been too short to waste it that way."

GRAND JURY SAYS SHERIFF IGNORES COUNTY GAMBLING

"Rapacious Cliques" Profit Millions It Declares — Suggests Further Inquiry Into "Laxity."

The office of Sheriff Philip G. Deuser, "chief policing agency of St. Louis County," has been "apparently indifferent to certain widespread slot machine rings and numerous bookmakers that have taken hold in the county," the grand jury declared in its final report yesterday to Circuit Judge Julius R. Nolte.

"These rapacious cliques," the report went on, profit annually in the sum of millions of dollars and this illegal profit that pours into their pockets comes not only from the gullible adult but is often the lunch money of school children.

None of these types of law violators can nor would they seek to exist if this county were properly policed. Owing to the laxity in the effort to eliminate these evils, we suggest that the next grand jury continue in the investigation of the Sheriff's office to determine, if possible, if there is an alliance between the police agencies of the county and these operators."

Comment by Sheriff.

Commenting on the report, Sheriff Deuser said to a Post-Dispatch reporter that he had no control over township and municipal policing agencies, but that in his vault he was holding 106 gambling devices, mostly slot machines, seized by his men in raids in less than a year. Facts about all these devices had been presented to grand juries but only nine indictments were returned, he declared.

In addition, he said, he confiscated eight slot machines and 80 pinball machines recently but only one indictment resulted, and he had confiscated six slot machines at a Democratic dance at Lambert- St. Louis Field and seven others at a picnic, but there were no indictments in those cases. Last July and in September, 1934, he added, he destroyed 139 additional slot machines under court orders.

Deputy Sheriffs in a series of raids in the county April 22 confiscated numerous slot machines and kindred devices, but made no arrests, in the most extensive activity of the sort for some time. Previously, April 16, deputies of the Jefferson Township Constable, acting at the request of Prosecuting Attorney C. Arthur Anderson, confiscated machines at 17 establishments.

Maplewood 'Poorly Policed.'

As to municipalities, the grand jury said: "We find Maplewood poorly policed. We further find that with the full knowledge of the Mayor (John Fels) there have been retained in the Police Department tavern owners and an ex-convict. Another municipality presents the incongruous situation of having an Excise Commissioner whose business is selling vending machines to the various taverns which he is supposed to regulate, with the net result that all of the taverns in that municipality go wholly unregulated."

Mayor Fels was in the country over Sunday. Joseph Kavanaugh, Police Commissioner in the Maplewood City Council and a Democratic candidate for Sheriff, and Chief of Police Edwin A. Stegeman denied, to a Post-Dispatch reporter, that the force of 10 policemen included an ex-convict or tavern owners. One policeman, now 31 years old and on the force for 10 years, got into some difficulty in connection with a holdup when he was 16 but was not charged with a crime, they said. They said they knew of no reason for the charge of poor policing.

The town of the Excise Commissioner discussed was not named in the report. Excise Commissioner Charles Powell of Clayton sells vending machines.

The grand jury declared the County Court, or administrative body, kept wholly inadequate records of proceedings; seldom, if ever, used its power to supena persons for inquires; failed to docket certain matters for regular attention; failed to indicate that reports of fee officers were ever examined, and failed to make an effort to rectify the situation of frequent provision of surety bonds for public officials by the same persons. Such bonds, it was added, sometimes were of questionable value to the county.

Failed to File Single Suit.

Excessive fees and salaries drawn by some county officers could be recovered if the County Counselor (John E. Mooney) would institute suits, the grand jury asserted, "but he has failed to file a single suit on behalf of the county during his entire tenure of office and he has tried two cases in the Circuit Court, both of which were lost."

The Courthouse, at Clayton, was "old, dirty, ill-kept and inadequate," said the report, but "we believe it to be unsound to even plan a new courthouse until after the county government has been reorganized and its solvency fully restored."

Handling of pauper and indigent insane matters by the county was criticised by the grand jury as extremely costly and establishment of a County Welfare Board for this work was recommended. As to collection of delinquent school loan funds, the report declared, "The County Counselor, who is chargeable with a definite part in the collection of these funds, has taken no constructive action whatsoever towards their collection."

Imperfect System of Books.

An accountants' report showed an imperfect system of books and records had been kept by the County Collector (Willis W. Benson) but a system partially in line with the auditor's recommendation has been installed. With a proper effort by the Collector a large part of the $4,000,000 in taxes delinquent in the county could be collected, to help reduce the county deficit, the report insisted.

An auditor found that the method of the Public Administrator in keeping books and handling funds was "open to much criticism," the grand jury said.

"In view of the fact that there should be a further investigation of the County Court and the Sheriff's office," the report concluded, "we respectfully recommend that the next grand jury should be selected in some maner to free it from any suggestion of political control." The grand jury making this proposal was itself chosen by elisors appointed by Circuit Court, rather than by the usual selection by the Sheriff of County Court.

Meeting 43 days, the grand jury heard 226 witnesses, returned 59 indictments and voted two no-true bills.

THREE COUNTY TOWNS WIN HIGH MUSIC WEEK RATINGS

By the Associated Press.

COLUMBIA, Mo., May 2.—Joplin High School came through Missouri University's spring music festival today with an excellent-plus score in the orchestra event, Springfield made the same ratings on her band and orchestra, and Webster Groves High rated excellent in band and orchestra contests. The contests ended the three-day festival in which 4000 pupils from 150 schools participated.

Rating good in soprano solo was Eileen Stertz, Maplewood. Ray Grass, Normandy, rated superior in a baritone solo. Normandy girls' quartet rated excellent and Webster Groves good.

Webster Groves' mixed quartet rated superior. Also Webster Groves, madrigal, superior, and double quartet superior.

In the piano contests Arch Spradling, Webster Groves, rated superior; wood wind ensemble, Webster Groves, superior; brass ensemble, Webster Groves, excellent, and string ensemble, Webster Groves, good.

Unionville won the State high school typing contest in the interscholastic week program, taking both first and second year awards.

Ex-Lawyers' Plea Sent to Bar.

By the Associated Press.

JEFFERSON CITY, May 2.—Applications for reinstatement of Roy A. Jones and Max D. Abert, both of Warrensburg, who surrendered their licenses to practice law last December, were referred by the State Supreme Court today to Boyle G. Clark, Columbia, general chairman of the State Bar Committee. Jones and Aber resigned with four others after a special grand jury investigated suits in which an aged Johnson County farmer allegedly paid $40,000 in settlements and fees.

REPORTS KATTELMAN TRIED TO COMPROMISE FOR $10,000

Trustee Tells of Offer of Bankrupt in Jail for Failing to Turn Over Assets.

Harold J. Kattelman, bankrupt stock and bond broker, who has been in jail since last Jan. 15 for contempt of court in failing to turn over $39,205 cash assets and certain stocks and records to William S. Madden, receiver, recently made a compromise offer of between $10,000 and $15,000 in place of the assets and to release himself of the contempt sentence.

Morris J. Levin, trustee in bankruptcy for the H. J. Kattelman Co., said yesterday that the offer "was suggested" by an intermediary for Kattelman to him, but after conferring with Madden, he informed the intermediary that the offer could not be accepted and the court order would have to be complied with as it stood. Federal George George H. Moore sentenced Kattelman to jail until he complied with the court's instructions to deliver the assets of the company to the receiver.

The intermediary, Levin said, informed him that Kattleman believed he could raise $10,000 or $15,000 in loans from relatives. Kattelman is in the Pike County jail at Bowling Green, Mo.

The order with which Kattelman did not comply was made last Nov. 23, after a hearing held to discover the assets of the firm.

Kattelman also has been cited for contempt in refusing to file schedules of assets and liabilities as a bankrupt. He is under State charges of embezzlement and operation of a bucket shop, and a Federal charge of income tax evasion.

A CAPPELLA CHOIR IN ANNUAL CONCERT

Appreciative Audience Hears Performance Directed by William B. Heyne.

By THOMAS B. SHERMAN.

The St. Louis A Cappella Choir gave its annual concert last night at the Municipal Auditorium before a large and seemingly appreciative audience. The concert was directed by William B. Heyne, whose work with this organization and with the St. Louis Symphony Society chorus has contributed so much to the development of choral music in this community.

The program was an ambitious one, starting with Palestrina and ranging through the works of Sebastian Bach, William Byrd, Glinka and such contemporary—and contrasting — composers as Sergei Rachmaninof and F. Melius Christiansen.

Since the discipline and musicianship of a chorus such as this depends upon the volunteer efforts of men and women who have other professions, one is always prepared to extend it a certain indulgence, particularly if it does not always achieve a maximum mechanical perfection. But no great indulgence was necessary last night. In the more involved and rapid contrapuntal passages of a Bach motet a greater flexibility would have been helpful but the understanding and feeling for the music was so prevalent that such matters became relatively unimportant.

The unity, precision and sentient quality of the ensemble was always good, but particularly so in slow moving where subtle differentiations of volume did much to intestify the expression. All in all it was a performance that reflected great credit on the diligence of the individual members and the devoted musical scholarship of Mr. Heyne.

GEN. PERSHING VISITS HIS OLD HOME TOWN

No Better Form of Government Than U. S., He Says at School Ceremony.

By the Associated Press.

LACLEDE, Mo., May 2.—Gen. John J. Pershing, commander in chief of American Expeditionary Forces in the World War, gave warning against "insidious propaganda that there are better forms of government than that of the United States," in an address today at the laying of the cornerstone for a school building in his old home town.

"Education should not be limited to recital of ordinary branches of instruction," Pershing said. "Courses of instruction in all grades should teach obligations as citizens. We need as never before to instruct the people in their duty to this country and to themselves.

"People are inclined to listen to insidious propaganda that there are better forms of government than that of the United States and forms of government which give greater liberties to the people. Don't believe this. We live today under the greatest government ever formed under the sun. With God's help and our own we will understand our obligations and live up to them whether in peace or war."

Helps Lay Cornerstone.

Pershing helped lay the cornerstone for a school which succeeded one in which he received most of his early education.

"I was born near here and lived here practically all my life until called away into the service of the Government," Pershing said. He recalled his own father, John F. Pershing, was president of the board of directors of the previous school.

The cornerstone ceremony in charge of the Grand Lodge of Missouri Masons, came at the end of a busy day in which the General and his sister, Miss May Pershing visited with old friends and neighbors and were luncheon guests in their former home now occupied by A. S. Byrd. More than 20 older residents of Laclede ate fried chicken at the long table.

"I recall the days when I used to romp up and down stairs and play in the garden," Pershing said. "This occasion is too dear and sweet for anybody to make anything that sounds like a speech. Deep down in my heart I am pleased beyond words. Occasions like this bring tears near the surface. I really hope and believe I will come here several times again."

Among friends at the table were J. W. Lomax, 84 years old, oldest resident of Laclede, and M. B. Harter, who lived across the street from Pershing when he was a boy. The General is now 75. It was "How are you Jim?' and "You are looking fine, John," when the General shook hands.

"Three things impressed me most about Pershing as a boy," Harter said. "He was systematic and thorough, he was quick to make decisions and he always did his best. He was not scrappy, but very likeable and agreeable."

Goes to Lodge, Sees Parade.

Several hundred persons gathered around the Byrd home and gave the General and his sister an ovation. He then went to the Masonic Hall, where the State Grand Lodge was in session. Pershing is a thirty-third degree Mason.

A parade formed, with the Linn County American Legion drum and bugle corps and the Marceline High School band and proceeded to the school site, where more than 2000 persons had assembled. Among them were hundreds of school children, including pupils from the Prairie Mound School, where Pershing taught two terms before he went to West Point.

James W. Skelly, St. Louis, grand master of Missouri Masons, was in charge of the ceremonies. Byrne E. Bigger, Hannibal, past grand master, made the principal address. Others who spoke were Lloyd W. King, State Superintendent of Schools; N. E. Viles, State Director of School Buildings, and E. M. Carter, secretary of the State Teachers' Association.

Later Pershing went to the cemetery, bared his head and stood silent at the graves of relatives.

Pershing and his sister returned tonight to Brookfield as guests of old friends, Ed Allen and John Crowder, formerly of Laclede and now operators of a Brookfield hotel. They planned to drive back to Lincoln, Neb., tomorrow.

STATE TO GET ONLY A PART OF AVAILABLE CHILDREN'S AID

Change in Laws Necessary to Conform to U. S. Regulations, Says Herschel Alt.

Missouri has qualified for a share in only one of the four types of Federal appropriations available to States for children's aid, Herschel Alt, executive secretary of the St. Louis Children's Aid Society, said yesterday.

The State receives $42,229 annually from the appropriation for child welfare and might receive much more if State laws were enacted to conform to the rules of the Social Security Act providing grants for aid to dependent or crippled children and for maternal and child health, the statement pointed out.

Alt said much progress had been made recently in St. Louis for the care and protection of dependent children.

COURT DEFERS RULING IN PLANING MILL SUITS

Temporary Injunction Against Carpenters' Union Still in Effect.

Applications of the Carondelet Manufacturing Co., 5826 South Broadway, and the Frank Schmidt Planing Mill Co., 2736 Victor street, for a permanent injunction to prevent officers of the Carpenters' District Council from enforcing a rule requiring a union label on all mill products handled by union carpenters were taken under advisement yesterday by Circuit Judge John W. Joynt. Temporary injunctions, issued by Judge Joynt after strikes were called at the plants in March, are still in force.

Both plants operate on the "open shop" plan. Their officers testified that they had refused to sign a union agreement, although paying wages comparable to the union scale, because of conditions of competition, which, they said, made a union shop undesirable.

The applications for a permanent order alleged that a conspiracy existed to boycott their products with union contractors. The planing mill men asserted that the majority of St. Louis mills favored the "open shop." Evidence was introduced by the plaintiffs that union carpenters had refused to set mill products furnished by the Carondelet Manufacturing Co. for a building being erected for the Laclede Gas Light Co.

J. A. Callahan, secretary of the Carpenters' District Council, D. R. Adams and Walter Gebelein, business agents, denied on the witness stand yesterday that there was a conspiracy to boycott the Schmidt and Carondelet firms, or that there had been any campaign against the products of the firms. The union men said they had tried, unsuccessfully, to unionize several planing mills, and contended that they had acted only within their rights as union organizers in dealing with the mills.

Gebelein testified that the union label rule was adopted last January as protection for workmen in union planing mills, which had complained of inability to operate continuously because of "open shop" competition.

Several fixture manufacturers and planing mill operators testified for the defense that they had verbal agreements with the union, and had found the arrangement satisfactory. Union officers never attempted to dictate in the handling of personnel, and their firms had competed successfully with both union and non-union plants, the witnesses said.

William O. Reeder, attorney for the planing mills, and Munro Roberts, counsel for the union, were instructed to file briefs and transcripts of the evidence. A similar suit, filed by the Huttig Sash & Door Co., is pending.

CYTRON AND SON MAKE NEW MOVE TO DELAY TRIAL

Prosecutor Receives Notice Writ of Prohibition Will Be Sought From Supreme Court.

Further delay in disposing of charges against Gustave Cytron and his son, Stanley, accused of obtaining money by false pretenses in the operation of the Cytron Mortgage Co., was indicated yesterday when Circuit Attorney Franklin Miller and Circuit Judge Robert J. Kirkwood were served with notice that the Cytrons would apply to the Supreme Court next Friday for a writ of prohibition barring the prosecution from proceeding.

Gustave Cytron, president of the mortgage firm which collapsed in 1929 with a loss of nearly $2,000,000 to investors, was to go on trial again before Judge Kirkwood a week from tomorrow. At his first trial, last March, nearly four years after his indictment, the jury was unable to agree and was discharged.

Under usual procedure the Supreme Court, when it receives the application for a writ of prohibition, will issue a temporary writ and specify a time for the Circuit Attorney to present his side of the case. This will mean postponement of Gustave Cytron's second trial. Stanley Cytron obtained a continuance and has not yet been tried.

"Suggestions" to Court.

In their "suggestions" to the Supreme Court, to be filed with the application for a writ of prohibition, counsel for the Cytrons state that the matters cited in the application have been called to the attention of the Circuit Courts "by every form of pleading available." Having been overruled on these points in the Circuit Courts, the Cytrons "have exhausted their legal remedies" there, the suggestions state.

The writ is sought on the ground of technical errors of procedure alleged to have occurred during the four years before Gustave Cytron was brought to trial, in the course of which there were eight postponements of the case.

Counsel for the Cytrons, former Circuit Judge A. B. Frey and Sigmund Bass, allege that when a demurrer to the original indictment was sustained the trial court did not grant the State leave to file the information which subsequently was filed as a substitute for the indictment.

They allege that a day after the demurrer was sustained, when the trial court did grant leave to file an information, it specified that the information was to be filed within that term of court (December, 1933), but that the information was not filed until the following April 2.

"Repealed by Implication."

Meanwhile, they allege, the statute of limitations had become effective because it operated in the period between dismissing the indictment and filing the information. They further allege that the statute under which the prosecution was instituted was "repealed by implication" when a later statute was passed.

For all these reasons, the application states, the Circuit Court is without jurisdiction to proceed and the Supreme Court should assume jurisdiction by issuing its writ of prohibition.

In the trial last March the State produced evidence to show that Walter C. Wiehe, 950 Dover place purchased for $5753 participation certificates in a $115,000 second mortgage on the Hampden Hall Apartments, Newstead and McPherson avenues, at a time when the second mortgage had been wiped out by foreclosure of a first mortgage. The sale was made on June 22, 1929.

Cytron pleaded that he did not make the Wiehe sale, and was not familiar with all details of his company's operations. It was conceded that the Hampden Hall mortgage in which Wiehe bought an interest had been wiped out and replaced by a worthless unsecured promissory note for $115,000.

Members of the jury, during their deliberations, asked for additional instructions from the court bearing on the question of intent to defraud. Part of Cytron's defense had been that the crash of his company was due to the depression. The jury divided equally on the question of Cytron's guilt or innocence.

DOCTOR HOLDS HOPE FOR FEEBLE-MINDED

Tells Association on Mental Deficiency of Value of Social Training.

Some hope for discovery of a method of medical treatment for the feeble-minded was held out by Dr. Edgar A. Doll, president of the American Association on Mental Deficiency, in an address at the annual banquet of the association last night at Hotel Jefferson in connection with its sixtieth annual convention, which will end tomorrow.

"If the past 140 years have not yielded treatment methods of appreciable value for large numbers of the feeble minded, we need not therefore conclude that successful therapy cannot be anticipated," he said. "Even if we acknowledge that feeble-mindedness is a condition existing from birth or from an early age and affecting predominately the central nervous system in such a manner as seems not susceptible to medical treatment, there is still hope something may be done, even if only for a limited number of cases."

For example, he said, there may be two types of Mongols—persons born with slanting eyes, large tongues and misshapen heads, often imbeciles—one of which may respond to glandular treatment. Likewise, muscle training may benefit feeble-minded afflicted with spasms and nervous afflictions from birth head injuries, he said.

However, for the majority of patients for years to come, industrial and social training probably will be the most important help, he said. "Among many of the high-grade feeble-minded the difference between just floating and just sinking in the social stream may well be such a small though critical difference," he said, "that it can be overcome by substituting good social habits for limited adaptive capacity."

"If we could ever learn to teach the feeble-minded what they can learn and will make use of," he continued, "and if we could accept them as they are rather than trying to make them over into what we would like them to be, we could probably take critical steps toward a new day in the training of the feeble-minded."

Where formerly the opposition to compulsory sterilization of the feeble-minded outside of institutes came from the poorly informed, today the situation is reversed, he said, "with much of our best professional thought gravely opposed to this measure."

"The practical difficulties of adequate diagnosis and particularly of adequate proof as to the hereditary nature of mental deficiency in a given case present serious obstacles to sterilization even when the inadvisability of offspring is otherwise clearly evident," he asserted.

Address on Study of Suicide.

Dr. Doll also spoke at the annual luncheon meeting yesterday of the Missouri Society of Mental Hygiene at Hotel Chase. Another speaker at the meeting was Dr. Gregory Zilboorg, New York psychiatrist and secretary of the Committee for the Study of Suicide, Inc., which was founded last December.

Suicide, Dr. Zilboorg said, seems to be as inherent a human phenomenon as a great many others, and the most important thing in reducing its rate is to see that children are not repressed but are allowed the child's natural aggressiveness to go practically unrestricted.

Many suicides "in the true sense of the word," are concealed behind automobile accidents, he said. "The practicing psychiatrist is only too familiar," he explained, "with the neurotic and ostensibly normal individual who labors under the pressure of a violent but unconscious trend of self-destruction and who either runs his automobile into a telegraph pole or accidentally 'lets himself be run over' by an approaching car."

Dr. Paul J. Zentay, a physician, was re-elected president of the Missouri Society for Mental Hygiene yesterday. Othe r officers elected were: Dean Sidney E. Sweet of Christ Church Cathedral and Eugene McCarthy, vice-presidents; A. O. Wilson, treasurer, and Miss Martha ePttus, Mrs. Benjamin Loeb, Mrs. Dozier Gardner, Mrs. John Franciscus, Willard Parker and Dr. Jules Jensen, directors.

MISSOURI COUNTY ONE OF 3 THAT SOUGHT NO PWA FUNDS

Officials of Putnam Say They Have Needed None and Like to Keep Down Taxes.

By the Associated Press.

UNIONVILLE, Mo., May 2.—Putnam County—one of three counties in the United States that hasn't asked the Government for PWA funds—likes to keep down tax levies. That, county officials said today, was the reason there had been no PWA projects submitted by the county.

"We haven't needed it," said Presiding Judge A. S. Montgomery of the County Court. "Of course, we would accept whatever was offered and it probably would help some, but I believe the county can take care of most, if not all, of its needs."

Sheriff A. R. Gibson said "We need enough money to build a new jail." Two prisoners escaped last week.

The PWA at Washington found that only three of the nation's 3073 counties hadn't asked it for any Federal money. These were Union and White Counties in North Georgia, and Putnam, in Missouri.

VOTE NEAR ON UNION OF ALL METHODISTS

Conference Approval Tomorrow Predicted; 8,000,000 Members in Three Churches.

By the Associated Press.

COLUMBUS, O., May 2.—A proposal for unification of the three branches of Methodism into the world's largest Protestant denomination is headed toward a vote Monday at the quadrennial conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, with leaders predicting approval.

Placed before the conference unexpectedly, the proposal was made the first order of business Monday, nearly three weeks before it was to have been considered. Unification, goal of many churchmen since the Methodist Church split over the question of slave ownership in 1844, would create a Protestant body of more than 8,000,000 members.

The program must be ratified by the general conferences of the three branches, the last of which meets in 1938, and by at least three-fourths of the annual conferences of each branch.

The Methodist Church North today had from the College of Bishops of the Methodist Church South the first indication that the Southern church was prepared to approve the proposal.

"The College of Bishops sends greetings and prays that . . . your deliberations may hasten the day when once more American Methodism shall present a solid front to the world," the message from Nashville said.

"The Methodist Church."

Drafted by a commission headed by Bishop William F. McDowell of the Northern Church, Bishop Edwin D. Mouzon of the Southern Church, and the Rev. John C. Broomfield of the Methodist Protestant Church, the proposal provides that the unified church shall be called "The Methodist Church."

The unified church would be split into six jurisdictional conferences, five located geographically and a sixth for Negro congregations. Debate was promised on the plan to segregate Negro Methodists into a separate jurisdiction, some delegates favoring their retention in conferences according to the location of their churches.

Jurisdictional Conferences.

Jurisdictional conferences under the plan would be: Northeastern, Southeastern, Central (Negro annual conferences, Negro mission conferences and missions in United States), North Central, which would include Illinois; South Central, in which would be Missouri; and the Western.

A uniting conference, under the program, would be held within 12 months after final approval of the union, to harmonize and combine rules of the churches, combine the rituals, provide for co-ordination of missionary, educational and benevolent boards, and to provide a plan for control and safeguarding of all permanent funds and property of the churches.

INITIATIVE PETITIONS FOR CONSERVATION COMMISSION

Head of Missouri Federation Says Undertaking Would Save Wild Life Without Extra Cost.

E. Sydney Stephens of Columbia, Mo., president of the Restoration and Conservation Federation of Missouri, urged voters, in a statement issues yesterday, to sign the initiative petitions now being circulated in St. Louis and throughout the State.

The petitions are to place on the ballot for the November election an amendment to the State Constitution providing for the establishment of a non-partisan conservation commission to have control over the restoration and conservation of the State's wild life resources.

"In signing the petitions, voters have an opportunity to take the first step toward a modern and progressive system of wild life conservation in Missouri," Stephens said. "The establishment of the proposed commission will not entail additional taxation, since funds for its operation will come from hunting and fishing license fees. The amendment stipulates these funds shall be used for conservation purposes exclusively."

More than 5000 signatures have already been obtained in St. Louis and St. Louis County.

8078 BODIES RECOVERED IN BALUCHISTAN EARTHQUAKE

Plans Drawn for Entirely New City on Site of Old Capital; Government Grants Loans.

QUETTA, Baluchistan, May 2.—Salvage activities by the Government have resulted in the exhumation of 8078 Indians who were buried alive in the recent earthquake, which took more than 20,000 lives.

During the activities 12,607 houses, shops and other property were recovered, worth $2,500,000.

Plans have been drawn up for an entirely new city on the site of the old capital. Nobody will be allowed to build unless plans are first certified by the Government as "earthquake-proof."

The Government is helping native property owners with loans for building purposes. Legal and court fees over disputed property rights have been reduced by 75 per cent.

The Central Government at Delhi has set aside $3,000,000 out of Government revenues to assist in the reconstruction of Quetta. The new city will be on a much greater scale than the old capital.

LABOR SECRETARY SEEKING WAY TO CURB SILICOSIS

Miss Perkins Names Committees to Study Disease to Which, She Says, 500,000 Are Exposed.

FOUR PHASES ARE CONSIDERED

Medical, Engineering, Economic and Regulatory Methods to Be Reported On.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, May 2.—Secretary of Labor Perkins today appointed a committee to work out a method for preventing silicosis, a disease for which no cure has yet been found.

They will consider the problem of prevention from four different angles: The medical, or catching the disease in incipient stages; engineering control, or working out methods of equipping plants subject to silica dust so as to prevent outbreak of the disease; economic, legal and insurance phases, which will take into consideration the cost of the disease to industry because of claims, and the cost of combatting it; regulatory and administrative phases, dealing with regulations that might be put into effect to govern plants liable to an outbreak of the disease.

The 53 men named by the Secretary to the four committees include health experts, representatives of employes, workers, insurance companies, Government, technical societies and engineers. Their appointment grew out of a national conference held by Miss Perkins to discuss the problem.

500,000 Exposed.

Estimates have been presented that 500,000 workers in mines, quarries, foundries, glass works and other industries where silica dust may be inhaled are exposed to the disease.

"The fact that it has been prevented in certain industries where there is exposure is sufficient grounds for making us believe that it can be successfully combated in practically all the industries and that every effort should be made to study the particular needs and problems of those industries so as to devise ways suitable for the control of the disease," said Miss Perkins. "The technique of silicosis preventon lies in keeping the dust from getting into the air which workers breathe. This can be done by different types of ventilation—not necessarily general ventilation—but specialized control and collection of the dust at the point of origin so that it does not escape into the workroom.

Methods of Prevention.

"The use of wetting down processes is also often helpful. The keeping of rooms clean, the cleaning of walls, floors and machinery is also of assistance. The wearing of positive pressure masks is a possible method of control when nothing else is available, but this is not practicable in most places and under most circumstances. It is difficult for men to work an eight-hour day wearing such a mask, but for certain short time exposures it may be appropriate.

"Silicosis is caused by breathing very small particles of dust containing silica. The particles which are too small to be seen in the form of dust are the ones which are the most dangerous since, because of their minute size they reach small air cells of the lungs, penetrate the lining membrane and cause irritation. This, in turn, causes the replacement of healthy tissues by fibrous or scar tissues.

"The concentration of the dust is another test of the degree of the hazard; also, the length of time a worker has been exposed. A short exposure may not create any particular hazard and may not cause any after effects in the lung tissue. The degree of concentration of the dust and the length of exposure are extremely important factors.

X-Ray Almost Essential.

"The symptoms are not very well known and are extremely difficult for the layman to recognize, also difficult for the physician to recognize; but in general one gets the picture—A general malaise, shortness of breath, early fatigue, sometimes with some slight visible symptoms, but usually not. The actual recognition and diagnosis of silicosis can scarcely be made without an X-ray examination.

"The symptoms of tuberculosis are often confused with the symptoms of silicosis, and, in fact, silicosis and tuberculosis may be present in the same individual and may be related to each other, thus increasing the danger to the individual."

Miss Perkins said many damage suits had been brought by persons afflicted with silicosis and who were not covered by workmen's compensation laws.

"An extremely expensive economic situation ensues if everyone who acquires silicosis can bring a damage suit," she said. "There has been, therefore, considerable canvassing of the law and of methods by which this disease can practically be brought under workmen's compensation laws."

Heads of the four committees are: Medical, Surgeon R. R. Sayers, Public Health Service; engineering, Warren A. Cook, State Department of Health, Hartford, Conn.; economic, legal and insurance, V. P. Ahearn, Washington; regulatory and administrative, L. Metcalfe Walling, Labor Commissioner, Providence, R. I.

NEW ZEPPELIN SAILS FOR U. S. WEDNESDAY

First Trip Will Be Followed by Others Which Will Be in Nature of Experiment.

FRIEDRICHSHAFEN, Germany, May 2.—The first trip to North America of the new German Zeppelin, the Hindenburg, is to begin at dawn Wednesday.

Succeeding voyages will chiefly be in the nature of an experiment to determine whether North Atlantic cruises can be made with the same punctuality as the Zeppelin company has maintained to South America.

Dr. Hugo Eckener, veteran Zeppelin master, greatly relieved that the official ban on his name has been removed, explained today that the experimental idea was the underlying purpose of this summer's cruises to Lakehurst, N. J.

Said Dr. Eckener: "The projected North American trips first and foremost are intended to be in order to study the experimental voyages to see whether it is possible to fly regularly to North America with the same promptness and time table precision as trips to South America, which have become a fixed institution.

"The North Atlantic constitutes an area with a great weather variety and will need a carefully planned navigation to enable us to arrive in average figures such as must be contained in a time table.

"One thing is certain, however. It will never be possible to give a single route as one to be followed. The route must be decided from case to case. Sometimes the best time can be made not by a straight route but by going far north or south. The best we can do is to figure on about 65 to 70 hours for a trip westward and 48 to 55 hours eastward. This uncertainty in time required has nothing to do with safety.

"I expect the coming North American voyages to prove extremely interesting in increasing our meteorological knowledge. Our studies on the South American course have enabled us gradually to reduce the time between Germany and Brazil."

After a one or two-day stay at Lakehurst, the new Zeppelin will not return to Friedrichshafen, but to the new hangar at Frankfort, from where it will start again for Lakehurst three days after its arrival, an officer of the Zeppelin company said.

MORE LAND SOUGHT FOR BIRD REFUGES

Government Intends to Acquire 5,200,000 Acres During Next Four Years.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, May 2.—Seeking safety ports for transient ducks and geese, the Government intends to acquire 5,200,000 acres for bird refuges during the next four years.

It has been recommended that the Bureau of Biological Survey purchase and develop 2,244,000 acres of nesting refuges, 1,096,000 acres of feeding and resting refugees and 1,879,000 acres of wintering refuges, or a total of 5,219,000 acres.

The survey now owns and administers 99 refuges covering 2,118,433 acres. The bureau actually has provided 3,117,831 acres of bird refuge land, however. Options for the purchase of nearly a million other acres have been approved and these areas, through special permits from the owners, are now or soon will be functioning as waterfowl refuges.

The land now owned by the Bureau for migratory waterfowl use is valued roughly at $14,000,000. Several additional millions of dollars of valuable land is owned by the various states and used for refuges.

Before the ducks fly South again, the bureau expects to have some new wintering ranges. Six refuges are being acquired in Arkansas, Louisiana, Mississippi and Texas. These have 355,000 acres.

The largest is the Sabine refuge in Cameron Parish, Louisiana, with 137,233 acres. Others in Louisiana include Delta refuge in Plaquemines parish, 39,207 acres, and the Lacassine refuge in Jefferson Davis and Cameron parishes, 39,025 acres.

The White River refuge in Monroe, Arkansas, Desha and Philips counties, Arkansas, has 110,000 acres, while the Yazoo refuge in Washington County, Mississippi, covers 23,757 acres. The smallest is the Muleshoe refuge, consisting of 5811 acres in Bailey County, Texas.

Nearly 43,000 acres of the White River refuge already are being used. Much of the acreage of the other areas is under option by the bureau and the Delta refuge, by permission from its owners, is operating as a waterfowl sanctuary. The other areas will be placed under administration within a short time.

The bureau plans to acquire an additional 1,879,000 acres of refuge land in the southern wintering range, chiefly in Florida, Georgia, Louisiana, Arkansas and Texas.

CONSIDERING PLEADING GUILTY OF CONTEMPT

National Retail Credit Assn. and Others May Pay Substantial Fines.

Defendants in the criminal contempt action against the National Retail Credit Association, 13 of its members, and the Consumer Credit Reporting Corporation, are giving serious consideration, it was learned last night, to a proposal that they agree to plead guilty of violating an anti-trust injunction and pay substantial fines.

Lawrence McDaniel, attorney for the National Retail Credit Association, was in Washington recently in connection with the proposed settlement, which is said to involve fines large enough to convince the Department of Justice that pressing the criminal trial would serve no reasonable purpose.

Assistant Attorney-General Harold Schilz will be in St. Louis tomorrow to go over final details of the settlement with McDaniel. If they reach an agreement, it will be submitted Wednesday to United States District Judge Charles B. Davis for his approval. Otherwise the case will go to trial the following Monday.

Under the proposed settlement there would be no modification of the injunction the defendants are accused of violating which was issued by Judge Davis in 1933 when he signed a consent decree terminating an anti-trust action against the National Retail Credit Association.

The National Retail Credit Association and the Consumer Credit Reporting Corporation both have offices at 1218 Olive street. Most of the local credit reporting agencies throughout the country are members of the association. Credit managers of retail stores are included in its membership.

The Department of Justice, in its contempt action, alleged the defendants had engaged in monopolistic practices forbidden by Judge Davis' injunction. Exclusive territories were assigned to credit reporting agencies, the complaint alleged, and the defendant agreed to prevent competing independent agencies from obtaining credit information from business establishments which were members of the association.

Appeals Drunken Driving Fine.

William B. Russell, a salesman, 5919 Kensington avenue, was fined $100 and costs in Police Court yesterday by Provisional Judge James H. Connor. A policeman riding in a scout car observed Russell drive into the curb at Enright and Taylor avenues on April 5. The officer said Russell's driving did not seem to be what it should and after it hit the curb he came to the conclusion "from his experience in such cases" that Russell was intoxicated. Russell denied intoxication and filed notice of appeal.

Test of Trucking Costs Proves Expense of No Two Hauls Is Same

Driving Force at Tires Required on Different Road Surfaces Varies Widely per Ton.

Two no two trucking jobs are exactly alike even when conditions are apparently similar has been made more evident by an "on the job" test plan used by Ford V-8 dealers.

Truckers who keep accurate cost records are becoming convinced that making a test on the job is the only scientific way of buying a truck, according to indorsements of the plan reported by dealers.

So many factors enter into truck "performance" that operating records on what appear to be similar jobs are often misleading, experienced truckers say. Load, length of haul, type and condition of road surface and speed are all variables which affect cost records and are seldom exactly the same for two hauls.

Experiments have shown, for example, that the driving force required at the tires for each 1000 pounds of weight on a level road varies from 12 pounds on smooth concrete to 62 pounds on poor gravel or macadam.

Such figures—and this is but one example—indicate that one variant may make records obtained with a given truck by one operator or on a given route utterly unreliable truck operators is the basis for the when applied to another haul.

Recognition of this problem of Ford "on the job" test plan. Under this plan, truckers are invited to determine for themselves what a truck will do and what operating costs will be on any given job. Accurate data can then be obtained as a buyer's guide.

In effect for some months, the plan applies to all styles of V-8 trucks and commercial cars.

Salt Lake City Award For 'First Citizen' Goes to Driver Ab Jenkins

Because of his exploits behind a steering wheel, on the highway and runs against time, Ab Jenkins, sales engineer for Auburn, is termed Salt Lake City's "first citizen of 1935," in an annual announcement by the city's advertising club.

In pioneering automobile speed trials on the Bonneville Salt Flats, where Sir Malcolm Campbell drove 301.1292 miles per hour last September, Jenkins became the only man in the world to average more than 125 miles an hour in a 24-hour session of solo driving. In addition, he set over 70 stock car records in a supercharged Auburn car in 1934.

He also has covered more than a million miles of highway in all parts of the country without even a minor accident.

Custom Station Wagon Has Body Finished in Natural Wood Design

Shipments of the new Terraplane custom station wagon have just been started from the Hudson factory at Detroit.

This car's body is finished in natural wood and the metal body parts in Tuscan tan. Fenders are black, with lacquer colors optional.

The custom station wagon seats eight passengers, and has ample room for luggage. The end gate opens downward, providing space for additional luggage. The second compartment doors and rear side windows have curtains, which slide up around the top, while the rear curtain, above the end gate, rolls up and secures with buttons.

At the close of 1935 nearly one-fourth of the cars on the highways of the United States were more than eight years old.

Project to Enlist 300,000 Motorists in Practical "Gas" Test

Country-Wide Mileage Competition for 65 Days Announced by Standard Oil.

Plans to enlist 300,000 motorists this summer in a country-wide road test to determine what mileage the average car will obtain under average conditions from a gallon of today's gasoline are being made by Standard Oil.

From May 1 on, the compaiy will furnish to everyone interested a handy booklet for keeping a record of his gasoline purchases and mileage. With it will go an emblem to mark the automobile as a "research test car."

After driving 500 miles or more in the 65-day period prior to Sept. 18, the motorist may write in the book a 75-word summary of his experience, send it to the company, in competition for awards that will be made by a committee of disinterested experts.

With the data obtained in this manner from thousands of drivers, Standard Oil expects to be able to determine the mileage that cars actually deliver from a given amount of gasoline.

Hollywood Actors Play Roles in Movie Presenting Sales Plans

Edgar Kennedy, Frank Craven, Ray Walker, Betty Blythe, Bryant Washburn and Maxine Doyle, Hollywood movie actors, played the chief roles in a motion picture that told the story of the Standard Oil Co. of Indiana summer sales plans of 750 servicemen and dealers from the St. Louis region at a series of conferences the past week.

The feature length picture, "It's Up To You," produced at Hollywood for Standard this spring, portrays the success of an ambitious home-town boy in building up the business of a servce station by using the right sales methods. Into the film story are woven complications with stolen car racketeers and a romance with the station owner's daughter. Kennedy's comedy was a strong feature.

An "explosion demonstrator" showed how the summer Standard gasoline burns. It was shown by R. B. McFarland. Flashing a full throttle cylnder of gasoline into the open, the device caused bright yellow flames 16 inches long.

McFarland outlined the requirements for a suitable summer gasoline, and then demonstrated how Standard Oil's summer gasoline more than satisfied these requirements. He also discussed factors which affect gasoline mileage, factors which a driver has under his control and those which he does not.

The Standard Oil summer advertising campaign, as outlined by Mr. Kramer, advertising representative. Kramer will rely as usual mainly on newspaper space. More than 1500 daily and weekly papers will carry this advertising schedule in 13 Middlewestern States.

E. Nicolay, special salesman, explained a new club for Standard Oil dealers called the "Money Maker Club," which will conduct a competition for them.

J. W. Honomichl, assistant manager in St. Louis, summarized past achievements and pointed out how the selling program for 1936 opened up new opportunities for all Standard Oil dealers.

D. F. Conrad, special salesman, acted as master of ceremonies.

Special equipment used by Dr. Thomas Wheeldon of Richmond, Va., in orthopedic clinics that he conducts at 14 places in Virginia and North Carolina. Piled beside the car are 16 special cases for carrying the paraphernalia required by Dr. Wheeldon in his work. All these cases fit snugly into the rear of the coupe, leaving the front compartment clear. Among the things in the cases are a complete X-Ray outfit, fluoroscope, operating instruments, medicines, bandages and operating clothes. The car was presented to Dr. Wheeldon by George A. Richards, owner of the Detroit Lions, champion professional football team and radio station WJR, as an expression of gratitude for his professional services to Richards' sisters after an accident and in recognition of the work he is doing for indigent crippled children. The car is a Chrysler Airflow Imperial coupe, and the cases were designed and made by Chrysler.

Railroads and Factory Conveyors Linked Into Cross-Country System

New conveyor equipment in Plymouth plants in Detroit, Los Angeles and Evansville, Ind., and railroad lines between those cities, virtually become one conveyor system.

The railroad is regarded as part of the system because the cars are of a new type designed to carry Plymouth engines and can be mechanically loaded and unloaded.

Thus, there is complete mechanical conveyance of Plymouth engines from the point of first machining for motor casting in the Detroit plant to its installation in a chassis in the Los Angeles or Evansville plant.

Previously, the finished engines were hauled by tractors to railroad loading docks for rehandling to load in railroad cars. The new conveyor carries the engine right into the car and deposits it in place, to stay throughout the journey. Similar conveyors at the Los Angeles and Evansville plants pick up the engines and carry them direct to the chassis for which they were destined.

Savings credited to the new method of handling engine shipments result from elimination of previous operation charges of the tractor fleet used for hauling, and construction costs of heavy wooden cradles formerly built for every engine shipped.

New lines for carrying engines to and from the conveyor cars are of the overhead monorail chain type. In the main plant in Detroit the new installation has a peak load capacity of 383 motors each.

"TERRAPLANE has spoiled me for any other low priced car"

"And a month ago I thought all low priced cars were alike!"

In all our years in the automobile business, we've never known a car to win such owner enthusiasm as this 1936 Terraplane. One buyer's statement, printed in the headline above, is a fair sample of what most of them are saying.

That's easy to understand. For, of all low priced cars, they find that Terraplane gives them most of everything that counts. Greater economy than they've ever known in any car before. More power and smoother performance than you'll find in any of the others. Distinctive new style that asks no odds of even the highest priced cars. And the long life of 125,000, 150,000 miles and more . . . shown by actual owner records.

Perhaps you haven't yet ridden in a 1936 Terraplane. Then you're one of those for whom we've set a car aside to try.

We'd like you to sit at the wheel . . . shift gears at a finger touch with the Electric Hand without taking either hand from the easy job of steering . . . see how much more comfortable a front seat can be for three people with no gear or brake levers cluttering up the front floor. There's a lot to see and experience . . . including all the advantages listed at the right. Can't you arrange to take this "Discovery Drive" today?

Retail Drive Begun By Chevrolet Co. at Zone Meeting Here

Two-Month Special Campaign Started by Zone Manager Brown.

A special spring and summer retail selling campaign was launched by Zone Manager Tom F. Brown at a meeting of 250 Chevrolet dealers, sale manages and salesmen at the Coronado Hotel Friday. Official announcement of the drive which will continue until July 1, was made at a conference of Chevrolet regional executives in Detroit Monday when the Chevrolet selling machine was started full tilt.

The sales records made by Chevrolet dealers since the introduction of the new car in November were said to indicate not only a marked increase in new car volume, but also a Chevrolet volume in 1936 exceeding by a wide margin any previous year in the company's history.

In the St. Louis area, comprising Southern Illinois and Eastern Missouri, 17,313 new 1936 Chevrolet cars and trucks have already been placed in the hands of owners. Used car sales in the same period showed a large increase in comparison with previous similar periods.

The extensive plan developed by Chevrolet and launched at the meeting Friday goes into full effect immediately, so that maximum benefits will be derived by Chevrolet dealers, sales managers and salesmen, not only from a new car sales viewpoint, but in the possibilities during the entire course of this special campaign.

"Chevrolet recognizes the important part Chevrolet salesmanagers and salesmen are contributing to the remarkable gains in 1936," Brown said. "In recognition of their efforts in the past four months, and to recompense them for their efforts in the future, the awards will be made."

T. H. Keating, regional manager, Tom F. Brown, St. Louis zone manager, and C. C. Schelp, city manager here, have returned from a meeting of the Chevrolet Motor Co.'s national organization of nine regional, 47 zone and 21 city managers at Detroit conducted by W. E. Holler, general sales manager.

Holler said the meeting was called to put into full effects plans for the 10,000 Chevrolet dealers to reap the benefit of the elaborate sales machinery set up by Chevrolet.

"In anticipation of the greatest automotive market that has developed for several years, the company has gone ahead with several organization steps entirely new and unique," Holler said. "It has an entire department, with personnel throughout the United States, devoting all its time to training Chevrolet salesmen. Another department concentrates its attention on used cars, with highly gratifying results. The maintenance of a quality dealer body, with the right number of dealers in each community—each dealer properly located, staffed, and equipped—is the concern of still a third department. Dealer accounting and business management occupies a fourth.

"None of these facilities are duplicated elsewhere in the industry. Now our main concern is to gear their efforts together to yield maximum results for the salesman, the dealer and the company."

Blacksmiths Play Part in Making Autos

The McFall company started in business in November, 1888, at 12th and Poplar streets, opposite the old Union Station. It used horses in its livery service until 1908, when it began assembling a fleet of Packard cars.

Barney Oldfield Guest At Luncheon Here In Interest of Safety

Noted Driver Says New Model Drivers Are Needed to Operate New Model Cars.

Barney Oldfield stopped in St. Louis Friday in the course of a safety tour and was guest of honor at a luncheon at the Coronado Hotel given by the Chrysler Corporation.

Officers representing the various units of Chrysler Corporation at the affair were L. M. Stewart of L. M. Stewart, Inc., Chrysler distributer; George Weber Sr. of Mound City Motors, DeSoto distributer; Paul A. Jarue, regional manager for Dodge; Ross Williams, regional manager for DeSoto and Plymouth, and Ray Donahue, merchandise manager for the Chrysler Corporation in St. Louis.

All Chrysler men attending the meeting pledged themselves to have their organizations, including salesmen and mechanics, observe all safety rules in connection with the campaign that Oldfield is sponsoring in the interest of the public for Chrysler Corporation.

The "New Model" Driver.

Oldfield, a veteran of the highways and race tracks, said that 1936 model drivers are needed for 1936 model automobiles. He describes a new model driver as one who matches the safety improvements in auto construction with improvements in his own driving.

"Highway safety is a three-factor problem, involving the car, the highway and the driver," Oldfield declared. "Safety officials cannot hope to reduce traffic accidents until they have solved all three phases.

"Automobile makers are spending millions of dollars annually in developing safety improvements such as steel bodies, hydraulic brakes, wide-angle vision and improved steering. Research laboratories are dedicated to the safety cause.

"Federal, State and city traffic officials are becoming more safety-minded every year. They're making real progress toward the solution of the highway and traffic factor in the safety problem. Government forces are investing huge sums in improved highways, overhead and underground grade crossings and modern, uniform traffic signals."

"It doesn't take as much skill to drive a new model car," he said, "but it does take a whole lot of sanity."

Graham Vice-Presidents Address Meeting of Dealers in St. Louis

F. R. Valpey, vice-president and general sales manager of the Graham-Paige Motors Corporation, and other executives were in St. Louis Wednesday to conduct an all-day sales meeting of Graham distributor and dealers in this territory.

A. E. Archer of the Archer-Mann Motor Co., local Graham distributor, said the meeting was inspired by the victory of a stock Graham Supercharger in winning the official sweepstakes championship in the recent Gilmore-Yosemite 352-mile gasoline economy run with a record of 26.66 miles per gallon in competition with 29 other cars.

Graham is announcing to all of its dealers. A sweepstakes winner campaign, a nation-wide contest for all Graham salesmen.

Valpey said that he expected 1936 to be by far the best year the industry had experienced since the depression came and went. Graham retail deliveries in the past month, he said, had shown a large increase over 1935 and that orders for the week ending April 25 had set a new total for a silimar period since 1929.

C. W. Matheson, vice-president of Graham-Paige, discussed engineering features of Graham cars. E. R. Wade, vice-president and general manager of the United States Advertising Co., outlined spring advertising and sales promotion plans

How to Keep Tires in Good Condition

Twelve things to bear in mind to keep tires in good condition, to prevent accidents and to insure long tire life, are noted by C. E. Newman, manager of Goodrich Silvertown Stores, as follows:

Check tire pressure each week and reinflate tires to two pounds above the rated pressure, as this amount of air is lost normally each week from good tires.

Check new tires every other day for the first week, as they lose air for a while more rapidly than old tires.

Check tires for nails, tacks and pieces of stone in treads weekly and fill or vulcanize any cuts or blisters.

Avoid turning corners at high speed, as this grinds rubber from the tire treads. Turn the steering wheel slowly always.

Avoid bumping curbs, or driving off concrete pavement abruptly, as this may pinch a tube against a tire rim, tear cords in a tire body, and later result in a blowout.

Check alignment of wheels, front and rear, frequently, and see that any worn bearings are replaced. Failure to do this means severe tire tread wear.

Avoid slamming on brakes suddenly and check brakes often for uneven braking effect.

See that all tires are changed for new ones as soon as the treads begin to wear smoth. Rear tire blowouts are as dangerous as front tire blowouts.

Avoid spinning the rear wheels in mud or sand or snow. To pull out of such trouble, try starting in high.

Remember that high road speed generates heat inside of tires with consequent deterioration and blowout hazard. So have tires inspected frequently.

Remember that queer steering may be advance notice of a blowout. Stop, locate the bad tire and replace it with the spare.

Remember that spare tires deteriorate rapidly if unused for more than six months. A tire run on the same wheel continually will not wear evenly. So move every tire clockwise on the wheels every 5000 miles, making the spare the left rear tire, etc. After repairing a tire, put it back on the rim so that the inner side faces outward.

Diesel-Engined Car Does 158 M. P. H. in Run on Utah Salt Bed

The racing world has a new record to aim at in the 158.87-miles-an-hour mark set for Diesel-powered cars by Capt. George Eyston of London, on the Bonneville salt flats in Utah.

The run was over a seven-mile section of the glistening white saline track used last year by Sir Malcilm Campbell to set a mark of 301 miles for gasoline-propelled cars.

The first run was at a speed of 155.35 miles an hour; the second, 158.87, and the third, 153.74.

Poor visibility frustrated Eyston in an attempt to increase his speed on the third run by using larger wheels.

A year ago "Bill" Cummings made a run with a Diesel auto over a measured mile at Daytona Beach, Fla., with American Automobile Association officials clocking him at 137 miles per hour.

MISSOURI UNIVERSITY JOURNALISM AWARDS

Three Individuals and Two Newspapers to Receive Medals This Week.

COLUMBIA, Mo., May 2.—Medals for "distinguished service in journalism" will be awarded a country newspaper editor, a city newspaper editor, an advertising executive, the New York Herald Tribune and the Tokio (Japan) Asahi here next week, as part of Missouri University's "Journalism Week."

Frank W. Taylor, managing editor of the St. Louis Star-Times; Senator William R. Painter, editor of the Carrollton, (Mo.) Democrat, and Earle Pearson, managing director of the American Federation of Advertising Clubs of America are the individuals to be honored.

Pearson is a former student of the Missouri University School of Journalism.

The New York Herald Tribune was cited for "consistently maintaining leadership as one of the great outstanding newspapers of America in typography and make-up, for appeal in distinguished manner to intelligent readers who desire good writing and unusual treatment of news and editorial comment, and for offering interpretation by special commentators of unusual discernment."

Senator Painter Commended.

Senator Painter, a past president of the Missouri Press Association, was commended for "long service to the community in which he lives, for recognition of the special obligations of the newspaper to meet opportunities to translate ideals into practice, for demonstrating an appreciation of the truth that newspaper in itself is noble."

Taylor was cited for "unusually effective and unremitting aggressiveness in directing a distinguished metropolitan newspaper, for the exposure of unsocial conditions in the field of his newspaper's influence and for the building of solid civic foundations through his newspaper, for his community; for unusual enterprise, for courage, for a vivid and human understanding in the interpretation of news, for his positive honest character."

The medal awarded to the Asahi will be accepted by Toshishigo Yoke, manager of the paper's New York office.

The Japanese newspaper was commended for "extending its liberal, clear-visioned reporting and interpretation of world news beyond the boundaries of its own nation to contribute significantly both to an understanding of the Orient by the Occident and to an enlightened restraint on the part of its immediate circulation in interpreting fast moving events in a time of critical flux."

Pearson was commended for "distinguished managerial achievement in directing the co-operative service of truthful, socially constructive and economically productive advertising both in America and abroad."

The Herald Tribune recently gained permanent possession of the Ayer award for perfection in newspaper makeup and typography by winning the trophy three years consecutively.

Ogden Reid, president of the Herald Tribune, will accept the honor medal for his newspaper.

PROGRESSIVE SCHOOLS' PAINTING EXHIBITION

Work of Children, 5 to 13 Years Old, to Be Shown at Artists' Guild.

An exhibition of paintings by students of progressive schools in the United States and its possessions, Canada, and Mexico will be placed on view Friday at the Artists' Guild, 812 Union boulevard.

The exhibition, assembled by an association of progressive schools in New York, was shown there at the Rockefeller Center last November. Children between the ages of 5 and 13, students at more than 100 schools in 25 states, contributed to it. The John Burroughs, Community and Principia schools of St. Louis are represented.

One marked difference between these pictures and those which used to be produced in the art classes of the elementary schools is that they represent subjects the students chose to paint, painted the way they pleased to paint.

No Still Life in All 400.

It is not surprising then, that in all of the 400 pictures there is not a single still life, not a bowl, a flower, or a vase, the subjects commonly prescribed for the children to draw under older methods of teaching.

Yet there is a curious consistency in the type of things the children chose to paint. Taking them from coast to coast they are occupied with 16 general subjects, and the vast majority concentrate on five.

The average 5-year-old appears to be interested primarily in painting houses and the typical house is placed in the center of the paper, flanked by two trees, with a flat sun shining overhead. Next in his affection are animals and boats.

By the age of 7, broader interests are shown, and there are virtually no houses. The child draws not only animals, but people, and there are some landscapes, and ambitious panoramas of baseball games, tennis matches and other sport events.

For Five or Six Years.

These themes dominate for the next five or six years, with people and landscapes gradually assuming the lead. There are a few trains, automobiles and tractors, some abstract designs, circus scenes and a few pictures inspired by history or literature. At the bottom of the list are actual school scenes and pictures of war and soldiers.

Pictures of Mexican and Indian children, shown with the others, exhibit an interest in adult occupations and ceremonials totally absent from the pictures of the children of the United States.

The exhibition will remain at the Artists' Guild for six days. Arrangements may be made for groups of school children to be conducted through the galleries. L. D. Haertter of the John Burroughs School is in charge of that phase of the exhibition.

BOARD OF HEALTH PHYSICIAN TALKS ON VALUE OF SYMPTOMS

Deaths due to abdominal diseases could be reduced 75 per cent by educating the layman to recognize symptoms said Dr. Fred W. Bailey, member of the State Board of Health, in an address on preventive surgery yesterday before the St. Louis Clinics at the medical society auditorium, 3839 Lindell boulevard.

The 66,000 deaths from abdominal cancer in 1930, the increasing mortality in acute appendicitis and other "humiliating records" seem to justify a renewed agitation for the earliest possible diagnosis in abdominal diseases, he pointed out.

By way of example, a patient was presented who had neglected to have an acute appendix surgically treated. An acute inflammation developed, requiring three operations and prolonged hospitalization to remove the disability.

WRIT AGAINST SALE OF LIQUOR BY TOBACCO STORE DISSOLVED

Whisky Firm in Same Building Loses Suit Against Isaiah Sabbath.

An order temporarily restraining Isaiah Sabbath from selling liquor in his tobacco store at the northwest corner of Twelfth boulevard and Franklin avenue was dissolved yesterday by Circuit Judge Frank C. O'Malley. The restraining order was issued a week ago on petition of the Silver Creek Liquor Co., owner of the "905" liquor store at 1205 Franklin, which is a tenant in the same building.

The petitioner alleged that Sabbath was forbidden by the terms of his lease to sell liquor. Judge O'Malley, however, said that the lease was a matter between landlord and tenant and no contractual relations existed between the opposing parties.

Another allegation set forth that the defendant was guilty of unfair competition because he had used the same paint color scheme on the front of his store. Sabbath replied he used the colors, orange and Green, because they were his favorites.

The injunction suit was dismissed by the ruling of the court.

STATE SUPREME COURT ISSUES WRIT IN SHEAHAN OUSTER CASE

Provisional Rule of Prohibition, Returnable in 90 Days, Prevents Enforcing Removal.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

JEFFERSON CITY, May 2.—A provisional rule of prohibition, restraining Judge John A. Witthaus of St. Louis County Circuit Court from enforcing the ouster of Dr. Edwin L. Sheahan as superintendent of the St. Louis County Hospital, was issued today by the Missouri Supreme Court en banc, returnable in 30 days.

After the return is filed the court will set the case for hearing. Issuance of the writ will prevent any action to oust Dr. Sheahan pending disposition of the prohibition case by the Supreme Court.

The ouster proceedings against Dr. Sheahan, filed by Prosecuting Attorney C. Arthur Anderson of St. Louis County, resulted in a jury verdict last March 7, for ouster of the superintendent.

Counsel for Sheahan in the prohibition proceedings contend Dr. Sheahan was not a county officer, within the meaning of the law governing ouster proceeding, and that therefore the Circuit Court had no jurisdiction to hear the ouster proceeding.

SECOND JURY DISAGREES IN MACON MURDER TRIAL

Last Ballot 9 to 3 for Conviction of James Hunt, who Pleads Self Defense.

By the Associated Press.

MACON, Mo., May 2.—Unable to agree on a verdict, a Macon County Circuit Court jury, which heard the second trial of James Hunt, 48 years old, charged with killing Chester Noland, 42, of St. Joseph, was discharged at 3:15 p. m. today. The first trial also had resulted in a hung jury.

Judge Harry J. Libby discharged the jury after having once sent it back to deliberate further. Later, Foreman William Green reported the jury "could never get together."

Prosecutor L. A. Duval said the case would be tried a third time. "We're going to get an acquittal or a conviction," he said.

Hunt was charged with first degree murder in the Woodland killing of Noland Aug. 22. After Noland was killed his companion, Miss Blanche Stamp, exchanged shots with his assailant. Hunt pleaded self-defense, testifying Noland had fired the first shot at him.

The jury was given the case at 9 o'clock this morning. Jury members said 25 ballots were taken and that the vote on the final was 9 to 3 for conviction. Following the first trial of Hunt last January, jury members said the balloting was 11 to 1 for acquittal.

ANTI-DIPHTHERIA MASS MEETING AT 8:30 TOMORROW

Speakers at Municipal Auditorium Will Discuss Campaign to Be Conducted This Month.

St. Louis' second annual antidiphtheria campaign will be discussed at a mass meeting at 8:30 o'clock tomorrow night at the Municipal Auditorium.

The campaign will be conducted throughout this month in an effort by the Health Department to reduce the number of diphtheria cases in St. Louis each year. Last year 26,000 children were immunized, and health officers say that, as a result, St. Louis dropped from the head of the list of large cities in number of diphtheria cases to fourth place, and from second place to eighth in mortality from the disease. Parents are urged to take their children to the family physician for immunization. In the case of needy families arrangements have been made for immunization at municipal clinics.

Speakers at the mass meeting tomorrow night will be: Dr. Lee D. Cady, president of the St. Louis Medical Society; Mayor Bernard Dickmann; Health Commissioner Joseph F. Bredeck; Director of Public Welfare Joseph M. Darst; Dr. Moyer Fleisher, professor of bacteriology, St. Louis University School of Medicine, and Dr. J. J. Bronfenbrenner, professor of bacteriology, Washington University School of Medicine.

WINNIPEG WHEAT MARKET IS WEAK; AFFECTS OTHERS

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, May 2.—With all Winnipeg deliveries of wheat shattering season bottom price records, and with further generous moisture relief in domestic crop territory, wheat everywhere weakened today.

In view of possibility the United States may produce an exportable surplus of wheat this year, the developments at Winnipeg, where unusual efforts are being made to find an outlet for excessive supplies, were sharply watched. It was emphasized Canada has a large surplus still on hand which would compete with any United States wheat offered for export, and furthermore that present conditions are favorable for seeding of the new crop in Canada.

After a general setback of a cent a bushel, wheat here closed unstable, ⅛@⅝ below yesterday's finish, May 97⅝@¾, July 86¼@⅜, corn ¼@½ down, May 62⅝, oats unchanged to ⅛ off, and provisions unchanged to a rise of 15 cents.

Adding to selling pressure were forecasts the United States hard winter wheat belt would receive considerable more moisture next week. Besides, rains over the spring wheat states are expected to result in rapid germination. From the outset, too, prices were bearishly affected by trade reports that European demand for Canadian wheat is failing to come up to expectations, and that with normal weather hereafter the prospects are for liberal carryover stocks of wheat in the United States July 1 and in Canada Aug. 1.

Particular notice was taken of rains in Oklahoma. Dispatches said much Oklahoma wheat that was in precarious condition had been revived by timely downpours today. A surprising feature was that Chicago May wheat, which closed yesterday at the dead center between the season's high and low, was even weaker at times today than the new crop months, July and September.

Corn, oats and rye sympathized with wheat weakness. July and September rye sold at season new low levels.

Provisions reflected scantiness of offerings.

Wheat futures purchases yesterday totaled 16,272,000 bushels; corn, 2,245,000. Open interest in wheat was 82,791,000 bushels, and in corn 26,342,000.

ST. LOUIS MERCHANTS' EXCHANGE, May 2.—Influenced by the same factors affecting other markets, wheat sold off fractionally on the local board at week's final session. Corn also was lower on asking prices.

Winnipeg wheat opened unchanged to ⅛c lower and early was ½c lower. The close was ½@¾c net lower.

Liverpool wheat opened ⅛@⅝d lower and closed ¼@⅝d off.

Local wheat receipts which were 30,000 bu., compared with 33,000 a week ago and 19,500 a year ago included 15 cars local and 5 through. Corn receipts which were 51,000 bu., compared with 92,000 a week ago and 30,000 a year ago included 26 cars local and 8 through. Oats receipts which were 30,000 bu., compared iwth 34,000 a week ago and 16,000 a year ago, included 8 cars local and 7 through.

In the cash grain market Saturday, soft wheat was steady. Market was quiet. The demand seemed to be only for good quality country run wheat, offerings of which were scarce. A car of No. 2 hard wheat sold to an elevator at sharply reduced premium. Corn was unchanged. Supply was light and with the demand active, offerings quickly cleared. Industries, elevators, shippers and mills all showed interest. Oats were unchanged. Offerings were small. Outside order buyers showed the interest.

MANY-SIDED VIEWS AS TO STOCK PRICE SLUMP BASIS

Market Steadies Somewhat in Closing Sessions of Week — Extreme Dullness Marks Final Trading.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, May 2. — Stocks, thumped down hard early in the week, steadied somewhat in closing sessions. All sort of combinations were trotted out by analysts as reasons for the decline. No two commentators agreed to details or in the relative importance of individual factors, but blanket opinion on which there seemed to be the nearest approach to agreement was somewhat as follows:

The selling was in part self-generating, touched off initially at the beginning of April, it was recallled, and gathering momentum during the past week as the financial district apparently came to realize the truism that a one-way market cannot last forever.

Chart followers of shares expressed their views by pointing out that the selling was a healthy development sloughing off major price chunks which had accumulated in more than a year of virtually constant advance.

Many issues had run uphill too far and too fast in relation to business, some said.

Those who pinned the decline onto more tangible factors said equities had been jolted off their pegs by unsettlement originating in the new tax legislation, the threat to the French franc contained in last Sunday's political swing to the left and fears that the new margin requirements might bring some pressure.

Hard Pressed for Answer.

Observers found themselves hard pressed to explain the downward lurch in stocks in the light of numerous bright spots on both the financial and business horizons.

First quarter earnings of industrial companies were seen to be running about 33 per cent ahead of the like quarter a year ago.

Better than seasonal showing were turned in by automobile production, electric power, carloadings, steel mill activity and home building, further confounding Wall streeters.

Word from the retail trade front was encouraging, with turnover up about 8 to 12 per cent over a year ago aided by favorable weather.

Buttressing the generally good news from these various quarters was the continued evidence of improvement in heavy industry. On this score, however, testimony was mixed.

Railroads still poked around the market for rolling stock, maintenance and repair requirements. Some improvement in the demand for structural steel was noted, but the long-awaited revival of large-scale heavy industrial construction work seemed no nearer.

The bond market was mixed. Rail loans and industrials were down under the same influences as shares. Low-yield issues were steady, aided by another gain in excess reserves. Foreigns, depressed by the new Polish foreign exchange restrictions and other uncertainties, declined to a new low fo rthe year. There was a comeback in Polish issues later.

Dullest Day in Oyer Year.

Most traders gave the stock market the cold shoulder at week's last session and the result was a moderately lower drift and the dullest session since Jan. 29, last year.

Numerous customers, as well as brokers, widened their week-end holiday to take advantage of the summery weather and the Kentucky Derby.

Scattered gold mine issues and specialties came into favor during the latter part of the proceedings, but losses predominated following an irregular start.

With bids lacking in many instances, the list was off 1 to around 3 points at one time. Then prices stiffened, but not sufficiently to prevent a somewhat heavy close.

American Telephone, continuing to reflect the possibility of rate cuts growing out of the Federal inquiry into the company's affairs, dropped to within a shade of its year's low before getting its back against the wall. It finished off ⅜ of a point at 151½.

Analysts attached little significance to the day's desultory performance. Disinterest and the extreme thinness of many issues kept the ticker tape motionless at frequent intervals.

Transfers for the two hours aggregated only 401,800 shares against 536,370 last Saturday. The Associated Press average of 60 stocks was down .3 of a point at 58.3.

The financial district was not so much bearish as indifferent. Then, too, there was a disinclination to step out too far on either the long or short sides in view of impending developments at home and abroad.

Monday, for instance, it was believed likely the Supreme Court will hand down the long-awaited decision in the Guffey Coal Act controversy.

Possibilities Cited.

Tomorrow the run-off in the French elections takes place. If the "Leftists" emerge victorious, some banking circles believe there is a chance of franc devaluation, eventually if not soon. This, it is figured, might cause a flight home of foreign funds now invested in American securities.

There was little change in the trade picture, except that a slight recession was seen in steel production in the Pittsburgh area. Automobile manufacturers were preparing for a banner May month, although output, as estimated by Cram's, was off slightly this week.

Foreign currencies were steady in terms of the dollar and the French franc, notwithstanding shipments of more gold from Paris were arranged, was a trifle firmer.

Bonds held to a restricted groove. Wheat was off ⅛ to ⅝ of a cent a bushel and corn eased ¼ to ½. Cotton was unchanged to up 40 cents a bale.

OUTFLOW OF FRENCH GOLD CONTINUES ON THE EVE OF RUN-OFF ELECTION SUNDAY

Current Movement Reaches $40,000,000 on Latest Engagement of $13,065,000.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, May 2. — The French franc remained firm in foreign exchange markets today despite further gold withdrawals from Paris and uncertainties over the French run-off election Sunday.

In New York the French unit gained .00⅛ of a cent to 6.58½ cents after the dollar had closed in Paris at an equivalent of 6.58 cents.

New York banks were reported to have engaged $13,065,000 in gold from the Bank of France which brought the total outflow on the current movement up to approximately $40,000,000.

Other leading foreign currencies displayed little nervousness over the international financial situation on the eve of the French balloting which has been looked to in some quarters to provide groundwork for some sort of change in the franc's relationship to other currencies.

Some quarters have felt that the franc was over-valued and have expressed the opinion that if the trend of the elections sufficiently favored the so-called "Leftist" groups, the franc would be devalued, a gold embargo would be clamped on, or other steps would be taken to bring it more in line with other units that have undergone some devaluation in recent years.

The British pound sterling closed in New York unchanged at $4.94, Holland guilders were .01 of a cent lower at 67.86 cents, and Swiss francs advanced .04 of a cent to 32.53 cents.

COPPER PRODUCTS PRICES UP

NEW YORK, May 2.—Leading fabricators of copper advanced prices for a wide list of products ¼ of a cent a pound today, the change to be effective Monday.

The principal products affected included copper sheets, roll and strip, drawn copper, brass and other alloys.

Revere Copper & Brass, Inc., American Brass Co. and Chase Brass and Copper Co. joined in the increase.

In copper circles it was said that the advance was simply an adjustment to bring prices to a more profitable level.

It was also pointed out that the increase was due in some measure to higher costs and that it was not related to demand or to the recent advance in the raw copper market.

Foreign Markets.

LIVERPOOL, May 2.—Wheat futures closed easy in sympathy with yesterday's decline in North American markets, improved weather in the Southwest and continental selling of distance options.

Cotton futures closed 3 to 4 points higher. Prices advanced on good trade calling and except for some Bombay selling, offerings were light.

LONDON AND PARIS—Stock exchanges are closed on Saturdays, Paris commencing for summer period.

COMMODITY INDEX AVERAGES

Other statistical data showing economical trend.

NEW YORK, May 2.—Industrial production during the past week advanced to a new top for the year, at the highest level since June, 1930. The Associated Press index of industrial activity today was 87.2.

The latest figure compared with 85.8 in the previous week and 72.9 a year ago. The advance from the February low is in its tenth week and 10.8 per cent above that figure.

All components save cotton manufacturing registered gains.

Steel mill activity continued to push into high ground for the year.

Carloadings were up on increased shipments of coal. Electric power production and residential building improved on the week.

Cotton manufacturing activity slumped abruptly. The trade feels that stocks are unwieldy, that there is small chance of better prices until production is sharply curtailed.

The index and its components, based on the latest available statistics and with 1929-30 as 100, follows:

	Latest wk.	Pr. wk.	Yr. ago

COMMODITY PRICE INDEX.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, May 2.—Commodity prices weakened perceptably during the past week, the Associated Press weighted index of wholesale prices dropping to 73.25 from 74.33 last week and 74.94 in the comparable period a year ago.

The current level of the index establishes a new bottom fo the year and is at the lowest point since the summer softness in 1935.

Net losses on the week were turned in by 15 staples included in the index, six advanced and 14 were unchanged from a week ago.

Items contributing substantially to firm income were the hardest hit. Rains and a subsidence—at least temporarily—of drouth fears tended to dampen the buying enthusiasm noted a few weeks back when cloudless skies ruled the great plains area.

Agricultural commodities were unanimous in seeking lower levels; corn, wheat, oats, rye and cotton reacted similarly to an improved moisture condition in producing states.

Livstock quotations touchd new lows for the year as supplies continued to oustrip the apparent demand. Hogs and cattle shared the downturn, with lambs extending the gains of the past several weeks in response to better retail sales.

Industrial stapls were lower for the most part, only lumber hanging up a higher price. Hides slipped a bit as buyers held off waiting a clarification of the Government policy with respect to the hides in its possession. Rubber, steel scrap and turpentine prices also fell back.

Changes in the wholesale cost of food was mixed although the more heavily weighted declines caused the index to make a new low. Flour, lard and butter absorbed fairly large concessions. Eggs and cocoa were moderately higher.

A slight rise in tin was sufficient to put the non-ferrous metal index in high ground for the year.

Among the textiles, silk was somewhat higher and cotton cloth lower. The latter follows as the logical result of the heavy overstocks that currently beset the industry. The cut in cotton manufacturing activity this week is believed in the trade to be the forerunner of an attempt to correct the inventory situation by curtailing production.

The index, with is component indices based on 1926 as 100, follows:

		May 1.	Prev. Wk.	Year Ago.

NON-FERROUS METAL MARKETS ARE STEADY

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, May 2.—All non-ferrous metal markets held steady in the past week, with lead experiencing relatively the best demand.

Diversified buying of this metal from practically all consuming branches for May and June delivery continued to absorb smelters' daily ore intake. Sales for the week were estimated at 10,000 tons.

Domestic sales of copper for April of 158,064 tons, the largest monthly total since sales have been reported, were booked early in the month prior to the ¼ cent advance and were said to represent trade needs for three months, on an average.

Business was restricted at the unchanged price of 96 cents for electrolytic. Foreign demand, however, was fairly active at slightly easier prices. Buying from France spurted when devaluation talk was renewed, it was said.

Tin was quiet but steady, with buying of limited supplies of spots and slightly more liberal offers of forward shipment metal causing the spot premium to widen. The April statistics were said to reflect a favorable position, with world stocks declining and American deliveries increasing.

Zinc remained quiet at unchanged prices. Relatively good shipments against old orders owing to active galvanizing operations continued as a favorable factor. New buying, however, was small and unfilled orders on smelters' books were said to be gradually diminishing.

Antimony also was quiet at unchanged quotations. Reports were received in the trade that the Chinese control agency had effected a reduction in production.

The rate of steel ingot production was being maintained at around 70 per cent of capacity, but the trade was conjecturing as to whether a seasonal leveling off in operations would shortly occur—somewhat later than last year. Buying was fairly well sustained and was well diversified.

FINANCIAL BAROMETER.

WASHINGTON, May 2.—The Treasury has drawn about $400,000,000 since March from its "general account" at the Federal Reserve Banks to meet the excess of expenditures over receipts. The shift has been reflected in a sharp climb in demand deposits of member banks for account of individuals and corporations, mainly, and a corrsponding gain in reserves of the banks.

Cash payment of the bonus next month is expected to accelerate the rise in demand deposits.

Treasury cash in the "general account" at the Reserve Banks compared as follows:

Week ended April 29	$679,000,000
Preceding week	712,000,000
Same week last year	76,000,000

On April 1 the bonds of these cities showed an average yield of 3.03 per cent, which represented a record high average price level.

DOWNWARD SWING TO LOCAL STOCK LIST

One or Two Sharp Losses but Declines Generally Are Fractional.

The local stock market had a lower swing last week, reflecting the situation on the Big Board, but the volume of business was materially under that of the preceding week and net price changes, except in several instances, were only fractional.

The largest turnover was in American Investment "B" which sold both higher and lower. The sharpest drop was in Burkart which closed 8 points lower.

Boston Wool Market.

BOSTON, May 2.—(U. S. Dept. of Agriculture.)—The quoted prices on domestic wools in the Boston market during the past week were mostly steady or only slightly lower than during the previous week. The volume of trading was not sufficient to indicate a fully established market. Sentiment as to the outlook for the market was mixed. Strictly combing Ohio fleeces were quoted mostly at 33@35c in the grease for fine, at 34@35c for ½ blood, and at 35@37c for ⅜ and ¼ blood grades. A little business was transacted in the last two grades at prices on the low side of the market.

BOND TRADE SMALLEST SINCE LAST AUGUST

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, May 2.—Narrow price swings ruled in the bond market today in the most restricted trading for a two-hour session since last August.

Sharp recovery in the recently depressed Polish bonds provided a bright spot. The Government 7s bounded up 6 points to 90, the 6s were 4 higher at 70 and the 8s closed 2⅝ up at 82⅝. Strength was attributed to short covering, after an oversold condition had developed following the currency restrictions decreed by the Polish Government early in the week.

In the domestic corporate list, firm spots included Anaconda 4½s at 103¾, International Telephone 4½s at 75¾, Pacific Gas & Electric 5s at 103, Missouri Pacific 5s at 28 and United Drug 5s at 100¼.

Losers of minor amounts included Chesapeake Corporation 5s, St. Paul 5s, Philadelphia Company 5s, Postal Telegraph 5s, Southern Railway 4s and Studebaker 6s.

On a turnover of but $270,000, par value, U. S. Governments ranged 2-32ds higher for Treasury 3¼s of 1944 to 7-32ds lower for the 3¼s of 1943. Indirect obligations were the most active, but changes were extremely small in all issues except Home Owners Loan 2¼s, which dropped 5-32ds to 101.4 on a single sale.

The Associated Press averages were .4 of a point higher for the foreign group to .1 of a point lower for the low-yields.

Total sales were $3,630,000, par value, the smallest for a two-hour session since Aug. 31, 1935, and compared with $4,781,000 last Saturday.

CURB GENERALLY LOWER IN WEEK-END MARKET

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, May 2.—The rank and file of Curb Market stocks sought slightly lower levels in today's brief session.

A few firm spots here and there among the industrial specialties and aircraft stocks formed the principal feature of trading. Strength of the latter group was ascribed to passage by the House of Representatives of the naval appropriations bill providing for more than 300 planes in 1937.

Issues closing minor fractions to around a point lower included American Gas at 34⅞, Creole Petroleum at 27⅛, Electric Bond & Share at 17⅝, United Gas at 7¾ and United Light & Power preferred at 38.

Gainers including Pan-American Airways, Fairchild, Sunshine Mining and Hudson Bay.

Transfers of 106,000 shares compared with 125,000 last Saturday.

WASHINGTON NOTES

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, May 2.—The dollar volume of orders for electrical goods reported to the census bureau by 78 manufacturers for the first quarter was the highest for that period since 1930. The total rose to $153,452,432 compared with $121,814,226 in the comparable period last year and $236,329,000 in the 1930 period. The low was about $58,000,000 in the first quarter of 1933.

The Department of Commerce says "available statistics indicate that aggregate factory output for April will be above that of March." It adds that ordinarily there is little change in production over this period.

More than twice as much peas, corn and peaches moved out of canners' hands in the first three months of this year as in the corresponding 1935 period, the Commerce Department reports. A representative group of 439 wholesale distributors showed combined holdings of six leading canned food items on April 1 about 7 per cent higher than on the same date last year.

New orders for steel office furniture reported to the census bureau by 49 manufacturers increased to $4,712,413 in the first three months compared with $3,514,729 in the initial quarter last year. The March total was $1,667,231 against $1,222,406 in the 1935 month.

The Commerce Department's March index of world prices of foodstuffs and raw materials stood at 50.3 per cent of the 1923-25 level compared with 50.5 in February and 45.7 in March last year. Compared with a year ago, outstanding gains were registered by rubber, wheat, silk, sugar and tea. Coffee and cotton were lower.

Boot and shoe production, as reported to the Census Bureau, fell off somewhat in March, but for the first quarter was 3.7 per cent larger compared with the corresponding 1935 periods. Output by 934 factories of boots, shoes and slippers for the month totaled 33,595,671 pairs, compared with 34,228,167 in March, 1935. For the first quarter the total was 98,158,110, against 94,667,174 in the comparable period last year. The figures covered 98 per cent of the industry's production.

A gain of 2 per cent in the dollar volume of retail sales in March, compared with the same month last year is shown in reports to the Commerce Department from 801 concerns. Substantial gains in sales of automotive products, lumber and hardware offset declines in food, general merchandise and coal and ice groups.

Indications of sustained trade improvement were seen in an increase of about $40,000,000 last month compared with April, 1935, in Treasury collections of miscellaneous internal revenue, which includes liquor, tobacco, gasoline and other levies on important articles of consumption.

A sharp increase in new orders for steel boilers in the first quarter of this year was reported to the Census Bureau by 68 manufacturers. They totaled 2,023,427 square feet of heating surface, compared with 1,322,572 in the first quarter last year and 836,643 in the corresponding 1934 period. The March total was 589,676, against 647,062 in the like 1935 month.

Commerce Department figures for March on consumption of raw wool in this country reflect a further slowing of operations in the industry following the unusually high peak reached in the second half of last year.

PROFITS OF WAR CAUSE WAR, SAYS SENATOR CLARK

Tells Womens' International League Session Powder Magazine Is Being Prepared in Africa.

TRADE PACTS AS AID TO PEACE ADVOCATED

Henry F. Grady of State Department Outlines Views — George Lansbury to Speak Today.

United States Senator Bennett C. Clark of Missouri and Henry F. Grady, chief of the Division of Trade Agreements of the State Department, discussed present threats to world peace last night at the annual meeting of the Women's International League for Peace and Freedom at Hotel Chase.

Senator Clark declared the primary cause of war was private profits derived from it while Grady discussed economic nationalism as a prime incentive.

The meeting opened Friday and will close tomorrow. The principal event of today's program is to be a mass meeting at 3 p. m. at Soldan High School, 918 North Union boulevard, at which an address will be made by George Lansbury, member of the British Parliament and formerly parliamentary leader of the British Labor party.

"Powder Magazine Prepared."

"The powder magazine again has been prepared," Clark said, adding after a brief pause, "in Africa. The preliminaries already have taken place. A casual act may set it off, yet the world stands complacently by awaiting a catastrophe which obliterate civilization.

"The United States is not blameless in the present situation. During the depression we have spent more than $1,000,000,000 for warships, possibly precipitating a naval race that may be ruinous. The pending naval bill provides for the largest peace-time appropriation in the history of this or any other country.

"The expenditures for capital warships are carefully camouflaged in the pending naval bill. The blanket appropriation for replacements does not show what the people are being taxed for. This year our expenditures for another ad more dreadful war may reach $1,500,000,000.

Armament Expenditures.

"Last year the world expenditures for armament amounted to between $6,000,000,000 and $8,000,000,000 and at the present rate world powers will go bankrupt in a few years even without a war."

Attributing the economic depression to the World War, Senator Clark said it had served as a preventive of further rconflict.

"Private profit," he continued, "is the primary cause of war. Disarmament is the only road to permanent peace and in that alone lies the hope of the world."

In his address, Grady praised the trade agreements program undertaken by the State Department under the Trade Agrements Act of June 12, 1934. Trade agreement offers have been made to 18 nations, he said, and agreements have been concluded with 12. The principle of these agreements he described as follows: "Any favor granted to one country is extended unconditionally and automatically to all countries which likewise extend to us any favors which are granted to third countries."

The purpose of the program, he said, is to increase international trade and he thought that would tend to promote peace. This program contemplates that in the long-run the United States should import goods and services equal to its exports.

Cause of Trade Barriers.

Describing the desire of nations to be economically self-sufficient as the cause of erection of trade barriers, he continued:

"The evils of economic nationalism are visited not only upon those countries which choose to be self-sufficient. The import barriers raised by the countries desiring economic isolation are a disrupting factor in world trade in general. The other countries, being thus deprived of foreign markets, must seek new markets elsewhere with the result that competition in international commerce is increased, and prices become depressed. As a result of the decline in world trade, the countries which have neither desired nor sought to become economically isolated find themselves so isolated nevertheless.

"Such conditions of world depression result in a desperate struggle among nations to grasp what foreign markets remain. Each country seeks special treatment of its commerce by the other. Those countries which are discriminated against by a regime of special privilege find their world markets further limited. They retaliate with discriminatory restrictions.

"Thus economic nationalism imposes a strain on international good will. It leads to commercial warfare and finally in all likelihood to armed conflict. The competition in import restrictions is as dangerous to world peace as is the rivalry in military armaments. There must be economic disarmament if future wars are to be prevented. Peace and prosperity are hardly possible under conditions of aggressive economic nationalism."

Grady named the following countries as having concluded new trade agreements with the United States: Belgium, Sweden, Switzerland, the Netherlands, Cuba, Brazil, Haiti, Colombia, Honduras, Nicaragua, Guatemala and Canada. He did not describe the terms of any of these agreements.

Measure of Foreign Trade.

The speaker thought the fact that exports provide a market for 10 per cent, or less, of total American production was not a true measure of the importance of foreign trade. Using 1929 figures, he pointed out that exports took 55 per cent of the cotton, 40 per cent of the tobacco, 33 per cent of the lard, 18 per cent of the wheat, 30 per cent of office appliances, 28 per cent of printing machinery, 30 per cent of sewing machines, 25 per cent of agricultural machinery and 14 per cent of the automobiles. He did not quote figures for any later years.

His only reference to tariffs was a statement that they, "in themselves are not a cause of war," but that, "when they become instruments of national self-sufficiency and are used to obstruct and divert the natural course of world trade they lead to commercial warfare and unfriendly relations among nations."

Educational Activities.

Reports of the chairmen of the peace league's committees were presented at sessions of the convention during the day.

A luncheon was held at the hotel for the delegates and visiting members of the organization. A panel discussion of the problems of war and peace was given by six young St. Louisans, members of local peace groups. Another business session will be held this morning, followed by a luncheon at which speakers will discuss the early history of the peace league and its work in Central America.

Texas Poison Case Given to Jury.

By the Associated Press.

GREENVILLE, Tex., May 2.—After a State plea for the death penalty, a jury of farmers began deliberations late today in the case of Mrs. Velma Patterson, 34 years old, accused of poisoning two small daughters. She was tried for the death of her older daughter, Dorothy McCasland, 12. The State charged she was carrying on an affair with a cattleman and decided the children interfered with it.

By J. Roy Stockton.

William Henry Walker, the stylish southpaw from East St. Louis, joined the ranks of winning Cardinal pitchers at Sportsman's Park yesterday afternoon and had the honor of pitching the Redbirds into first place by daubing the Dodgers with their second successive coat of whitewash, 4 to 0.

Walker, who narrowly escaped being separated from the Cardinal roster during the winter, was in excellent form. He held the Dodgers to six hits in a hurling duel with Fred Frankhouse and while he walked one batter and hit two in the shortribs with pitched balls, he showed encouraging stamina by finishing strong and displayed fine control as he cut the corners of the plate with his deceptive curves.

Redbirds Show Fine Defense.

Frankhouse was almost as good as the Pride of the Stock Yards. He, too, turned in a six-hit performance. But he was wilder than usual, walking seven men, and the Redbirds, eager to prolong the winning streak and assume the lead in the pennant race, made their safeties count and turned two of the passes into runs. Then another factor in the struggle was the superior defense that the rampant Redbirds threw around their pitcher. They played an errorless game, while an error by Jimmy Bucher, the Dodger third sacker, helped the Frisch forces to two of their runs.

A pass to Durocher to start the third inning started the Cardinals on their way to victory. Walker

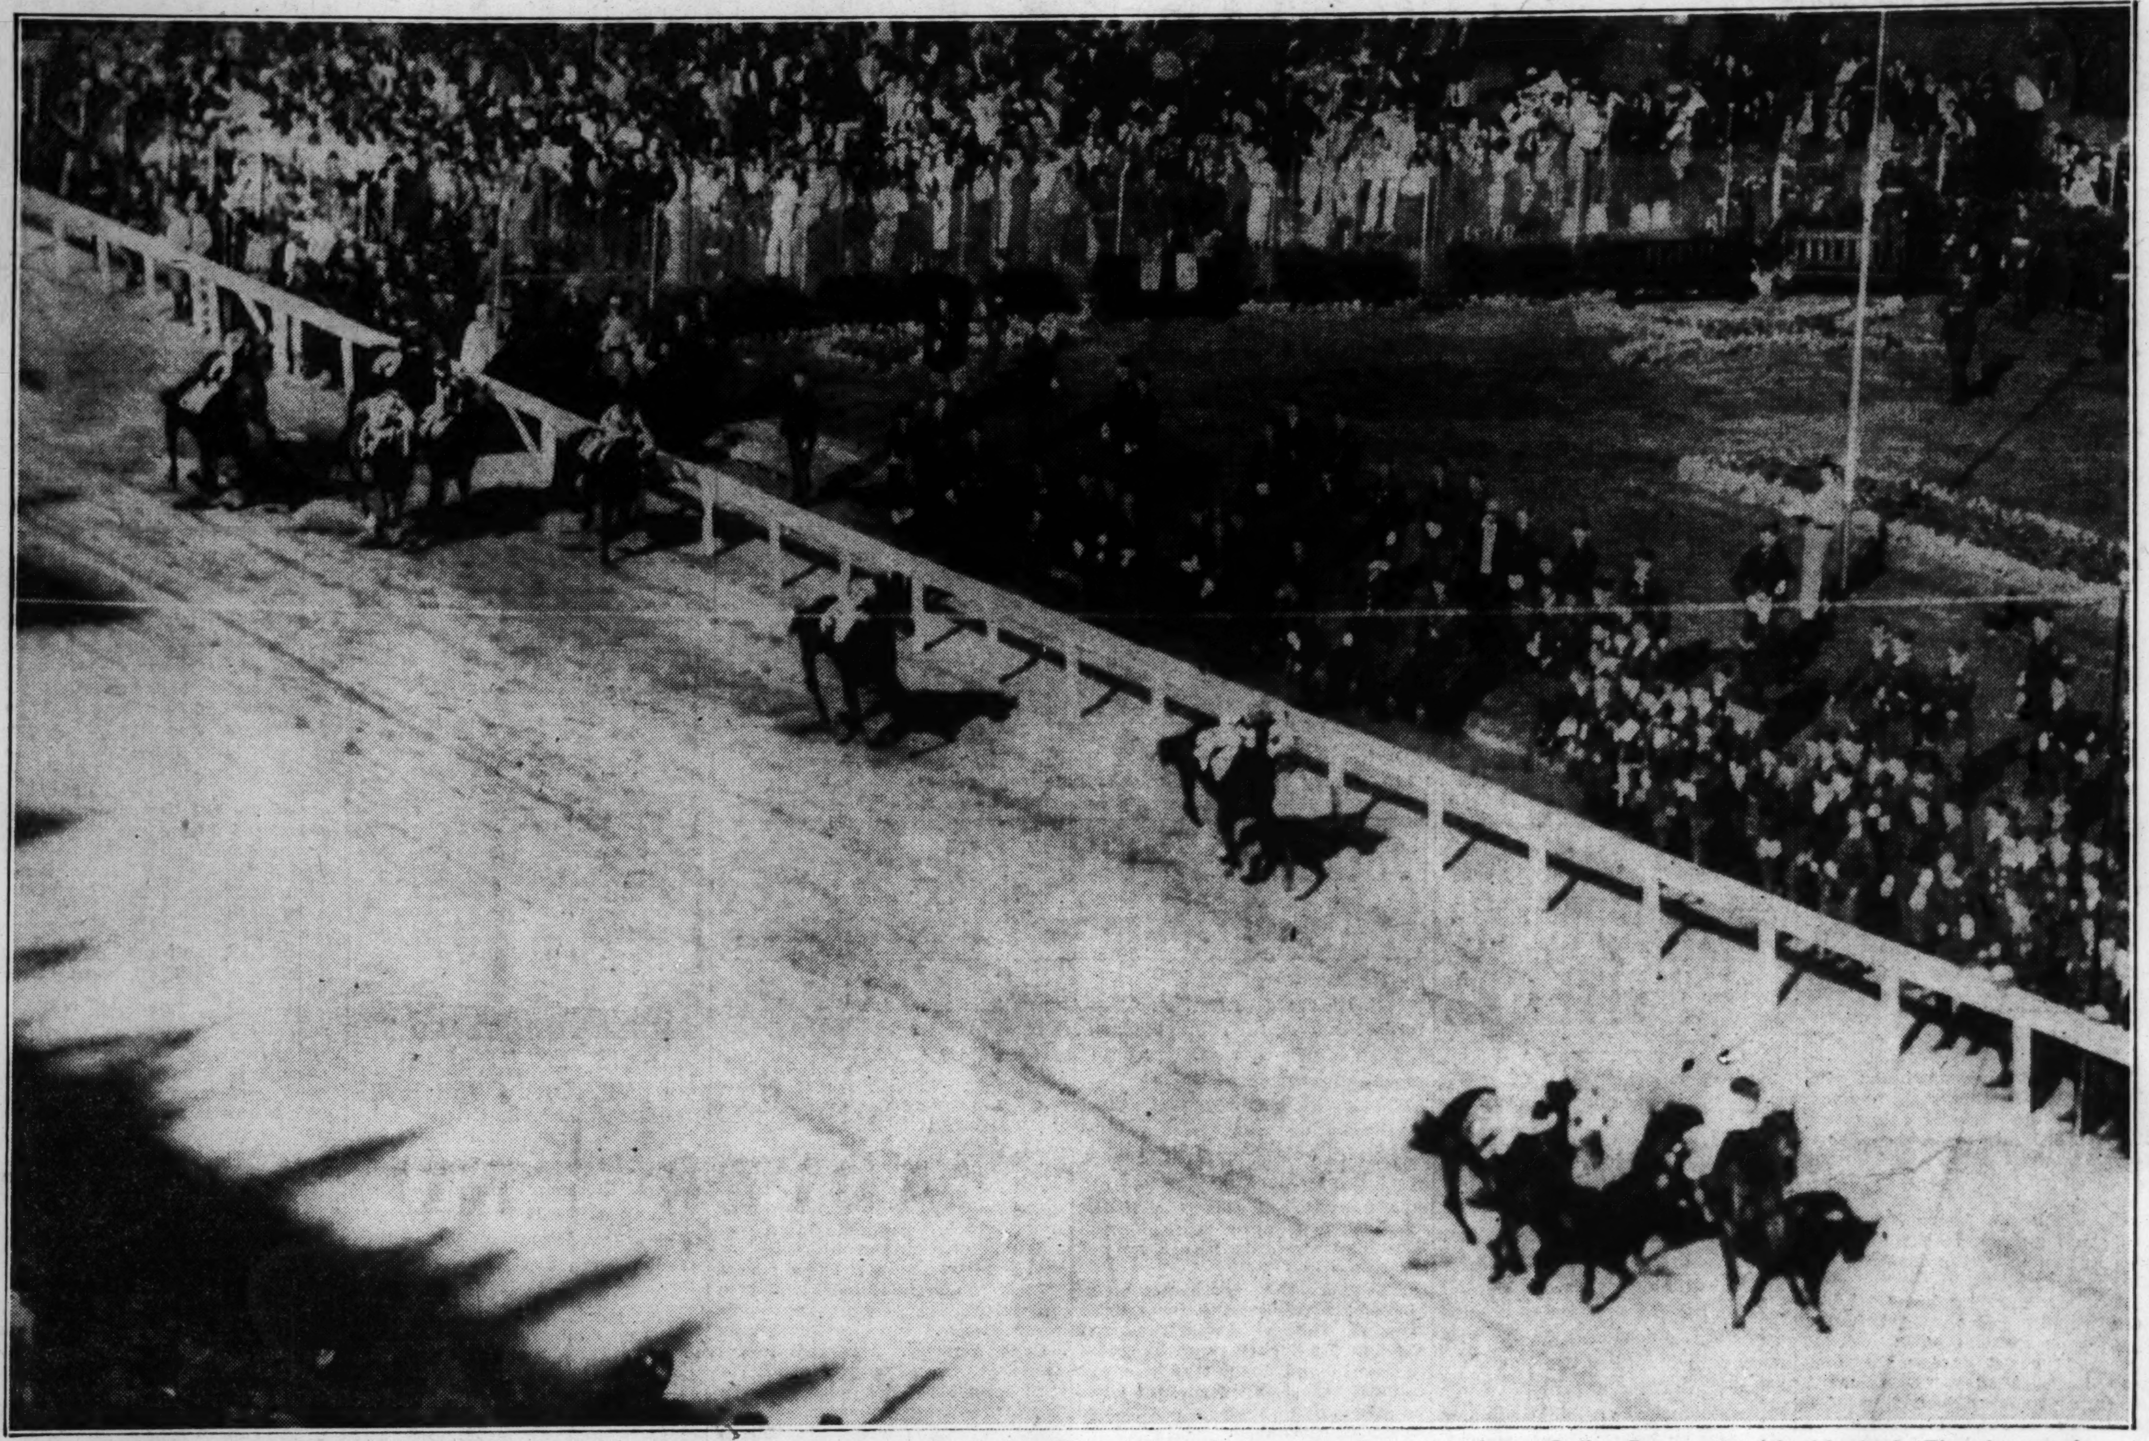
BOLD VENTURE WINS KENTUCKY DERBY BY A HEAD; BREVITY FINISHES SECOND

End of the 62nd Derby, as Seen From the Top of Churchill Downs Clubhouse



Here's Bold Venture winning the Kentucky Derby by a head yesterday at Louisville, Ky., with Brevity second and the next horse, Indian Broom, three lengths back. The photograph was made from above the track and was transmitted by the Associated Press over its portable wirephoto set, atop the clubhouse at Churchill Downs.

VICTOR IS RIDDEN BY APPRENTICE; PAYS $43

$1,269,087 Bet at the Downs; $472,750 on Derby

By the Associated Press.

LOUISVILLE, Ky., May 2.

THE Courier-Journal says in a copyrighted story that $472,750 was bet on the Kentucky Derby today, $72,504 more than the amount which went through the mutuel windows on last year's Derby.

The amount bet on all eight races today at Churchill Downs, the story says, was $1,269,075, as compared to $1,018,472 in 1935.

By the Associated Press.

LOUISVILLE, Ky., May 2.—Bold Venture, the longest shot winner in 18 years, survived a rough-and-tumble thoroughbred battle as well as a thrilling stretch drive today to capture the sixty-second Kentucky Derby at Churchill Downs before the greatest crowd ever gathered for America's most spectacular horse race.

To the astonishment of the overflow throng of 62,000 spectators and confusion of the form players, Bold Venture stood off a terrific stretch challenge from Brevity, the 4-to-5 favorite, and won by a scant head in a hard-driving, whip-lashing climax to the struggle of three-year-olds.

Owned by Morton L. Schwartz, New York sportsman, Bold Venture paid $43 for each $2 mutuel ticket, as well as $11.80 to place and $6.60 to show. The winner's price, equivalent to $20.50 on the dollar, was the biggest since Exterminator, the celebrated "Old Bones" of the turf, flashed home in front in 1918 and paid the equivalent of $29.60 to one.

Bold Venture's victory, worth $37,725 to the colt's owner, out of a total Derby purse of $48,150, climaxed a startling sequence of events, all packed into slightly more than two minutes of thrilling excitement, stunning surprise and uncompromising tactics.

Winning Jockey Suspended.

So bitterly waged was this battle of speed and stamina, as the 14 horses sprang from the stall gates, that William Woodward's Granville, one of the prime choices, lost his jockey, while the highly favored Brevity was nearly knocked off his feet at the outset, and Ira (Babe) Hanford, the winning rider, was promptly suspended for rough riding, along with two other jockeys.

It didn't alter the outcome of the race, but it capped the climax of another highly disputed running of the Bluegrass classic as the riders of three of the first four horses were set down, each for 15 days, as a consequence of their tactics. Suspended along with the youthful Hanford were George Burns, who rode Indian Broom, hope of the Far West, into third place, six lengths behind Brevity, and Nick Wall, who took fourth place with C. B. Shaffer's Coldstream, three lengths further back.

Most of the rough riding and Greater Than Rickard.

TEX RICKARD'S promotional laurels are in danger. Mike Jacobs, whose campaigning of Joe Louis has brought him to the front, is crowding Tex right out of his niche in the Hall of Fame.

When Tex came up, the cash customer world, as far as big fights were concerned, was virgin. Big fights were still a novelty to the public at large.

JACOBS.

When Rickard first startled the world with an attraction that drew $1,600,000, the Carpentier-Dempsey mill, he had as bait for his $40 ringside ticket, a world champion with a tremendous kayo record opposed to a World War hero.

Estimates of the gate for the coming Joe Louis-Max Schmeling fight reach a million and a half. The $40 ringside ticket, under the promotion of Jacobs, will be pulling a comeback. But his attraction hardly compares with the one Rickard offered. And besides the world has become a bit blase in the matter of big fights.

Louis is not even a champion while Schmeling is a beaten titleholder. The man who defeated him by a knockout, Max Baer, was himself an easy knockout victim for Louis. No title is at stake.

And yet there is reason to believe the Jacobs show "gate" will really equal the famous Carpentier-Dempsey fight receipts. The only explanation is that the public is eager to see Louis, the hero of a sensational rise in a day of decadent heavyweights.

Has Schmeling a Chance?

THE match, in the estimation of some, is not one that gives much hope that the German will stop the upward thrust of this young Negro fighter. Nothing in Schmeling's career stamps him as great.

But he is game, can hit a little bit. Nobody ever saw Scheml-

Washington U. Shows A Fine Track Team, Overwhelming Bills

By Reno Hahn

Washington University displayed one of the best-balanced track teams ever to represent that institution yesterday afternoon when it swamped St. Louis University's first-year squad, 108-23, winning first place in every event.

It wasn't the fact that Washington decisively defeated the Billikens, competing for the first time in a dual meet, that alone caused comment, but the times and distances recorded by the Bears' athletes were far better than those made in past years. About 400 spectators were attracted to Francis Field by the event. It was the first meeting between the Bears and Billikens in track.

There was only one race in which the Billikens were close to the Bears. In that event, last of the day, the one-mile relay, the Billikens held a ten-yard lead going into the last quarter-mile, but Lackland Bloom, running anchor for Washington, steadily cut down that distance and with a last thrust at the tape beat out Bob Wilson and shut out the Billikens without a single victory.

Fast Times Recorded.

Proof that Washington has a good team was furnished by the times and distances themselves. For the 100-yard dash, 9.8 seconds by Ed Waite; for the 220-yard dash, 21.4 seconds by Waite; for the two-mile run, 10 minutes, 5.5 seconds by Frank Wright, and so on. The Bears were not so strong in the field events, but they had sufficient strength to out-score the Billikens.

The result in the 440-yard dash was somewhat of a surprise, for Bob Wilson of the Billikens was favored to win, having run the quarter mile in 51 seconds in practice. But Wilson was never able to threaten Butler Bushy's lead and Lackland Bloom of Washington and the two Bears joined hands as they crossed the finish line, five feet ahead of Wilson.

Wright's time in the two-mile run

Even Winner's Owner Was In a Hurry

By the Associated Press.

LOUISVILLE, Ky., May 2.

A SLENDER man with graying hair and joyous eyes dashed up to the paddock gate a few seconds after the Kentucky Derby was run.

"How can I get to my horse? How can I get to Bold Venture?" he gasped.

"Right through here Mr. Schwartz, congrat—" replied the gate keeper. But he never finished because, the Derby winner's owner shoved through and made off for the track at a pace that would have done credit to his 18-year-old jockey, Ira Hanford.

Browns Lose, 9 to 4, To Senators; Seventh Successive Defeat

By James M. Gould

Of the Post-Dispatch Sports Staff.

WASHINGTON, May 2.—There was an air of semi-respectability to the play of the Browns this afternoon but the net result was the same and Hornsby's team—right now, the most consistent club in the league—dropped their seventh straight game when the Washington Senators cleaned up the short series by taking the final contest by a score of 9 to 4.

The outfield defense—Solters had two errors on one play—still was far "off" and the pitching continued to go "round and round" as did opposing base-runners but the Browns did a bit of hitting which, at least was an encouraging sign.

Van Atta Unable to Hold Lead.

Van Atta, Mahaffey and Thomas did what was politely called "the pitching" for the Browns and all were scored upon, though Thomas, working the two final innings, was more sinned against than sinning. The Browns gave Van Atta a two-run lead in the early innings but the southpaw went berserk in the third when he walked three men and allowed a triple and a single to score four runs. The Browns never really threatened after that. Mahaffey had two bad and one good inning.

Solters, with a triple and a double, Carey with three singles and Pepper with a pair of one-baggers, led the St. Louis attack.

Even the White Sox and the Cleveland Indians recorded their first 1936 victories in the East today, but the Browns, bless their consistent souls, continued their merry way along the defeat lane which seems, for them, to have no turning.

Browns Score in Double Steal.

The Browns started off encouragingly enough with a run in the first and another in the second. Bottomley drove Lary in in the first and a double and a double steal engineered by Clift and Carey accounted for the tally in the second frame. The pitching of Van Atta was encouraging, too, at first.

He had no trouble in the first two frames but passed out of focus in the third in a very queer manner—at least, there were odd moments. He handed Whitehill a pass at the start and then proceeded neatly to strike out both Hill and Lewis. He looked to be out of the inning but his old curse of wildness voodooed him, and after he had filled the bases with passes to Myer and Travis, Reynolds doubled and Powell singled for four runs and a two

Bold Venture, $43.00 win, $11.80 place, $6.60 show; Brevity, $5.00 place, $4.00 show; Indian Broom, $3.80 show.

Bold Venture, in close quarters immediately after the start, began to improve his position fast on the outside after about three-eighths took an easy lead approaching the final half mile and holding on with fine courage under strong handling withstood Brevity's bid. Latter, probably best and knocked to his knees within a few strides after the start, had to race wide thereafter; improved his position gradually and closing resolutely was wearing down Bold Venture. Indian Broom, badly blocked in the first quarter, raced to a contending position quickly when clear made a bid entering the stretch and weakened in the last three sixteenths. Coldstream lost ground while showing speed and failed to keep up. Bien Joli was jostled about on the far turn and did not threaten thereafter. Holl Image began slowly. He Did had speed for a mile. Teufel showed nothing. Gold Seeker was outrun. Merry Pete was bumped when swerving soon after the start. The Fighter began well but failed to stay after about three quarters. Grand Slam crossed to inside approaching first turn and showed speed for about five eighths. Granville unseated his rider when in close quarters shortly after the start. Went to post at 4:41, at post 4½ minutes. Fourteen started. Time—2:03 3-5.

BOLD VENTURE WINS DERBY BY HEAD FROM BREVITY

VICTOR'S RIDER SUSPENDED FOR 15 DAYS DUE TO ROUGH WORK

bumping took place in the first dash down the stretch while the field battled for positions before reaching the first turn. Brevity, knocked to his knees within a few strides of the start, got all the worst of the early going and lost many lengths before Jockey Wayne Wright could settle the favorite into his stride. Indian Broom, too, absorbed a share of bumping and was likewise in the ruck as the pack raced past the stands for the first time, with He Did and Coldstream on top.

Bold Venture was off slowly, but quickly sprinted to a forward position, gained command in the long run down the back stretch, and had sufficient margin in the final stretch drive to stand off Brevity's gallant challenge.

Two-Horse Finish.

With both Hanford and Wright going to the whip, it was strictly a two-horse finish over the last quarter mile. Bold Venture had a length, as the colt straightened out for the long run home, and looked like a decisive winner until the last eighth. Brevity had already closed a tremendous gap to pull into second place, coming into the last turn, and the favorite went down fighting.

With a sixteenth to go, Brevity was a half length behind and gaining with every stride. Bold Venture hung on gamely, to nod his head under the wire first but it was just as well they didn't have to travel more than the regulation mile and a quarter. Brevity was flying, clearly the stronger of the two, and would have won in a few strides.

On a track that was like lightning, Bold Venture was clocked in 2:03 3-5, fastest time for the Derby since Twenty Grand lowered the record to 2:01 4-5 in 1931 and the third fastest Derby of all time. Old Rosebud, winner in 1914 in 2:03 2-5, was the only other to turn in faster time than the colt that upset a whole bucketful of "dope" today under the balmiest conditions marking the big race in years.

Trained astutely by Max Hirsch and undoubtedly brought right up to the proverbial "pink" for today's race, Bold Venture needed to make no apologies to his equine rivals Brevity may have been the best horse in the field but Bold Venture's performance, under the conditions marking the race, was something to write about. The stout son of St. Germans-Possible had the speed to escape too much early trouble and the stamina to beat a colt that has been compared this spring to Man O' War and which was rated absolutely the class of this year's Derby field.

Widener's Jinx.

There was nothing to indicate that any others in the race, with the possible exception of Granville, could give the one-two finishers any argument. Coldstream, despite early speed, failed to capitalize early advantages and had no alibis. Bien Joli, which was the lone standard-bearer of E. R. Bradley, after Banister was scratched, finished fifth after being jostled around on the far turn. It was at this point that Hanford, with Bold Venture, was accused of rough tactics for the second time. Bold Venture cut sharply in front of both Brevity and Indian Broom. There was no bumping but the maneuver appeared to have been costly to the favorite. All told, it looked as though the Derby "jinx" was still working over-time to checkmate Widener, Eastern sportsman, whose colors have triumphed in nearly every other classic except this one. The setback for Brevity today followed the ill-luck that pursued Widener with such fine horses as Osmand, Peace Chance and Chance Sun.

Granville's jockey, Jimmy Stout, was thrown during a jam opposite the stands, within the first quarter mile. The Woodward colt, which was third choice, coupled with Teufel and Merry Pete, was well forward in the early running. After the mishap, the riderless colt continued on and trailed the Derby field over the entire route.

Brevity, the shortest priced favorite since Twenty Grand, returned only $5 for each mutuel ticket to place and $4 to show. Indian Broom, a 5-to-1 shot and the well-backed second choice at post time, paid $3.80 to show. Their consolation share of the purse was $6000 and $3000, respectively, while the fourth place $1000 went to Coldstream's owner.

With better racing luck, Indian Broom might have made it a three-cornered battle but the Canadian-owned colt, the property of Major Austin C. Taylor of Vancouver, never had much chance to display the speed that carried him to a world record for one mile and an eighth this spring in California. The "Indian" worked up quickly, when clear of early interference, but did not have the speed, under 126 pounds, to challenge either Brevity or Bold Venture after they came off the last turn.

Filly Never a Contender.

The only filly in the race, Gold Seeker, was never a contender and finished ninth. Grand Slam, the Bomar colt which carried the hopes of the Detroit contingent, failed to find the fast track to his liking and faded after going well for five-eighths, finishing no better than twelfth. Heavy overnight rains had raised the hopes of Grand Slam's backers, knowing the colt's fondness for mud, but these hopes were promptly dissipated by the fact the Downs escaped all but a few drops of the rain.

This freakish circumstance, plus the fact that the weather was balmy all day, turned the racing strip into lightning-fast condition for the Derby. It accounted for the heavy support of Indian Broom, a sprinter, as well as the favored Brevity, which had won five previous races on fast tracks and was well known to prefer anything but a sticky track.

It was a dazzling beautiful picture, with the gay throng jamming the stands and all enclosures, as the field of 14 surviving three-year-olds paraded to the post. A military band played "My Old Kentucky Home," instead of a phonograph record, and the pageantry of the whole setting eclipsed anything produced in boom days.

During the long delay at the barrier, the crowd waited tensely, peering through hundreds of 50-cent periscopes and cramming every point of vantage, before letting loose the roar "they're off!" The roar gained volume as the horses came down the stretch in a thick cloud of dust and confusion. There was a quick gasp as Granville's rider, Jockey Stout, rolled from the saddle, bounced clear of flying hoofs and picked himself up, unhurt. There was a steady rumble and babble as the fight for positions continued around the first turn, with Bold Venture the first to get commandingly on top.

The Race.

Looking for their favorites, the crowd gloomily watched Brevity go past no better than ninth the first time, just behind Bold Venture, with Indian Broom sixth. He Did was slightly in front through the first quarter, with Coldstream in pursuit, followed by Grand Slam, Bien Joli and The Fighter. They were well bunched, however, and Bold Venture's fast move around the first turn quickly put the Schwartz colt in a contending spot. Indian Broom also came up fast.

At three quarters, it was Bold Venture, Indian Broom and Brevity, all within three lengths of each other, with He Did now fourth, Coldstream fifth and Bien Joli sixth. Despite interference, Brevity overhauled Indian Broom as they negotiated the last turn, but was still a length behind the pace-setter as they straightened out for the stretch run. Indian Broom dropped two lengths behind Brevity, with He Did hanging on to fourth, Coldstream fifth and Bien Joli sixth.

That was the way they straightened out for the final test, in which Bold Venture had the stamina and courage to stand off Wright's stirring drive with Brevity. Indian Broom, while losing ground steadily, had no trouble keeping third place as Coldstream overtook Bien Joli.

The order of finish, with margins; first, Bold Venture by a head; second, Brevity, six lengths; third, Indian Broom, three lengths; fourth, Coldstream, five lengths; fifth, Bien Joli, a head; sixth, Holl Image, four lengths; seventh, He Did, a head; eighth, Teufel, a head; ninth, Gold Seeker, four lengths; tenth, Merry Pete, six lengths; eleventh, The Fighter, five lengths; twelfth, Grand Slam, ten lengths; thirteenth, Sangreal.

YANKS' STREAK IS STOPPED BY WHITE SOX

NEW YORK, May 2.—Two streaks were snapped today as the Chicago White Sox topped the New York Yankees, 6 to 4, in the final of their two-game series.

The victory shattered the Sox string of eight straight losses and the defeat ended the five-game Yankee winning streak.

Zeke Bonura and Babe Phelps drove in two runs each for the winners, with the other two tallies off Charley Ruffing unearned. Ruffing was unusually wild. Giving up six bases on balls. Phelps, who relieved Stratton in the seventh, received credit for the victory.

Frankie Crosetti, peppery Yank shortstop, continued his heavy hitting, getting three hits in four attempts, including a home run, and driving in all the Yankee runs.

Jockey First "Bug" Rider to Win, Surprised at Suspension

By the Associated Press.

LOUISVILLE, Ky., May 2.—Apprentice Jockey Ira "Babe" Hanford of Omaha, first "bug" rider ever to win the Kentucky Derby, says Bold Venture won easily, could do it again. "And what do they mean, rough riding?"

The 18-year-old brown-haired lad captured his first Derby in a stretch duel that never has been excelled at Churchill Downs. He was unperturbed over the 15-day suspension clamped down by the Kentucky stewards before he got his colors off.

Although the sentence, unexplained save by the two words "rough riding," was shouted through the jockey room he failed to hear it and did not know about it until reporters asked him what he was going to do with the two weeks' vacation.

"They suspended me? You mean they set me down?" Ira's brown eyes opened wide and his mouth twitched. "Well, I guess I'll go out in the barn and spend the 15 days feeding sugar to that horse."

Apprentice Shows 'Em.

Not until July 25 will the asterisk be dropped from in front of Ira's mounts on the race cards, signifying that they are allowed five pounds off their proper weight because their riders are "inexperienced." Yet today he showed how it's done to such veterans as Sonny Workman, Nick Wall and Uncle Mack Garner.

"He won easily," Ira said of Bold Venture. "He had plenty of stuff left at the finish, but we didn't need it.

"Of course we got off to a bad start. Bold Venture almost fell as we came out of the barrier. Granville, which was on the inside of me, fell there and I had some trouble getting by him. I was afraid Bold Venture would brush into him and we'd fall too. By the time I got him into his stride we were laying pretty well back, but he was running good, so I just let him run along. But when we came down to the lower turn I saw I'd have to make a move up on the leaders or they'd force me wide on the turn and then we'd be out of it.

"So I let him go ahead and he really wanted to run. We came down to the stretch turn three or four lengths in front and that was when Brevity began to move up, and I got in a hurry. I didn't have to use the whip but I wanted to make sure. No, I don't know how many times I hit him but I sure was in a hurry. I wanted to get there.

"I wasn't worried when Brevity began to inch up close. I had plenty of horse under me and he wanted to run. But I wasn't taking any chances either."

Money No Object.

The dimple-cheeked Hanford said Bold Venture's owner, M. L. Schwartz told him to ride the race just about as he did. He said he did not know how much he would receive for the ride.

Ira quit high school in Omaha after his second year and took to the racetrack last July. He brought in a winner the first day he rode. He had previously ridden only at Aksarben track at Omaha.

Kentucky National Guardsmen waited for Hanford at the platform where Gov. A. B. (Happy) Chandler, Mayor Neville Miller and Postmaster General Farley congratulated him. Then he was hustled off to the jockey room. A crowd closed about him until he complained he hardly had room to walk.

Ira's mother is Mrs. Barbara H. Hanford (4149 Burdette street) Omaha. He has a brother, Carl Hanford, who rides on Eastern tracks.

The winning jockey took his mount today with his right leg in an elastic supporter. He wrenched it badly when thrown by a horse at Pimlico some days ago.

Indian Broom's Owner Loses $25,000 on Him

By the Associated Press.

LOUISVILLE, Ky., May 2.

THE rapidity with which the odds on Indian Broom were knocked down in the pari-mutuels machines at Churchill Downs today was due mainly to the fact that Maj. Austin C. Taylor, sportsman and owner of the colt, plunged heavily on him.

Maj. Taylor placed several sizable bets and then just before the Derby was run he put $25,000 in cold cash on his colt to win.

Owens followed his first triumph by winning the broad jump at 23 feet 8¼ inches, the 220-yard dash, and the low hurdles. In the hurdles he again came from behind to beat Osgood, indoor title holder, in the slow time of 23.7 seconds.

CUBS SCORE ON COFFMAN IN TENTH, TO TRIM GIANTS, 5 TO 4

CHICAGO, Ill., May 2. — The Giants went down, 5 to 4, in the tenth inning today, on a single by Stanley Hack off Dick Coffman, with the bases full. It was the Giants' third straight loss of their trip, and their ninth consecutive defeat at Wrigley field in two years. They had lost their last eight games here last season.

The overtime upset dumped the Terrymen out of first place, which they had occupied ever since the season opened, April 14.

Neither starting pitcher lasted the route. Hal Schumacher was able to crawl out from under in the eighth and Relief-Man Dick Coffman turned out to be the victim. Hits by Stainback and Hartnett and an intentional pass to Cavarretta filled the bases on Coffman in the last of the tenth and then Hack came through with the hit that sent a crowd of 6245 away happy.

Larry French had started for the Cubs but it was old Chollie Root, the finisher, who was given credit for the victory.

The Phillies batted Al Hollingsworth, the Reds' leading pitcher, from the mound to score all their runs in the sixth after Walter had permitted Cincinnati to score all of theirs in an unusual third inning.

PIRATES DEFEAT BEES BY 6-1 SCORE

PITTSBURGH, May 2.—Pittsburgh got a three-run start on Boston today to even the two-game series 6 to 1 when Johnny Tising, starting his first game in the majors, held the Bees to a lone run which was Wally Berger's second homer of the season.

The Pirates jumped on Jim Chaplin in the opening chapter with two singles, Gus Suhr's triple and Bill Urbanski's fumble to mark up three tallies. Urbanski's second error, along with a boot by Baxter Jordan gave the Pirates another in the sixth and Bill Brubaker drove in two more with a triple off Jim McCloskey in the ninth.

ing flinch. He walks right in and takes it—and therein lies the trouble. The man who walks into Joe Louis is certain to take it.

Schmeling can't box to compare with Louis. He is not shifty and cannot adapt his style to his opponent's. His defense must be terrible to let a wild swinger like Baer reach him for a knockout. Everything he does Louis, apparently, can do better.

Age also is against him. And in the last two years Louis has fought ten times as many fights, by way of keeping tuned up.

Better Than Carpentier.

HOWEVER, he has a better chance than Carpentier had when they sent him against Dempsey for that memorable match at Boyle's Thirty Acres 15 years ago.

Carpentier had been stopped by a bantamweight, a welterweight and two American middleweights, before he met Dempsey. Men who knew fighters believed that there wasn't the remotest chance that Georges' straight overhand right could land one punch that would stop the tough Old Mauler.

And yet, as with Carpentier, the public is not taking into account the quality of Schmeling, as an opponent for the reigning ring sensation. Fans must want to see just another kill.

Treating Mickey Rough.

FOR the first time in three years, the Detroit Tigers have been getting bad breaks. First Cochrane had eye trouble. Then Greenberg fractured a wrist. Mickey next injured his foot. Other minor complaints could be cited.

And, for the first time in three years, the Tigers are encountering serious opposition. Those Red Sox got away fast and have been setting a pace. The Yanks have been going strong. Cleveland had a fortunate start.

And Detroit has found the sledding a little bit harder than usual.

But, after all, the margin separating the leading teams of the American League is small. Greenberg will be back in a few weeks, when most needed. Mickey's injury is superficial and the club is the same stout unit that beat all rivals last year.

Rivals will still have to reckon with the Tigers unless Lady Luck decides to make it a sour season and sends other injuries along.

Connie Surprises.

THE real surprise of the major league race has been Connie Mack, the 73-year-old manager of the Athletics. You just have to give three cheers for this grand old fellow who, when the roof was falling off the castle he had taken 30 years to build, stuck his chin out, took it and waded in for more.

There was no doubt in the minds of all this spring that he had a hopeless outfit which could not expect to leave the cellar. But the club walloped Rogers Hornsby's hopefuls, who were expected to frighten some of the leaders, and it has shown signs of making a serious fight for position in the second division above two or more clubs.

The Browns? Well, let's fall back on the comforting thought that the season is young — and that's more than some of the Browns' pitchers are. The pitching has been unutterably terrible, notwithstanding there is no training excuse to offer. The hitting fell away to a whisper, and the defense was not so hot.

If the trustees in charge of the club were encouraged last fall to think that it would make a showing this year and increase the club's sale price, they must now be suffering from shrinkage of enthusiasm.

It is true, just the same, that the club has several real elements of success. Its pitching and that tank-town early season schedule have prevented the club from really becoming unified.

The Browns may come around later. But the way the pitching shapes up, it takes an optimist to envision that fifth place finish which Hornsby predicted.

About Horse Pictures.

MELVIN D. FULCHER, writer on turf topics and politics, sends us a copy of a letter which he wrote to the Associated Press complaining of the lack of intelligence used in photographing race horses. He asserts that the service photographers take oblique pictures of race horses, which exaggerates the proportions of the head and shoulders as compared to the remainder of his conformation.

"You can readily see," he writes, "that it is impossible to form an idea of a horse's conformation when the picture does not really show the horse.

"The only picture of a race horse worth its newspaper space is a full broadside view."

Well, that is agreed. But, when so photographed, how many observers will derive any meaning from it? The picture will show whether he is short or long coupled; it will show his length of leg, depth of chest and power, forward and aft, so to speak. That would mean something to a breeder of horses or to a specialist. To the mine run of fans it means little.

Even to the wisest conformation, even when viewed in the flesh, is misleading. One of the most beautiful horses ever photographed was St. James—a tremendous fellow. He looked like he could run a week at top speed. About the six-furlong pole he blew up, in his races.

Then there was the little runt of a Black Gold. "Insignificant," you'd say, after looking at him. You'd never think he could pack 126 pounds for one and one-quarter miles and win, coming from behind. But he did.

One of the handsomest animals shown at Fairmount race track, in the days when high-class racers were appearing there, was August Busch's Chief Uncas, sired by that fine imported sire and Derby winner, Omar Khayyam. But all he had was looks. In the Derby he was still at the sixteenth pole when the others finished.

In many cases, experts have been deceived by horses' conformation. Several have been sold for small fortunes. There was War Feathers, who looked so good he sold for $50,000—and never amounted to a dime.

There was Broadway Limited, sold to the Waggoners for $65,000. He died a maiden. Other instances could be cited.

So, if actual observation of a horse by experts reveals nothing, of what use is it to present an uncritical public with the photograph of a horse and expect observers to pick a winner from the illustration?

The fact is that great horses, like great men, are found beneath the most unlikely exteriors.

Hirsch, Veteran Trainer, Says Victor Was Fit, Got Good Ride

By the Associated Press.

LOUISVILLE, Ky., May 2.—Bold Venture's victory in the Derby today was due to three things, in the opinion of Max Hirsch, the man who saddled the Morton L. Schwartz three-year-old—he was a fit horse—Ira Hanford rode an intelligent race and (he smiled as he said this) Mrs. Hirsch was seeing her first Derby.

Mrs. Hirsch, not a close follower of the horses, asked particularly to see this Derby—she felt lucky. They have five children, two of whom also train horses. Buddy helps his dad; Mary, 23-yearold daughter, is one of the few licensed women trainers in the country. She keeps her horses in a separate barn.

Max, 53 years old, has been around horses since he could toddle. He was raised in Texas around the half-mile circuits. For three years, 1894-96, he was a jockey. Gave it up because of weight and has been a trainer ever since.

After the race he declined to name the best horse he ever trained. He doesn't know how good Bold Venture really is and has conditioned such great thoroughbreds as Sarazen, Grey Lag, Gusto and Tick On. He sold Grey Lag to Harry Sinclair for $60 000 as a two-year-old but believes that Sarazen would have been almost unbeatable if he had been trained for sprint races only.

Although this was his fourth bid for the Derby, Hirsch claims it is the first time his horse was not thrown out of contention at the start. Norris King slipped on a bad spot in the track in 1914 while running in a contending position back of Regret, the winner. Vito and Sortie, two of his best, got nowhere back of Reigh Count in 1928 and Tick On was crowded back at the start in Burgoo King's year, 1932.

Max didn't even get excited over the finish. Mrs. Hirsch forgot to faint but admitted she was "tickled to death."

"I told you boys I would bring good luck to daddy," said Mrs. Hirsch, whose looks belie the fact that she is the mother of a large family. She had a sizeable bet on Bold Venture. Max did too but wouldn't say how much.

Hanford, set down for 15 days, was not even worrying. He was too busy digging into his pocket for money to tip telegraph boys.

Ira's chief worry was whether he could ride in the Preakness two weeks hence. Although Hirsch is not sure the horse will start, It all depends on his workouts. Bold Venture is a horse you can work hard. He was injured in the Arlington Futurity last year and then survived a fire in a railroad car which destroyed two stablemates.

"Now I can eat plenty for at least two weeks," declared the younger member of the Hanford riding family, as he made a dash for the train and New York.

sacrificed, Durocher moved to third while Moore was being thrown out, and, after Frisch walked, Pepper Martin singled to right, scoring Captain Leo.

Frisch Opens Fifth With Double.

In the fifth inning, with one out, Manager Frisch lined a double to left, took third on Martin's infield hit to Geraghty, and scored after Medwick's long fly to Lindstrom.

A pass started a two-run Cardinal splurge in the seventh, Terry Moore drawing the base on balls. Frisch bunted for a sacrifice and when the ball slipped out of Bucher's hand as he started to throw and went out to right-center instead of to first base, where he wanted to toss it, Moore sprinted all the way home and Frisch reached second. After Martin struck out, a wild pitch advanced Frisch to third and he scored after Medwick's fly to Cooney, near the flagpole.

Five Enemy Runs in 5 Games.

It was the fifth straight game in which the Cardinals combined excellent pitching with a fine defense and a timely attack. Dizzy Dean started the string when he defeated the Pirates last Sunday, 3 to 2. Parmelee then followed with his brilliant 17-inning triumph over the Giants, 2 to 1, and Paul made it two straight over the Giants, 3 to 2. Dizzy gained his second decision of the first place drive when he blanked the Dodgers Friday.

In the five games the Cardinals hurling staff held the enemy to a total of five runs, two tallies being the opposition's high total during the five-game stretch.

U. City League Games.

Casey Stengel Believes He Has Best Pitching Staff in League and Worst Outfield

By W. J. McGoogan.

It was hardly the time to speak to Casey Stengel, just after his Brooklyn Dodgers had dropped two ball games to the Chicago Cubs, each by one run, one in 11 innings, the other in nine, but Casey has been accustomed to baseball adversity for so long that he was not in nearly so bad a humor as one might expect.

But just think if we had waited until the Cardinals finished with the Dodgers, running the Brooklyn streak to four successive defeats!

Not that he was the jovial Casey he usually is, as he sat in the visitors' club house slowly pulling on his uniform before the game, discussing the plan of battle with Linus Frey, St. Louis boy who is second baseman and team captain of the Dodgers.

In between the conversation he found time to moan about the present troubles of the Dodgers—an outfield composed of men none of whom is hitting .200—a game lost when two of his men collided going after a fly ball—another tossed away when a base runner ran into a safe hit. Those are just a few of the things with which Casey has had to contend this season.

They Should Win Games.

He likes two departments of his team, though, his pitching staff and in his infield. He believes he has the best mound corps in the National League and on paper it shapes up very well with Van Mungo, Fred Frankhouse, George Earnshaw, Ed Brandt and William Watson Clark.

Buddy Hassett on first has come through nicely for him. Frey is playing well in his unaccustomed position at second base while Ben Geraghty, playing his first professional baseball, is doing so well at shortstop that he seems too good to be true. Jimmy Bucher is a good enough third baseman to keep Joe Stripp, a .300 hitter, on the bench and that's all that needs be said about Bucher.

"But that outfield," moaned Stengel, holding his head in his hands. "Here I had Randy Moore—and we gave plenty for him—all set for one position and he broke his leg. He'll be out of the game for the better part of two months. Freddy Lindstrom is playing well enough but hasn't started to hit as yet. That lets us out.

"So I'll tell you what we'll do this afternoon," he said, turning to Frey, "we'll switch this whole thing around. We'll start Babe Phelps in right field (Phelps ordinarily is a catcher). I believe he played the outfield once but he hasn't been in practice catching fly balls. If he does make good, though, we'll have a hitter out there.

"You see," Casey explained, "when you're losing you gotta switch. And if this change doesn't work I'll make some more. I saw lineups in my sleep last night and I woke up this morning a whole lot earlier than I wanted to."

Oh, yes, Casey takes his baseball seriously, far more so than is generally believed by fans who think that Stengel is a sort of a clown manager.

"Why is he so serious," said one of his associates, "that he can't eat after a defeat? So he starves most of the summer."

About the time Casey was ready to leave the clubhouse for the field, a boy arrived with a message saying that Frank Frisch, the Cardinal manager, wanted to see him and at last Casey came up with a wise crack which got a laugh out of his listeners.

"You go back and tell Frisch," he informed the boy, "that I don't feel like talking to him now. I guess he feels pretty good after winning those two close ones from the Giants. Well, you tell him I feel pretty rotten after losing two close ones and I'm singing the blues over here and don't want to hear any of his troubles.

"Frisch will get hold of me and say, 'You think you have troubles? You ain't got any troubles. You oughta have my ball club with all my headaches, then you'll know what grief is.'' All these managers are starting to cry, but I don't see any of 'em trying to help me. It's all a cutthroat proposition.

"Oh, sure, they'll make a deal with you. But I had to give five or six good men to get the two I wanted and now they'll want to deal with me even up. And any one of the three top clubs in the league would cinch the pennant if they stepped out and got themselves a man or two.

100 Mayors and One Nightmare.

"This club here, for instance, the Cardinals," he went on, "give them just a little more strength and the race wouldn't even be close. Give Chicago another good pitcher or the Giants another pitcher and either club should breeze in. I wish I could swap outfields with any of the three and we would just trade places with any of them."

By that time Casey had finished dressing and started for the field with the look of a long-suffering man.

And when he reached the dugout he was informed that there were Mayors of many Missouri and Illinois towns in attendance.

"Yes, a 100 Mayors in the grandstand," he sighed, "and a nightmare in the outfield."

RED BIRD NOTES

BILL HALLAHAN will pitch against the Boston Bees this afternoon in the first game of a series of three. They were the Braves the last time they played at Sportsmen's Park. Bobby Brown is likely to be their pitcher today.

Frisch wanted to give Parmelee the Sunday assignment, but the finger tips on Tarzan's pitching hand are still a bit sore from his 17 innings of work against the Giants.

The final with the Dodgers attracted a ladies' day crowd of 3000 customers, 3874 women, 1252 girls, and 3961 knot-hole boys.

The Dodgers filled the bases in the fourth inning, during which there were two passed balls, but failed to score. Bucher, first up, bunted safely to Frisch. Lindstrom flied out. Bucher took second on a passed ball, Frey was hit by a pitched ball and then both runners advanced when the ball popped out of Davis' glove for a second passed ball. Geraghty then was passed intentionally, Berres fouled to Mize and Frankhouse flied to J. Martin.

Frankhouse doubled to left-center to open the third inning, but Walker made quick work of Bordagaray, Cooney and Hassett.

THE WILD HORSE IS THROWN—Pepper Martin Out at Second

Usually Pepper Martin is caught by the photographer sliding stomach first into a base or home plate or streaking to a bag, but this photograph shows the Wild Horse of the Osage on the ground when he was tagged out at second by Second Baseman Linus Frey, St. Louis boy, captain of the Dodgers, on a throw from Shortstop Geraghty, who had taken Medwick's grounder in the third inning.

Shikat to Tell Court What Goes on Behind Scenes in Wrestling

By a Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

COLUMBUS, O., May 2.—Burly Dick Shikat, former German wartime sailor and some time world heavyweight wrestling champion, is expected to tell what goes on behind the scenes before and after wrestling matches when he takes the witness stand here May 12 in United States District Court, in the suit against him by Joe Alvarez, Boston promoter, to enforce the terms of a contract.

Shikat, a broad-faced Teuton with blue eyes and thinning hair, made wrestling history recently when he tossed the champion, Danno O'Mahony, in New York, and won the title himself. He underscored the event still more when, in a sworn answer to Alvarez's suit, filed here, he declared that Jack Curley and Rudy Dusek, a Curley assistant, ordered him to "lay down" to O'Mahony.

He entered the ring, he asserted in the answer, determined to win if he could, and in that, he told the correspondent here, today, he had little trouble, because while O'Mahony appeared to be a nice fellow, he wasn't much of a wrestler, at least that night.

"Perhaps he was a little tired," Shikat suggested in a strong German accent, while he watched his black Scotch terrier playing at the end of a red leash in the office of his lawyer, John A. Connor, here.

St. Louisan's Name on Contract.

The answer was filed at a hearing last Monday, at which further hearing was postponed until May 12. In the preceding week, on April 23, Jack Curley, New York sports promoter, had testified, as a witness in behalf of Alvarez, that he and five other wrestling promoters have a contract which calls for them to split profits on mat shows. Named as other signers were Tom Packs of St. Louis, Ed White of Chicago, Ray Fabianni of Philadelphia, Paul Bowser of Boston and Joe (Toots) Mondt of New York. At St. Louis, Packs admitted he was a party to such a contract, but contended it had ceased to be operative a few weeks after it had been signed.

Alvarez's suit was for an order restraining Shikat from wrestling except under his management, but a temporary restraining order issued when the complaint was filed was dissolved by the court here on April 23, and any further order in the case will be issued on the evidence already given and to be given when the hearing is resumed on May 12.

While the wrestling world was recovering from its surprise at the revelation of the contract between the promoters—a situation which had long been suspected but never defined—Shikat threw in another and better surprise by his answer with its charge that he had been told to "throw" the match to O'Mahony.

Shikat Tells of $40,000 Offer.

His account of the aftermath of his action in tossing the Irish soldier out of the championship was also included in the answer. The day after the match, he said under oath, Curley, Fabiani and Bowser met him in the office of Curley in New York and offered him $40,000 if he would agree to wrestle with O'Mahony or another wrestler named Yvonne Roberts and "throw the match." Shikat declared he refused the offer.

The $40,000 alleged to have been offered him, he asserted, included $15,000 of $18,000 which he charges Bowser owes him, and $25,000 more.

In addition to the revelations about the O'Mahony match, Shikat included in his answer, filed by Attorney Connor, an attack on the legality of the contract with Alvarez and a frontal assault on the so-called wrestling trust which, he asserted, completely dominated the wrestling game.

He declared that on Feb. 13, 1934, he entered into a contract with "Toots" Mondt, by which Mondt was to be his manager. Prior to signing the contract, he said, he posted with Mondt a total of $18,000, including $5000 in cash and $13,000 worth of securities.

Shikat contends that the principal object of this agreement was "that this defendant (Shikat) would obey any orders issued to him by the said Mondt in any wrestling match: That is to say, if the said Mondt ordered and directed this defendant to lose a wrestling match, and defendant failed and refused to obey such orders, then the said Mondt would retain and keep said securities and said cash."

Sued to Recover Forfeit.

After he failed to get the Strangler Ed Lewis match, Shikat demanded return of his deposit, and filed suit finally to get it back, but so far has failed to do so, he said. As to the contract with Alvarez, he declared that the contract originally was to have been made with Bowser, but that Bowser, at the last minute, had Alvarez, his matchmaker, sign it instead. He declared he presumed Bowser was to be the other principal after he himself had signed the contract, until finally Alvarez's signature was affixed. Attorney Connor is basing his principal attack on the contract on the premise that it is one-sided that it is all in favor of Alvarez and is of no advantage to Shikat.

Shikat left the courtroom here April 24 at the conclusion of the hearing for that week and flew to Detroit, where that night he was pitched out of the ring by Ali Baba, the Kurdish wrestler, who now claims the championship. However, the New York Athletic Commission still recognized Shikat, having held that the Detroit match was merely an exhibition and that the Kurd fouled Shikat by throwing him from the ring. They are to meet again in New York on Tuesday night.

In an interview today, Shikat emphatically denied that he had ever "laid down" to any wrestlers or had participated in any framed matches, as has been reported in St. Louis.

Refused to "Lay Down" to O'Mahony.

"Only in the O'Mahony match they wanted me to lay down," he said. "And I wouldn't do it. I never told anybody, anywhere, that I had ever taken part in anything of that kind."

His attorney branded as "ridiculous" the report in St. Louis that he had said in court that "Shikat's hands are not clean," or that he had been forced to throw wrestling matches if he "wanted to eat." The record taken by the court reporter at the hearings includes no such statement by the lawyer.

WASHINGTON U. NINE DEFEATS BILLIKENS, 4-1

Brilliant pitching in the pinches by Frank Shobe, a surprise selection of Coach Gale Bullman, was the decisive factor in Washington University's 4-1 triumph over the St. Louis U. baseball team yesterday afternoon at Forest Park.

Shobe, who had not appeared in a game up to yesterday, was rather free with his hits, granting nine, but with men on the base paths, his slow curve had the Billikens swinging. The lone St. Louis run, coming in the first inning, was unearned.

Roy Scott, sophomore pitching star for the mid-town school, matched Shobe slow ball for slow ball throughout most of the game, but a sudden lapse in the third inning permitted the Bears to chalk up their four runs.

The Bills were the first to score, counting their lone tally right at the start on McDonald's single to right, Lou Drone's bingle to the same spot, and Schade's error on Krause's easy roller.

In the hectic third stanza, Harris sent a ground single to center and reached second when Pattee popped a one-bagger to left. After Shobe sacrificed both runners, Williams singled past Fash, scoring Harris and Pattee, and when little Jackie Veith let the ball roll between his legs, the lanky left fielder raced all the way to third. This mishap seemed to shake Scott's nerve for after Herbert popped out, Douglas and Blumberg followed with line doubles to deep center, accounting for two more runs.

Scott regained his poise, and for the next five innings only two Hilltoppers could reach first base, Schade on a single in the fourth and on a walk in the seventh. However, Shobe was doing just as well, letting a Billiken or two get on and then bearing down.

The Billikens, coached by Carl Pike, subbing for Bob Finch who was out of town, threatened in practically every inning, but their best opportunity, in the eighth, drifted away when Centerfielder Richard Douglas made a beautiful catch of Henry Krause's liner. Lou Drone and Fash were on base at the time.

SATION PUTS IN STRONG CLAIM TO SPRINTING HONORS

NEAR JAMAICA RECORD FOR SIX FURLONGS; KING SAXON IS SIXTH

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, May 2.—The long-awaited meeting between the East's two crack sprinters, G. D. Widener's Sation and Pat Knebelkamp's King Saxon in the six-furlong Jamaica Handicap today didn't prove the close battle it looked to be on paper as Sation ran away from the field in the stretch to register by four lengths over Victor Emanuel's Miss Merriment.

Under perfect handling by Jockey Johnny Gilbert, the giant six-year-old chestnut son of Galetian-Salicia pounded home the winner in 1:10 4-5, the fastest time of the meeting and only two-fifths of a second slower than the track record held by King Saxon.

The victory was worth $4560 to Sation which was a split choice with King Saxon at 11 to 5. The King never reached a threatening position and wound up a disappointing sixth in the field of seven.

Shamrocks in Soccer Cup Final Match at Philadelphia Today

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

PHILADELPHIA, May 2.—Preparations for the first national soccer cup final ever staged in this city were completed today when 5000 additional seats were erected on the German-American field where the local team will play the St. Louis Shamrocks tomorrow in the final game of the home and home series.

Last Sunday the teams battled to a 2—2 tie under the floodlights of Walsh Stadium in St. Louis. Tomorrow's game here will be played to a finish.

With word from the Shamrocks that they will use the same lineup that started last week, Elmer Shroeder, manager of the German-Americans, announced that Sammy McAlees, his star outside left, would be ready for duty. McAlees has been out of the local team's line-up since he was injured in the Eastern semifinal with the Scots-Americans of Newark. With the small but speedy leftwinger back in the lineup the Germans' forward line which has piled up a great goal scoring record for the season will again assume its regular form.

The return of McAlees will allow Capt. Hun Ryan to go back to his inside right position where he and Ray Richards, on the right wing, form a smooth combination.

The Philadelphia booters are hoping for a continuance of the warm weather that has prevailed here for the last few days. They feel it will be an added advantage for them as they believe it would in all probability slow up the veteran St. Louis eleven.

After the game both teams will attend the twelfth anniversary banquet of the club where the national championship trophy will be presented to the winning team. A meeting of the National Commission of the United States Football Association will be held Sunday.

STEIN TAKES FIRST BLOCK OF TENPIN MATCH

Otto Stein Jr., in winning 2 27-50 points from Nelson Burton of Dallas, Tex., last night missed bowling a perfect game by one pin. The 299 score helped Stein to roll 1960, for an average of 245 per game. The first block of the 32-game match was rolled at the Delmar Recreation, where the second block of eight games also will be bowled tonight at 9 o'clock.

Burton's score of 1933 was not far behind that of Stein. His high singles game was 280, while his average was 241.

The second half of the match will be bowled at Dallas next week.

The winner of the contest will oppose the victor in the Eastern semifinal between Joe Miller of Buffalo and Al Novak of Philadelphia for the right to meet Hank Marino of Milwaukee for the match-game championship.

Last night's scores:

STEIN — — —	195	268	267	236
	279	204	299	212	—1960
BURTON — —	217	216	266	203

CROSBY'S Brushless SHAVING CREAM

for Tough, Thick, Wiry Beards

for Heavy Beards and Sensitive Skins

for Average Beards and Tender Faces

Men, we've been peeking into bathrooms for the last three years. Checking up on the shaving habits of a lot of men. Listening to the complaints about this shaving cream and that. And did we learn something!

More than that, we've done something about it. Something that's going to put a big, broad, happy smile on a lot of men's faces in a hurry. Because now any man — and every man — can get the kind of a shave he's hankered for ever since he started using a razor.

The first thing we discovered is this — There's a big difference in men's faces — and men's whiskers. For instance: Some men have tough, thick, wiry whiskers. Some have heavy beards and sensitive skins. Others have average beards and tender skins.

Obviously, no one shaving cream can possibly do an A-1 job for three such different types. Which means — every man needs a cream that's made for his type of beard and his type of face.

Men, it's waiting for you at your dealer's now. The name is Crosby's Brushless Shave, and it's tailor-made for your face. There are three formulas:

Formula 1 — Tailor-made for tough, thick, wiry beards.

Formula 2 — Tailor-made for heavy beards and sensitive skins.

Formula 3 — Tailor-made for average beards and tender faces.

Plank down just 3 dimes and 3 pennies at your dealer's now and walk out with a husky 65c jar of shaving happiness. Use half the jar. If it doesn't whisk away your whiskers in a way to fill you with real joy, just send us the rest of the jar and a short note telling us we didn't make good, and right back will come the full purchase price.

That's a sporting proposition with all the odds in your favor. Either you get the right answer to your shaving problem — or we lose. Since we're betting on a sure thing, we hope you'll take us up. If you do, we're friends for life. Von-Cro Mfg. Co., St. Louis.

CAMPBELL IS IMPROVED; REST OF TEAM UNDER OBSERVATION

By the Associated Press.

BOSTON, May 2.—The Cleveland Indians left Boston tonight for Washington under medical injunction to take every precaution against contagion from the spinal meningitis afflicting Bruce Campbell, right fielder.

The club played its scheduled game with the Boston Red Sox today, and won 7-3, after health authorities reported cultures taken rfom every player were negative.

Every member of the team, however, was strictly cautioned by Dr. William B. Keller, city health commissioner, to isolate himself from his wife and children for period of at least three weeks.

Campbell, thrice ill of the disease, remained tonight in a hosital, where his condition was described by his physician as "somewhat improved."

Campbell's roommate, Joe Becker, young catcher, was under an unofficial quarantine from the rest of the players. Although in uniform at the game today, he was parked alone on a bench.

PENN CREW KEEPS BLACKWELL CUP

DERBY, CONN., May 2. — The speedy Pennsylvania varsity crew successfully defended the Blackwell Cup today, defeating Yale and Columbia in the annual "Derby Day" feature on the Housatonic. The Quakers finished two lengths ahead of Yale in the two-mile varsity race. Columbia finished a half length behind Yale.

NAVY CREWS WIN 3 RACES FROM CORNELL

By the Associated Press.

ANNAPOLIS, Md., May 2.—The Naval Academy's varsity crew defeated Cornell's eight by a length and a half today to give the Sailors three victories in a four-race regatta on the choppy Severn River.

The Middy shell took the lead at the 300-yard mark and held it to the end of the mile and three-quarters course. Navy's time was 9 minutes, 24.8 seconds. Cornell was five seconds behind.

Cornell's only victory was in the one and five-sixteenths mile race between the 150-pound crews. The Cornell shell won by four lengths. Because the wind was blowing up the river, the crews reversed their course.

Navy's plebe crew jumped into a lead at the start and held it over a mile and three-quarters course to defeat the Cornell freshmen by a length and a half.

PRINCETON WINS COMPTON CUP FOURTH TIME

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., May 2.—Princeton's veteran varsity sweepers, in what was probably the first moonlight regatta in intercollegiate rowing history, were almost invisible as they conquered the Harvard and M. I. T. eights tonight on the inky-black Charles River mile and three-quarters course.

The Tigers led the Crimson, according to those in the finish-line stake boat, by a bit more than a length and M. I. T.'s struggling oarsmen were sighted seven lengths behind when the second-place crew rested their oars. It was Princeton's fourth straight Compton Cup victory over the two Cambridge crews.

Due to a 30-mile south-southwest wind, which kicked up a treacherous chop along the exposed part of the course, the regatta was postponed for three hours. It was pitch dark, despite the dim reflection of a faint moon, when the three varsities pulled up to their stake boats.

The official varsity times, which probably can be disputed, were Princeton 9:08, Harvard 9:13 and M. I. T. 9:30.5. Last week Princeton bowed to Pennsylvania's strong crew by a length and M. I. T. trailed Yale at Worcester by five lengths.

Harvard's Junior-Varsity and freshmen crews gained impressive victories and the 150-pound varsity event, which the Crimson passed up, resulted in a three lengths Henley-distance win for the Tiger lightweights.

CONCORDIA 8, KIRKSVILLE 1; FIFTH VICTORY

Pounding out 12 safeites, Concordia Seminary's baseball team gained its fifth straight victory yesterday morning at Forest Park, defeating the Kirksville Teachers, 8 to 1. The game was stopped at the end of the eighth so that the Kirksville players might attend the Cardinal-Brooklyn game.

Kirksville started the scoring in the second inning, Mills hitting a double and scoring when Gentry's grounder was fumbled by Callies.

The Seminarians opened up their hitting attack in the third, however, and blasted four runs across the plate. Rengstorf, Rook and Callies each got a single, Rengstorf scoring on Callies safety. Markgraf squeezed in Rook with a bunt, Callies went home on Koenig's single, and the latter counted on Krueger's hit.

Concordia knocked Kirksville's first pitcher, DeHart, out of the box with two runs in the fifth. The relief hurler, Osborne, failed to stop the Seminarians in the sixth and seventh, as they scored a run each in those innings.

Women's Swim Event.

The national amateur swimming championships for women will be staged again at Manhattan Beach, New York. The dates are June 25-28.

Taste Test No. 5—American Bowling Congress

79% prefer mildness of Vintage White Owl

INDIANAPOLIS, IND., APR. 5—There's only one thing that counts for smoking pleasure in a cigar—TASTE. So we wanted to find out which cigar men would choose when judged by taste alone. A taste test was made at the 36th annual American Bowling Congress.

We gave 134 smokers two unidentified cigars—a Vintage White Owl and another—representing the leading nationally advertised brands. No names . . . no familiar bands to prejudice them. Each man smoked both—then indicated the one he liked best. 79% preferred White Owl's Vintage-tobacco taste.

For smoking pleasure—choose the cigar that wins every taste test—White Owl.

MORE SMOKING PLEASURE . . . Today's White Owl is a double "best buy." It's a Vintage cigar—and it's larger, too. Look at this actual-size picture. Compare White Owl with your present brand. Taste the Vintage tobacco—see the extra size. Try a White Owl today . . . wherever you are, you can get a mild Vintage cigar, identical in every way with those that won these taste tests. It costs but 5¢ at your nearest cigar store.

BOWLING TEAMS—joined the spectators in making the taste test. The results proved most smokers appreciate the better taste of Vintage tobacco.

THE SCORERS (at top)—took time to make the test during an intermission. You can tell by their smiles they've discovered White Owl's Vintage taste. White Owl is one cigar you can depend on.

STRIKE! . . . over 14,000 top-notch bowlers gathered for the A.B.C. tourney. And White Owl scored a clean hit in the tests . . . its Vintage tobacco is a natural choice. For Vintage tobacco—like Vintage wine—is milder, mellower. White Owl is the only cigar that always assures you of Vintage filler tobaccos.

Thirty-eight teams in nine parks are on the Municipal Baseball Association program for today. Play in the association's twenty-fourth season opened yesterday.

Champions of 13 divisions, including the city title winner of last year — the Wellston Legionnaires, who will be known as the Kelloggs this year—are back in the Muny.

Nine divisional titleholders will see action today. They are the Diedrick Undertakers of the City League, the Kelloggs and Dortons of the Mid-City League, the Burke Democrats (formerly Donnelly Stars) in the Mound City League, the Hoffmeisters and the Gebkens in the South Side League, Holy Trinity and St. John Nepomuk of the South Side Sodality League, and Hope of the Walther League.

BILLIKENS DIVIDE TENNIS MATCHES WITH SPRINGFIELD

St. Louis University's tennis team gained an even break in its series of matches with State Teachers of Springfield, Mo., each team winning three matches.

Each captain had a hand in two of his team's victories. Louis Sharp, former St. Louis U. High star, now attending State Teachers, won from John Renard in the singles and paired with Bunnie Briggs to defeat Larry Mullen and Cornie McDonald of the Billikens.

Frank Keaney, playing for the first time for the Bills, won his singles match with Clifford Pierce, and then, still favoring his tricky knee, teamed with Renard to down Pierce and Morris Stephens, 6-3, 6-1. In this match, the Blue and White combination, after dropping the first three games, won 12 out of the next 13 to take the verdict easily.

Summaries: Singles—Louis Sharp, State, defeated John Renard, 6-2, 6-3. Bunnie Briggs, State, defeated Larry Mullen, 6-1, 7-5, Frank Keaney, St. Louis, defeated Clifford Pierce, 4-6, 6-3. MICKEY HASLIN FAILS TO JOIN BOSTON BEES AND IS SUSPENDED

PITTSBURGH, May 2.—Manager Bill McKechnie of the Boston Bees today suspended Infielder Mickey Haslin, who refused to report for duty until his demands for a higher salary are met.

Haslin, acquired by the Bees in a trade with Philadelphia Thursday, checked out from his hotel and club officials presumed he returned to his home, near Philadelphia.

McKechnie disclosed the Bees offered Haslin $500 more than his Philadelphia contract called for, but that it failed to satisfy Haslin. The ball player contends his expenses with Boston will be considerably greater than with Philadelphia.

McKechnie and President Bob Quinn of the Bees planned to take up the matter with the Philadelphia club, which acquired Infielder Piney Whitney in the trade.

The Bees expected Haslin to play third base in the series against the Pittsburgh Pirates, opening yesterday. Joe Coscarart took his place.

Trolley League, in 33 Years, Has Graduated More Than 200 Men Into Organized Baseball

By Robert Morrison.

Old timers of baseball in this vicinity experienced a pleasant thrill of recollection when they read the headline, "Trolley League Opens Thirty-fourth Baseball Race."

Graduates of the semi-pro organization, entering its second week of the 1936 season today on East Side diamonds, are legion, and the pleasure of harking back to the good old days was increased by the notice that the old Trolley League is still rolling along.

It was a grand association in the youthful years of the century. When in full bloom—between 1906 and 1909—it had a high production rate of major league talent. Young players still are leaving it for the promise of greater glory along the trail to the big circuits.

Charley Bartley, secretary of the Missouri-Illinois Association since 1910, and Winton Barker, president of it in the early years, fondly recalled many famous players who once cavorted on the diamonds of that league.

Developed Numerous Stars.

"It probably was one of the greatest developers of major league material of any semi-pro organization existing in the years 1906 to 1909," said Barker. "About one-third of the league's total number of players found their way to good positions in the larger circuits."

In reminiscent mood Barker and Bartley often interrupted each other in naming players who moved up to the majors, so numerous were those who had succeeded.

They couldn't recall them all, but some they mentioned were: Terry Moore, now with the Cardinals; Charley Barrett, Cardinal scout; Bill Abstein, Cardinal and Pirate; Jewel Ens, Pirate coach; Chick Mattick, Chicago White Sox, who now lives in St. Louis; Lefty Leifield, Pirates; Jim Feeney, Cincinnati; Tom Barry, Phillies; Mike McDermott, Cleveland; Ollie O'Mara, Brooklyn, and others.

This season there were five boys from the Trolley League who drew contracts with the majors. From the Alpen Braus, Harold Leistritz, infielder, and Charles Reichelt, pitcher, went to the Union City, Tenn., farm of the Cardinals, and Robert Keeley, catcher, reported to the Springfield (Mo.) club; Bill Rogles, pitcher, went to Cincinnati's Marshall (Tex.) club; Johnny Strum, first baseman, to the Joplin farm of the New York Yankees.

Not in Organized Baseball.

The Trolley League is independent of organized baseball. About five years ago its officers applied to the major leagues for recognition but were refused, Bartley said, because the majors didn't want to pay for the ball players that came from there.

There were eight clubs in it originally, East St. Louis, Belleville Bees, Alton Blues, St. Charles, Mo., Browns, Women's Magazines, Ben Billers, Eisenstadts, and the Kerns.

It was organized by Tom W. Cahill, after whom the line of presidential succession was Barker, Fred Hirsch, Otto Krebs, Willis Johnson Bartley, Tom Duffy, John Schneeberger and Bob Fisher, the present head.

In 1917, 18 and 19 play was suspended because of the war.

"It's a great old league," said Bartley. "In all the time it has been operating about 15 per cent of the men who played in it wound up in big time baseball. The list I know mounts to at least 200, and there probably are others forgotten.

"Baseball players, who know anything about the Trolley League, always have a warm spot in their hearts for it. Mention of it at a reunion usually turns the meeting into an exchange of stories about the fun they had in the days when they went to games on the trolley—which, incidentally, is how the league got its name."

TODAY'S SCHEDULE

PITCHER GIVES 3 HITS, WALKS 16, LOSES 14-1

Pitcher Kruckemeyer, of the Cathedral school, lost a Parochial Baseball League game to St. Margarets, 14-1, despite the fact that he allowed only three hits. The reason—16 bases on balls, 16 stolen bases, and four errors. Banes, St. Margarets' hurler, also allowed three hits, but walked only one batter. His teammates committed but two errors and his opponents stole only three bases.

Kruckemeyer had eight strikeouts during the game, retiring the side on strikes in the second frame. In the first, third, and fourth innings, however, he gave four walks in each inning.

The game took three hours and 15 minutes toplay.

St. Michael trounced Holy Name's team, 16-6, with Brogan, the catcher for St. Michael, hitting three home runs in five times at bat. Lamachi, Brogan's battery mate, also hit a homer.

In other league games, St. Philip Neri continued its winning streak by defeating the Pac's team, 10-6, St. John's won from St. Andrew's, 5-2, and St. Vincent beat St. Joseph's Orphanage, 9-2.

The German Sport Club returns to the local soccer picture this afternoon after many months' absence, opposing Babe Baldwin's A. B. C. club in the feature match of a doubleheader at National Softball Park. The purpose of the program is to raise funds for the U. S. Olympic soccer team, not yet selected. After starting the 1935-36 season as a member of the St. Louis Soccer League, the German Sport Club dropped out of competition in November and has not been represented by a team since that time. Efforts now are being made, under the direction of Nick Jost, to rebuild the team to higher caliber than ever before.

With Joe Dumas, Ollie Klund, Jack Simmerman, Joe O'Meara and Eddie Begley as a nucleus, Manager Jost has put together an unusually strong team to oppose the former Municipal League champions. Begley has been "loaned" to the German club by Mickey Clawsey, manager of the Irish Village club, and it is said he will play with his new team in two games at Chicago, July 4 and 5, against Sparta and Maccabees.

The Village team is scheduled to oppose the St. Hedwig eleven in the opening game of the doubleheader. St. Hedwig will be strengthened by the return of several players who recently graduated to professional company, including Benisch, Janesch, Pawlak, Olsen and Flynn and should give the well balanced Village team a stiff argument. Manager Clawsey of the Village will be faced with a serious loss in turning Begley and Bill Rogles over to the German Sport Club, but he has 20 or more players to draw from to fill the gaps.

This is the first local attempt to raise funds for the U. S. Olympic soccer team. When Elmer Schroeder of Philadelphia, chairman of the United States Football Association's Olympic Committee, called a meeting of committees members in St. Louis last week-end, he said that no definite action had yet been taken either in the matter of selecting players or raising funds. It is estimated that $10,000 will be necessary to take care of a soccer team playing at Berlin in August. Some funds may be raised by scheduling games in Europe before the opening of the Olympic tournament, he said.

YALE DEFEATS PENN IN DUAL TRACK MEET

By the Associated Press.

PHILADELPHIA, May 2.—Yale came from behind today to defeat the University of Pennsylvania, 73 to 62, at Franklin Field today in their annual dual track meet.

Penn took nine first places, but the visitors showed a better balanced aggregation.

BROWNS LOSE TO SENATORS, 9 TO 4; 7TH LOSS IN ROW

run Washington lead. Mahaffey then went in and Powell died stealing.

To add two runs in the fourth, the Senators broke out in a rash of two baggers, Bolton, Hill and Lewis hitting them. Three doubles in a cluster generally produce a pair of tallies and today was no exception.

If three doubles in a row mean two runs, then a triple followed by a single combine for one and the Senators put these two together in the fifth. Only a great stop by Carey which paved the way for a double-play prevented further scoring in this inning.

Browns Threaten in Seventh.

After the second inning and a shaky start, Whitehill went along well until the seventh when he got into trouble and the Browns emerged with two runs. They filled the bases with none down on singles by Carey and Lary and a pass to Bejma who batted for Mahaffey. Pepper forced Lary to score Carey and Bejma counted on a double to left by Solters. The hitting and the rally ended when Bottomley popped and Bell flied out.

Thomas retired the Senators in the seventh and Russell was the Washington pitcher in the eighth.

Thomas allowed two runs in the eighth because, on the squeeze, Hemsley muffed the pitcher's perfect throw home and a single followed with the "squeezer" on second because of the error.

Russell, however, was nearly unhittable.

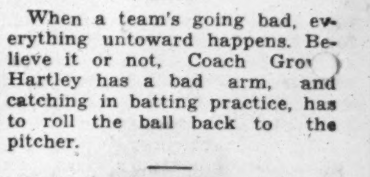
Preliminary Match Signed

Leo Newman, St. Louis, and Earl Wadsack, Arkansas, light-heavyweights, have been signed to meet in one of the preliminary matches on the wrestling program to be presented next Wednesday night at the Coliseum. In the features, Dorv Roche meets Leo Numa and the "Masked Marvel" wrestles Lou Plummer.



Brownie Notes.

EITHER Ivy Paul Andrews or Jack Knott will start for the Browns tomorrow in the opener at New York. The undefeated Gomez is due for the Yanks.

When a team's going bad, everything untoward happens. Believe it or not, Coach Grov Hartley has a bad arm, and catching in batting practice, has to roll the ball back to the pitcher.

Hornsby thought of doing two things for today's game but did neither. He figured he might play first himself or put Beau Bell in that assignment. But when the bell rang, "Sunny Jim" was on the bag, despite his low batting temperature.

It has been a long time since Sam West was taken out just because a southpaw was working but Sam hasn't even been hitting right-handers, lately.

They don't draw any too well here. It was a fine sunny Saturday and warm but only about 3500 were in the stands.

SPICA AND BEAUHULD BOUTS TOP TWO CARDS THIS WEEK

AUDITORIUM SITE OF SHOWS TOMORROW AND FRIDAY NIGHTS

By W. J. McGoogan.

Indoor boxing, which usually goes asleep here along about this time of the year, will maintain interest of followers of the game with two shows this week, both at the Auditorium, the first tomorrow night being a 10-bout inter-city amateur event between teams of Cleveland and St. Louis boys, while Friday night Billy Beauhuld will meet Lorenzo Lovings, Chicago Negro, in a professional match under the auspices of the Twentieth Century Sporting Club.

The amateur event will have something of a national tournament flavor, inasmuch as most of the boys on the program recently fought in the Nationals at Cleveland, but none of them won a championship.

Champions and runners-up automatically qualified for the Olympic trials to be held in Chicago Thursday and Friday, and few cared to jeopardize their chances there by boxing beforehand.

Spica Faces Tough Foe.

Paul Spica, though, only hope of St. Louis for an Olympic berth, agreed to take on tough competition in Troy Bellini in what should be the feature match tomorrow night. Bellini won the bantamweight title at the Arena last year, but couldn't make the weight in the recent tournament, so he fought as a featherweight. He lost his second match to Lou Gevinson, Washington, D. C., southpaw, one of the best boys in the tournament. Joe Church, Buffalo, who ultimately won the title, put Spica out of the event with a decision. Church also eliminated Gevinson.

Monroe Harrison, St. Louis Negro light-heavyweight, will have a chance of squaring accounts with Daniel Merritt for it was Merritt who gained a decision over Monroe after Harrison had won his first-round match.

These two will meet in one of the feature contests. Merritt was eliminated from the National by John Hawthorne, Chicago.

Quincy Troupe and Others.

Charley Stewart, who is listed as the Cleveland flyweight and is scheduled to box Charley Sackett, fought at Cleveland as a bantamweight, losing his second match after winning his first.

Archie Moore, St. Louis Negro middleweight, got through his first-round match all right, defeating Peter Urban, but was stopped in the third round by Frank Nelson, Omaha, the referee ending the bout when Moore was outclassed and could do nothing more than wrap his arms about his head for protection.

Eric Koberg, the St. Louis bantamweight, was the only boy from this district to be knocked out, and he fell before the fists of the sturdy Lupe Cordoza of Los Angeles in the second round.

Quincy Troupe, Negro heavyweight of St. Louis, who owns the National Junior championship gained at Providence, R. I., recently, is to take on Lem Franklin. Franklin lost to Frank Tymasko, finalist at Cleveland. Troupe was eliminated from the National by Ed Hockley of Cincinnati on a decision. Hockley went to the semifinals.

In addition there will be some bouts between novice boxers featuring Johnny Goldak, light heavyweight, and Roland Beaustring, welterweight of St. Louis. Goldak, McKinley High School football star, was a knockout sensation in the recent Golden Gloves championship here, while Beaustring, a graduate of the Post-Dispatch boxing school, also won a championship.

Kessler announced yesterday that he had signed Charlie Rudner, Fort Harrison (Ind.) lightweight, to box Dave Stanfield in the opening four-round match, which completes his card.

Ray Sharkey Returns.

Beauhuld and Lovings meet in the 10-round final; Ray Sharkey, Cleveland, who gave Joe Ghnouly a close match here recently, boxes Charlie Mack, Chicago; Young Jack Blackburne, Chicago Negro lightweight, meets Don King; Irwin Striebel, South St. Louis heavyweight, tackles Scotty Fullers, Fort Harrison.

Beauhuld, who returned home from the East bringing with him a string of 19 successive victories, has been working daily in the Business Men's gymnasium and will continue his conditioning this week. He is boxing a very stout foe in Lovings, who has won the favorites for a national title when he boxed at the Arena in 1935, but who had to retire because of cuts over both eyes. He boxed here recently and knocked out Frank Campe.

NEGRO MUNY BASEBALL LEAGUE OPENS SEASON AT TANDY PARK TODAY

The Negro Industrial Municipal Baseball League, which has not been active for several years, will open its 1936 season this afternoon when the Bergs' Market nine meets the Cosmopolitan Stars (formerly the Coronado Stars) in the first game starting at 1:15 o'clock. In the feature contest the Twentieth Ward Democrats will play the Harper-Potter Roofers starting at 3:15 o'clock. Both games will be played on the Tandy Park diamond at Pendleton and Cottage avenues.

A record-breaking crowd was attracted to the Tandy Park diamond to see the Roofers and the Democrats battle in one of the hardest fought games in many years to win the Negro Industrial championship last season. The Democrats won the decision and now hold the 1935 title.

Voris Dickerson is president of the Negro Municipal League. Albert Cottrell is director and G. Kelly, secretary. League games will be played every Sunday at Tandy Park.

NELSON ONE OF FAVORITES FOR 62-MILE BIKE CLASSIC TODAY

Robert Faltermeier, of Kansas City, and Chester Nelsen, former Olympic bicyclist of St. Louis, are the favorites to lead a team of 23 riders in the grueling 100-kilometer bicycle race this morning starting at 9 o'clock to select the members of the Missouri state squad which will compete in the district Olympic bicycle trials. The race will start in Robertson (Mo.) on Highway No. 66, just north of the St. Louis fying field and will be run over concrete highways.

The race starts on Highway No. 66, goes north on that road to No. 140, northwest on No. 140 to No. 99, east on No. 99 to No. 66, and back to the start. The riders will go over this course three times, a distance of 100 kilometers, approximately 62½ miles.

Most of the contestants have had little opportunity to train, so a probable winner must be picked on last year's performances.

Won Two Races Last Year.

Faltermeier rates first on the basis of last year's racing, for he won town events at the same distance, winning at Dayton, O., and Louisville, Ky., last August. He also finished second in two other races.

Faltermeier likes the distance races, but a weak sprinter which was shown when he was unplaced in state championship races up to 10 miles here last year. But increase that distance to 25 or more miles, and Faltermeier finishes among the leaders.

Faltermeier's chief competition will come from a veteran of bicycle racing, Nelsen, who has been riding in races for 17 years. Nelsen is one of the best riders St. Louis has ever produced. He was a member of the United States Olympic team in 1928 and led the other American riders in the Olympic race, then 108 miles. He failed to make the team in 1932 by three minutes, being that much slower than the last rider to qualify for the team.

Nelsen was ill during last season's racing and did not take part in the state event, but he recovered in time to enter the national 50-mile race in which he finished second behind Cecil Hursey, Savannah, (Ga.) rider.

Nelsen is in good condition for the event and should finish among the leaders.

Gotsch Is Given Chance.

There are several other St. Louis riders who have a good chance to win this event. Eugene Gotsch won the state championship last year by taking both the 25 and 50-mile races, but he didn't fare so well at the same distances in the national meet.

Leland Kent, who finished second in the state trials last season, Lou Droz and Velmo Chappius who finished behind Kent in the state, and Ray Florman, one-handed bycyclist are the others who are given an outside chance.

Droz and Chappius were bothered by the trouble in the state meet, and with better luck, may win today's race.

It has not been decided yet whether the first five or first 10 of the finishers will qualify for the district trials June 7 to be held here. Riders from Kansas, Oklahoma, Texas, Arkansas, Tennessee, and Missouri will compete in the district event. The national finals will be held in the East on July 5, but it has not been decided where.

The entries:

Harold McIntyre, Herman Gruenenwald, Walter Ahrens, Velmo J. Chappius, Richard Suever, Ray George, Leland Kent, Joe Schneider, Joe Dellerman, Richard Land, Ray Rowald, Ken Connor, Ray Florman, Chester Nelsen, Lou Droz, Ollie Dunnavant, Virgil Herman, Olin Bechtel, Milford Courtwright, Bart Cecil, Ray Compton and Robert Faltermeier (Kansas City).

Coon Hunting on the Wane.

RACCOON hunting, a sport that has an especial lure for Missourians, is again pictured as on its way out, in an article written by Bruce Lewis of St. Joseph, President of the Missouri 'Coon Hunters Association . . . Gradual reduction of timber areas and daytime hunting of raccoon in the den trees, has contributed much to the depletion of the stock. In part, Mr. Lewis writes:

"There is a sad view in sight for all 'coon hunters at present. Our timber has been cut and destroyed and used in these times for firewood, or day tree climbers have cut and spoiled the dens of raccoons until there are very few trees fit for the 'coon to live in. Some raccoons were living in such poor den trees this cold winter that they were found frozen to death.

"Several states have put a closed season on raccoon. Others have shortened the season, but the raccoon are still going fast. In Missouri, the records show there was a 50 per cent decrease in the sale of raccoon pelts this last season and 30 per cent decrease the year before. That makes an 80 per cent decrease for two years.

"Fox hunting will last many years longer than 'coon hunting for the reason that the fox-hunter never kills.

"I do not think that closed seasons do any real good—sportsmen lose interest in the sport and sell their dogs, and 'coons are bootlegged into other states. What the 'coon hunters need are laws to prohibit the chasing in closed season while the 'coon are small, and to stop the destruction of den trees."

Have Your License Ready.

Out state game wardens are serious-minded people. When they find a man afield with gun in hand, they construe it as evidence of an intent to hunt, even though the alleged hunter may merely intend to return a borrowed weapon to a neighbor. You may have to prove your intention, unless you have your license handy.

The same applies to fishing. Possession of tackle while on stream or lake is presumptive evidence of an intent to fish according to game wardens. Then also your fishing license becomes your best protection.

The Game Department is broadcasting this idea to prevent the unwary citizen from being betrayed into trouble through ignorance.

"Eating Crow" Now a Fad.

"Make him eat a crow" is a venerable expression that shows the public has for a long time had an antipathy against crow flesh.

But recently the campaign against crows, accompanied by the discovery that crow meat could be made very palatable, has increased the promotion of crow dinners to the proportions of a real boom.

However, in some sections there is a lack of knowledge of crow recipes and to that end the More Game Birds Foundation has dug up the following methods of serving crow meat as a delicacy:

"First of all, the older crows should be skinned. Use only the breasts and legs. Young birds may be roasted like chicken, but use of butter or bacon is necessary or the meat may be too dry.

"CROW BROTH: Take the breast and legs, brown a little in butter, and then boil with a little celery until tender, using water according to quantity of broth desired.

"CROW SANDWICH SPREAD: Use the boiled meat. Remove bones, run through meat chopper, add some mustard, minced onion, salt, pepper or paprika, and mayonnaise.

"CROW STEW: Breast and legs may be used. Brown some large onions in bacon fat (one large onion to the bird), put in meat, salt, pepper or paprika, smother for a few minutes in the onions, add enough water to cover meat and let simmer over slow fire until tender. Stir in some sour cream mixed with a teaspoonful of flour.

"Young crows, taken just before flying age, are delicious when prepared like squabs. Clean, rub with salt and pepper, also either some lemon or, if the flavor is liked, some finely crushed juniper berries. Stuff with whole mushrooms, if desired. Wrap completely in strips of bacon, tie, and broil or roast like squabs. Breasts of crow squabs may also be dipped in egg and bread crumbs and fried ilke cutlets."

HIGH SCHOOL TEAMS IDLE DUE TO DEATH OF S. A. DOUGLASS

Out of respect to the memory of Stephen A. Douglass, principal of Central High School, who died Friday night, yesterday's City High School League baseball games were postponed. The games will be played off on successive days, starting tomorrow.

Mr. Douglass had been principal at Central for 15 years and he was an enthusiastic supporter of athletic activities. Rain or shine, hot or cold, inclement weather failed to keep him away from football, baseball or basketball games or track meets.

Mr. Douglass lived through a period when Central was changed from its mid-city location at Grand and Windsor to the Yeatman High School building at Natural Bridge and Garrison avenues. He also saw Central drop from its pinnacle of athletic supremacy during that time and rise again to win the baseball championship in 1934.

Yesterday's postponed games will be played as single contests. The first, that between Cleveland and McKinley, will take place tomorrow afternoon at the Public Schools Stadium. Tuesday, Roosevelt will meet Central, and Wednesday, Beaumont will oppose Blewett. All games are scheduled to start at 3:30 o'clock.

Cleveland is the league-leader with three victories and no defeats.

WILLMAN AND LEWIS WILL BE HERE FOR MIDGET AUTO RACES

The official entry list for the Indianapolis Speedway reveals that four of the drivers who are listed to compete in the opening program of midget auto racing at Edward Walsh Memorial Stadium May 12 are also down for competition in the annual 500-mile classic.

Jimmy Snyder, Emil Andres and Harry MacQuinn, who have filed entry for the midget opener here next week, are all listed as Indianapolis drivers, while the fourth is Frank Brisko, veteran Milwaukee pilot, who will make his tenth try for the Hoosier classic this year.

$1,250,000 PRIVATE CLAIM PUT THROUGH

Cochran and Others Wage Losing Fight—One Opponent Calls Bill "Steal."

Post-Dispatch Bureau,
201-205 Kellogg Building.

WASHINGTON, May 2.—House leaders, both Republican and Democratic, who throughout the present session have fought numerous private claim bills, waged a losing battle last week against a bill to pay certain mining companies $1,250,000 in interest on awards growing out of the World War which have already been made.

Opponents of the measure, led by Representative John J. Cochran (Dem.), St. Louis, pointed out that it set a dangerous precedent inasmuch as the Government had refused for 122 years to pay interest on claims while they are pending. Cochran cited a ruling of the Secretary of the Treasury in 1813 in which he held that the Government would not pay interest on outstanding claims.

Cochran was joined by Representative Taber (Rep.), New York, Representative Rich (Rep.), Pennsylvania, and Representative Zioncheck (Dem.), Washington, who characterized the bill as a "steal."

"The Government," Cochran said, "has already paid out of a sum appropriated originally, $8,500,000 to these claimants. Ninety-one claimants are scattered over 24 states, but 27 of the claimants are in one state, California.

"Besides that $8,500,000 there has been submitted to this Congress in deficiencies $743,732 and the Congress has included that amount in deficiency appropriation bills and the claimants have been paid. There is now certified in the Appropriations Committee today $34,235 additional, or a total of $9,277,967, and on top of that administrative expenses have been $32,600.

82 Claims Still Pending.

"But that is not all. There are still 82 of these claims pending in the courts, and we do not know what the decision of the courts will be or how much more will come in as deficiencies."

Representative Bankhead, majority leader, insisted that the claims were a "moral and legal responsibility" of the Government. The companies pressing the claims, acting at the initiation of the War Industries Board, began the development of mineral deposits, some of them marginal deposits, just before the close of the war in 1918. This was done, Bankhead said, on borrowed money as a patriotic move. They suffered losses when the demand for metals dropped with the close of the war.

"I am going to tell the truth about the bill," Taber said. "This is the fifth trip to the well. Time after time the law has been changed."

Taber then cited several individual claims that had been before Congress repeatedly after awards had been voted, supposedly in full settlement of the claim.

Although Representative Snell of New York, minority leader, opposed the measure, many Republicans spoke in favor of it. The House was more or less clearly split between open advocates of the system of claims bills, passed under a special rule put through by Chairman O'Connor of the Rules Committee, and those who have consistently opposed the flood of claims measures.

Cites Similar Claims.

Cochran, in a last minute attempt to kill the mineral claims measure, compared it to the Russian shoe claim for more than $1,000,000 which the House refused to pass and the Minnesota fire claims totaling more than $10,000,000, which the House approved. It was charged during debate on the latter that these claims were backed by a lobby of Washington lawyers, and particularly political lawyers.

"I am wondering," Cochran said, "if we pass this bill, whether we shall have another Minnesota fire claims bill here asking us to pay interest to date of settlement of those claims, which Congres paid twice. It is not unreasonable that such a bill will be introduced. It is a matter of wonder to me how some of the Minnesota members who were so interested in the Minnesota fire claims bill and the Russian shoe bill should be interested in this bill and also are interested in another bill that I suppose will come in later—the so-called grain corporations bill."

The last also involves large sums to be paid to grain elevator operators in the Northwest states for losses sustained supposedly when grain was stored on order of the Government during the war.

Representative Kvale (Farmer-Labor) challenged Cochran and asked him to withdraw his remarks about the Russian shoe bill but the Missourian refused. On the roll call which followed shortly there were 231 yeas, 97 nays and 99 members were recorded as not voting.

Sidelights From Louisville

Periscopes Used by Many Spectators; Mike Jacobs Embararssed at Having to Look Up a Scalper for Ticket; No Daily Double Bet.

By the Associated Press.

LOUISVILLE, Ky., May 2.—The Kentucky Derby exerted its pre-depression lure upon a milling mob of 50,000 or more horse lovers from every section of the nation today, filling every seat and making even standing room in the enormous Churchill Downs plant hard to find.

From the world over the Derby crowd came, shoving, pushing, rushing the betting windows and lining up in block long queues before the pay off cashiers. While they jostled and fought to bet on minor races, however, there was but one topic, the Derby itself.

Perhaps the thousands stuffed into the Downs clubhouse and grand stand saw the races. The others spent race time standing on tiptoe, boxes or camp stools, peering through periscopes hawked at the track or sitting resignedly on the few yards of grass left clear by the rush to the fence when the horses got away.

Besides the thousands inside, garbed in everything from overalls to gaberdines and short coats, from cotton print dreses to frocks from Paris or tweeds from London, there was another Derby crowd which numbered thousands and played a game. This game consisted in roaming the environs of the track, eyeing the fences for a weak spot. Inside the track guards, numerous city police and some 200 Kentucky National Guardsmen played the part of the other team in the game. They divided their attention from the interesting goings on inside the track and the ruminant throng without, edging one way or the other in the direction where it appeared the outs were going to try to get in.

Rushers Outscore Guards.

When a section of fence or gate was unguarded the outs nearest the weak spot would rush, get a running jump, scale the barrier, or duck under the turnstiles and run into the crowd where they could not be identified. If the guards caught a fence climber or a gate ducker it apparently counted as a score for them. One observer counted 89 scores for the outs to 21 for the guards in 10 minutes.

Persons who bought only grand stand admission tickets played a similar game at the fences dividing the general admission from the general admission from the clubhouse. The guards swung rubber hose, blackjacks and a kind of boy-sized baseball bat about 18 inches long. A guardsman became excited once when he and four or five of his fellows pulled a would-be clubhouse spectator down off the barrier. He swung his baseball bat in a stinging arc. It hit the fence climber's skull and down he went. The guards led him away.

Adjutant-General G. Lee McClain, who led the 200 soldiers to defend the Downs, deprecated the violence but explained that his troops had their orders from the superintendent in charge and not from him, besides that, he said, the guardsmen's weapons were not baseball bats but riot clubs.

Good humor was predominating among the Derby crowd. Unfamiliarity with track ways was evident when betters lined up the wrong way at the betting windows.

Free Infield Revived.

Revival of the free infield at today's Derby after a lapse of a quarter of a century accentuated the color that makes the classic America's picturesque sporting event.

Yielding to the contentions of some sportsmen that abolition of the free field in the center of the oval had taken some of the traditional setting rom Derby day, the management permitted the hangers-on, who in previous years attempted to crash fences, access to the inner inclosure on promise they would not attempt to invade the "silk and satin" sections across the track.

Scenes similar to the picnic setting of 25 years ago occurred in the flower-potted center swards today. The "infielders" amused themselves in dice games, reading newspapers, munching from lunch boxes they brought with them—anything to consume time until the strains of "My Old Kentucky Home" made them one in spirit with the smartly dressed society folk across the track.

Another gesture to "old-timey" people who objected to "canned music" was made by the management. The State anthem, instead of blaring raucously from amplifiers, was played by the United States Military Band from Fort Knox in a manner to suit the most esthetic.

Two Bad Bets.

In the parimutuel sheds patronage at the $50 windows was brisk in comparison to depression years. The first bet in the $50 machine was made by Miss Christine Mayer, Cleveland. She took a win ticket on Brevity and another $50 ticket on Grand Slam to place—ouch!

The record throng came today by train, plane, bus, boat and afoot. At Union Station, there were an estimated 49 special trains. More than 60 airplanes landed at Bowman Field. Special transport planes brought enthusiasts from Chicago and Cleveland. The packet steamer Tom Greene brought a group from Cincinnati down the Ohio. The largest special train at Central Station was a 15-car train from Kansas City.

There was no "daily double" bet ticket sale today.

Mike Jacobs, the Eastern fight promoter, was slightly embarrassed by the fact that he had to seek a local scalper for a ticket.

FUNERAL SERVICE TOMORROW FOR LOUIS E. BRIGHTFIELD

Civil War Veteran, 90, Will Be Buried in Jefferson Barracks Cemetery.

The funeral of Louis E. Brightfield, Civil War veteran, who died Friday of heart disease at the home of his son, Louis E. Brightfield Jr., 1620 Knapp street, will be held at 1 p. m. tomorrow at the Kraeger-Voss-Fix mortuary, 3402 Kingshighway Memorial buolevard, with burial in Jefferson Barracks Cemetery.

Mr. Brightfield, who was 90 years old, served during the Civil War with the Thirteenth Infantry Regiment of Ohio. He was a native of Cincinnati. For many years he was a salesman for a Chicago woodenware manufacturing company. Also surviving are a daughter, Mrs. Florence M. Elkey, and another son, John H. Brightfield.

Dr. J. T. Mason's Leg Amputated.

By the Associated Press.

SEATTLE, Wash., May 2.—Dr. J. Tate Mason, president-elect of the American Medical Association, underwent an amputation of his left leg today in the Virginia Mason Hospital, named for his daughter. The operation was necessitated by a thrombosis with which he was stricken three weeks ago. Dr. Lester J. Palmer, surgeon, said the operation was successful.

PLANS NEARLY READY FOR MENTAL HOSPITAL

City Building to Cost $1,500,000—Contract to Be Let This Summer.

Plans for the city's new hospital intended to provide the most advanced medical care for mental patients, which will be called the Malcolm A. Bliss Psychopathic Institute, are nearing completion and the contract for the foundation of the building will be let this summer, it was announced yesterday by Director of Public Welfare Joseph N. Darst. Completion probably will be about Jan. 1, 1938, Darst said.

Cost of the building fully equipped was estimated at $1,500,000 by Darst. It will be paid for with bond issue funds, supplemented by a Federal grant of 30 per cent of construction cost. It was one of the undertakings provided for in the $7,000,000 of bonds for public welfare institutions included in the $16,100,000 bond issue voted in May, 1934.

The structure, seven stories high, will occupy the block north of the city hospital, bounded by Carroll street, Dillon street, Grattan street and Park avenue. A subway from the basement will connect it with the city hospital.

Beds for 212 Patients.

It will have beds for 212 patients, 174 for white patients and 38 for Negroes, making it one of the country's largest psychopathic hospitals, and Darst said it would be one of the best equipped.

Darst and Dr. Ralph Thompson, Hospital Commissioner, said it would receive the types of patients now inadequately provided for in the observation ward of the city hospital.

Its primary purpose, Darst said, will be diagnosis and temporary treatment of the mentally ill, patients remaining there as a general rule not longer than 21 days. The diagnosis and preliminary treatment will determine whether patients will be permanently confined in an institution, or may be safely treated as out-patients and housed at home.

For Purpose of Curing.

The policy and purpose, Dr. Thompson said, will be to cure of nervous or mental disorders as many persons as possible, who might otherwise have to be confined in the city sanitarium. The institute will undertake to develop highly trained nurses and physicians, specializing in nervous ailments.

Plans for the building are being developed by William C. E. Becker, the city's engineer of bridges and buildings, assisted by an advisory group composed of the Hospital Commissioner and Dr Francis M. Grogan, superintendent of the City Sanitarium, and Dr. Avery Rowlette, medical director of the City Hospital. The preliminary plans have been approved by the American Society for Mental Hygiene.

Dr. Malcolm A. Bliss, for whom the institute is to be named, was for many years a noted specialist in St. Louis in nervous and mental diseases. He died in September, 1934. He had been a member of the visiting staff at the City Hospital and was a consultant at the City Sanitarium.

STATE SUPREME COURT WRIT IN GLOBE-DEMOCRAT CASE

Publishing Company Ordered to File Return in 30 Days in Lottery Proceeding.

JEFFERSON CITY, May 2.—The Missouri Supreme Court en banc today assumed jurisdiction in a quo warranto proceeding by Attorney-General McKittrick to oust the Globe-Democrat Publishing Co. of St. Louis, publisher of the St. Louis Globe-Democrat, from business in Missouri for alleged violation of the State lottery laws.

The court issued a writ of quo warranto, returnable in 30 days in court en banc. After the publishing company's return is filed, the court probably will appoint a special commissioner to hear evidence. After the commissioner's report is filed the case will be set for hearing before the court.

The proceeding was based on charges that a "famous names" $15,000 prize cartoon contest recently conducted by the newspaper was in violation of the lottery laws. It was alleged this constituted violation of the publishing company's charter powers, and usurpation of powers not granted by its corporate charter.

The court permitted the Attorney-General to amend his petition to include a statement that the amount involved was in excess of $7500. This was intended to eliminate a question of jurisdiction, as the minimum monetary jurisdiction of the court in civil cases, except where constitutional or land title questions are involved, is $7500.

Escaped Prisoner Caught.

MASON CITY, Ia., May 2.—Sheriff J. M. Robertson announced today a man held here for automobile theft has been identified as John Staryak of Perth Amboy, N. J., one of five prisoners who escaped from the Carlinville, Ill., county jail April 24. Four of those who escaped have not been recaptured.

New Yorker Leads at Chess.

NEW YORK, May 2.—Isaac Kashdan of New York maintained his lead tonight, 5 to 1, at the end of the sixth round of the national chess championship tournament. He defeated Samuel Factor of Chicago. Arthur W. Dake of Portland, Ore., and Israel A. Horowitz of New York were second with scores of 4½ to 1½.

CATHOLIC CHARITIES $1,324,700 IN 1935

Report on Year's Work to Precede Pageant Today in Honor of Father Butler.

The twenty-fifth annual report of the Catholic Charities of St. Louis, which will be read this afternoon at a meeting at Municipal Auditorium to precede a historical pageant in honor of the Rev. John J. Butler, president of the organization, shows total disbursements of $1,324,700 for 1935.

About $604,000 went for hospitalization in providing ailing indigents with 169,011 free days of care; $409,099 to provide permanent homes for dependent children and aged poor; about $150,000 to organizations doing outdoor relief work, and $139,000 to institutions aiding the destitute at various depots.

The report lists a total of 142,119 persons treated free in dispensaries; 35,195 aided by institutions and organizations, and 1401 families aided by various Catholic groups. More than $23,000 was spent in the children's department of the Catholic charities.

The pageant, "Crusade of Charity," written by Sister Geraldine of the Sisters of St. Joseph, will commemorate the sacerdotal silver jubilee year of Father Butler. Letters from Archbishop John J. Glennon, congratulating Father Butler for his service, will be read, and memorials commending the works of charity of Mgr. Timothy Dempsey and J. Harry Rehme, will be incorporated in the report.

FATHER TIMOTHY DEMPSEY FUND HEADQUARTERS OPEN

Established at 1218 Olive St.; Samuel W. Fordyce Heads Non-Sectarian Committee of 100.

Headquarters for the campaign to raise a memorial fund to perpetuate the charitable activities of Father Timothy Dempsey have been opened in Room 803, 1218 Olive street. Samuel W. Fordyce, attorney, is chairman of a non-secetarian committee of 100 citizens who will conduct the campaign.

Fordyce said yesterday that various suggestions had been offered for a suitable memorial to the priest, who died April 6, but that the idea of a fund for the continuation of his numerous charities was finally decided on as the most fitting tribute.

"Father Tim devoted his life to charity and nothing more appropriate could be done by his friends than to make adequate provision for the operation of his charities," said Fordyce. "As the money raised in the annual appeal last fall is nearly exhausted, it is essential that funds be provided immediately, so that the Rev. James P. Johnston, who was named to succeed Father Dempsey, will be able to carry on the charities without interruption."

COURT SETS ASIDE ORDER REVOKING LIQUOR LICENSE

Rules Against Excise Commissioner Anderson in Case Involving Rex Bar.

The action of Excise Commissioner Thomas L. Anderson in revoking the liquor license of George L. Blockberger Jr., proprietor of the Rex Bar, 111½ North Sixth street, was set aside yesterday by Circuit Judge John W. Joynt.

The court also quashed a return filed by Anderson in the suit of Blockberger asking for certification of the records of the hearing held April 25, at which the license was revoked. Anderson took the action on the ground that Blockberger kept the bar open after the regular closing time of 1:30 a. m. Judge Joynt ruled the return was insufficient in that the original records were not produced.

Louis A. Reidel, representing the tavern owner, said that as the license had expired Thursday by limitation, it would be necessary for the plaintiff to obtain a new license.

MORE FUNDS OF FOUNDATIONS IN REALTY MARKET

Trustees of Missouri Botanical Gardens Purchase Fee to Part of Chain Store Site in Wellston.

By BERRY MOORE.

Further evidence that foundation funds are seeking investment in real estate was seen in the purchase last week by the trustees of the Missouri Botanical Gardens of the fee to 47 by 175 feet of ground comprising the western part of the site of the building of S. S. Kresge Company at the southwest corner of Easton and Hodiamont avenues, in Wellston, St. Louis County. The seller was the Land & Securities Company of which Richard Muckermann is president, Walter Muckermann, vice-president and Edwin Sanders, treasurer.

The Kresge Company, operator of five and ten cent stores, holds the ground (fee) involved in the transaction, uner a 99-year lease. While the price paid by the Missouri Botanical trustees was not disclosed, it was stated that the purchase was made on a 6 per cent basis.

Purchased as Investment.

The purchase was made as a permanent investment for the Missouri Botanical Gardens, endowed by the late Henry Shaw and constituting a part of his vast estate, consisting largely of real estate holdings in the downtown districts. Cornet & Zeibig handled the negotiations on behalf of the trustees of the Missouri Botanical Gardens. J. H. Faris-Knapp & Co. acted for the purchaser.

The eastern part of the site, 94 by 175 feet, is also held by the Kresge company under 99-year lease, which at the time of its execution, called for an annual net rental of $2000. The fee is owned by Antos Stauss who acquired the ground for a reported price of $1800, prior to the Wellston real estate boom 15 years ago.

Extending from Hodiamont avenue on the east to the Suburban street car tracks on the west, the Kresge structure is one of the most conspicuous in the Wellston business center. The site has a total frontage of 141 feet on Easton, with a depth of 175 feet, including the ground, which is at 6104 Easton, involved in the present transaction.

Other Building Projects.

The six-story Terminal Loop Building with arcade features, stands at the northwest corner of Hodiamont and Easton avenues. It has a frontage of 210 feet on Hodiamont. Erected by the late N. Pelligreen, president of the Pelligreen Construction Co., the fireproof building originally was occupied as a branch by B. Nugent & Bros., department store operators, whose main store was at Broadway and Washington avenue. The station and terminus of the Kirkwood-Ferguson, St. Charles and Wellston car lines occupy the western part of the Easton avenue frontage of this block, ownership of which is still retained by the traction company.

The building occupied by Rinkles Market is at the southwest corner of Easton and Suburban avenues. Adjoining on Easton is the building of the Kroger Baking & Grocery Co. The State Bank & Trust Co. of Wellston is also in this block. The building of Neisner, Inc., is at the northeast corner of Easton and Irving avenue, Wellston. The 99-year lease under which the site, 55 by 140 feet, is held, calls for an annual net rental of $15,000 for the first 10 years and $18,000 a year for the remainder of the term.

As has been told in the Post-Dispatch, Washington University has loaned $130,000 on the three-story fireproof building, under construction at the southwest corner of Olive street and Taylor avenue, designed for the medical profession. Involving an estimated cost of $180,000, this project was the first of its type to materialize since 1929. It is being erected by a group formed by Henry R. Weisels, president of the Henry R. Weisels, Inc., who conceived it. Approximately 98 per cent of the space in this building has been leased from the plans. Preston J. Bradshaw is the architect, and Walter J. Knight & Co. are the engineers.

A business site, 100 by 127 feet, at the northeast corner of Tenth and Howard streets, has been purchased by Howard N. Brown as an investment. It was owned by the J. W. Clemens Estate, a client of Cornet & Zeibig. The purchaser was represented by the Hauschulte Real Estate Co.

ONE FAMILY TO HOUSE RETURNING

Association Shows Normal Living Conditions Factor in Reducing Vacancies.

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, May 2.—The nation's "moving day" brought authoritative forecasts of a record "undoubling" of families who shared single-family homes because of the depression.

A survey by the National Association of Real Estate Boards shows the return to normal living conditions has filled all but 3 per cent of the nation's residential quarters.

The "undoubling" trend, accepted by the association as a sign of economic recovery, is credited as a major factor in the moving that started from coast to coast on May 1.

The real estate board of Portland, Ore., reported virtually all changes in residence under way there were due to freeing of depression cramped families. Long Beach, Cal., placed its ratio at 50 per cent. Camden, N. J., and New Orleans gave their estimates as 25 per cent. Figures from other cities varied, with Pittsburgh's "considerable" and Milwaukee's "rapid" undoubling fair examples of the trend.

A general improvement in economic conditions was reflected in other parts of the "moving day" survey.

Nineteen of 20 major cities reported families which were changing to new quarters were making the changes for comfort, not economy.

Rents, which the National Association considers the best single index of economic improvement, are up from $2.50 to $5.00 a month, an average of 10 per cent.

Although May 1 is the big "moving day" in a general sense it is not universal; the Association reported. Boston never had such a day, but a tendency is developing there toward Sept. 1 as the date for lease terminations. May 1 rates second to Oct. 1 in Newark, N. J.; Long Island, N. Y.; the Oranges and Maplewood, N. J.

Louisville, Ky.; Cincinnati, O.; Detroit, Mich.; Dallas, Tex.; Seattle, Wash.; San Antonio, Tex.; Tulsa, Ok.; Portland, Ore.; Miami, Fla., and Pasadena, Cal., have no special moving day. Camden, N. J.'s day is April 1. New Orleans' leases expire Sept. 30.

OIL COMPANY PURCHASES UNION BOULEVARD SITE

The St. Louis Gasoline & Fuel Company has purchased a tract of approximately 20,000 square feet near the corner of Brown avenue and Union boulevard, served by the Terminal Railway.

The tract has been occupied by the gasoline company under a lease from the Industrial Garage & Repair Company, the grantors to the title.

BUILDING TO BE PUT UP ON DELMAR BOULEVARD

It Will Stand on South Side of Street, 100 Feet West of Limit.

The Delit Realty Corporation, composed of clients of the Henry R. Weisels Co., has completed plans for the erection of a 100-foot building on the south side of Delmar boulevard, 100 feet west of Limit avenue. The site is approximately 150 feet east of the Tivoli Moving Picture Theater in the White Way district of University City.

The building, designed and planned by Preston J. Bradshaw, will be an ornate two-story structure with modern shops, each 20 by 70 feet, with high ceilings, and will be well ventilated and lighted, with ample sanitary equipment. The roof will be insulated.

The front of the building will be of gray and black enameled brick and trimmed with alumilited aluminum, the bulkheads of black glass, with full height plate glass set in anodic aluminum. The floors will have colored asphalt tile with border and ceiling of modernistic metal. The building will be heated with gas.

There will be a 25-foot drive-in entrance from Delmar, leading southwardly to a parking lot in the rear of the premises.

The project was conceived by Henry R. Weisels Co., inspired by the possibilities of this section of Delmar boulevard.

The Delit Company, an operating company, owns 200 by 110 feet of ground at the southwest corner of Delmar boulevard and Limit avenue.

SUBURBAN PROPERTY FOR SALE—Acreage

Huntleigh Woods

A Community of Country Homes and Estates

It was a long foreview when purchasing this property seventy years since Dr. William Hearst Bowles predicted its future value for fine homes.

It does not require so much foresight or discernment to foresee from its ideal location and character, its expert planning now of record, the beautiful homes under contract for plots four and thirty-one and its unchanged ownership and management with freedom from encumbrances that HUNTLEIGH WOODS is destined to become the outstanding community of beautiful country homes and estates in St. Louis County.

HUNTLEIGH WOODS is committed to, and has every necessary qualification for such a destiny.

OUR PRICES ARE REALLY LOW!

—We Must Apologize—

Last week, many of our customers were disappointed—the car they wished had already been sold. So great was the rush for late model cars, that our selection was depleted before the day was over. However, we are managing to fill all requests for particular years and makes, as new traded-in cars are being reconditioned daily.

But Here Are More BIG Bargains!

We have a lot more of these money-saving dependable Used Cars ready this week-end. Our same policy of small profits and large volume of sales continues. Look over the list below, and come early. Naturally, all cars are subject to prior sale.

Editorial

¶ St. Louisans are recognizing the fact that when we advertise periodical sales, they are really merchandising sales—not advertising talk.

¶ The success of any organization depends entirely upon the good will it generates among its customers.

¶ We are doing everything we can think of to merit that good will, but if we have overlooked anything, we welcome suggestions.

Plan an Herb Garden for Part Of the Plot

Herb gardens are in fashion right now. If you want to do the right thing by your garden and, incidentally, by your reputation as a good cook, you will see that a little patch of ground is set aside for herbs.

From a practical standpoint the herb garden can be made as easily as a flower or vegetable garden. Some of the herbs are perennials but many of the best ones are annuals. Plan your herb garden in a sunny situation near enough to the house where you can step outside the back door for just that leaf or spray that will make your salad dressing supreme or your iced drink incomparable.

Here is a good list of annual herbs. They can all be grown from seed the first year:

PARSLEY—A seasoner of the "cut and come again" variety. Used to season and for decoration. Grows about 12 inches high when thinned out properly.

THYME—A delicate seasoner, with a fine perfume. It grows about six inches high and makes a good edging for the herb garden. A tea made from the dried leaves has been a remedy for centuries for headaches. Use it when making sachets.

BORAGE—An excellent salad herb. It is also used to scent cool drinks. Being an unusually pretty herb, you will want to put it in a conspicuous place for appearance sake. It grows about 18 inches tall.

CARAWAY—Grow it for the seeds to decorate and flavor breads and pastries. It has feathery leaves like the carrot, and creamy yellow flowers that are attractive in season.

BASIL—One of the most popular seasoners for soup and stew. It grows about two feet tall into attractive little shrubs. Give them space to grow, and they will look well in the garden.

DILL—A necessary item for home made pickles. The plant grows two and a half to three feet tall, and has leaves six inches long. The young tops give an excellent flavor to fresh fish.

SAGE—Another necessary herb, used principally for seasoning dressings. Not a very attractive looking plant, so put it in the background. It grows up to three feet.

RUSSIAN TARRAGON—An outstanding flavor. Don't use it with other herbs, as it is likely to predominate them. Chopped leaves scattered on a lettuce salad makes a fine dish. It grows about two feet tall.

SWEET MARJORAM — Green leaves in summer, and dried ones in winter make excellent flavorings. It may also be used in dressings, or as a garnish. They grow up to 10 inches high.

SAVORY—The summer variety has a pleasant, spicy taste and fragrance. It is one of the sweet herbs, and can be used in a variety of ways in the kitchen. It grows 12 to 18 inches.

MINT—Use it for mint sauces and cooling drinks. There are several types, including spearmint, peppermint, lemon, etc. They grow two to three feet tall, and are attractive little plants with brush-like flowers.

LAVENDER—Grown more often for its delicious fragrance, and delicate flowers, although often used as seasoning, and in sachets. Some of them grow up to four feet.

There are many other herbs which may be easily grown, including: Anise, horehound, chives, catnip, fennel, pimpinella, rosemary, wormwood, etc.

Dampness in Wood Menace to Painting

Most paint failures are due to dampness. Either the wood was wet or damp when the paint was applied or dampness enters the wood at some exposed surface. More paint failures have happened in the last few years due to the increased use of air-conditioning with its attendant humidity and to the fact that since the depression more laundry work is done at home.

The humidity produced by these two agencies works through the walls and causes the outside paint to blister and check and eventually peel.

The remedy in new construction is not to leave out air-conditioning or to send out all the laundry but to have all outside wood, even wall shingles and siding, back painted before erection. And be sure the back painting is done with full-strength paint.

Dahlia Stakes

Lay aside material about the house for stakes. You will need them when summer comes and the dahlies or tomatoes require support.

The Cutting Garden

An economical way to plant a cutting garden in the vegetable patch is to buy mixtures of annual flower seeds, and plant them in rows or beds.

Paint Discourages Vermin.

Fresh paint is one of the most powerful weapons that can be used against household vermin. Many insects will not remain in the proximity of paint and it not only kills or drives them off but will prevent the hatching of eggs, larvae and pupae. Then, too, painted walls may be kept spotlessly clean, thus removing the food supply for the unwelcome visitors.

L-Shaped House in Colonial Style Planned to Combine Simple and Practical With Beauty and Comfort.

A HOUSE planned about an out-door living room is an advanced idea in building and an extraordinarily good one. With out ideals swinging around to the simplified home and active outdoor living the small house shown here, planned by two people who enjoy being out-of-doors, is one of indubitable charm and comfort. The fut ure out-door living room lies in the rectangle formed by the south and west wings, has assured privacy and southern exposure, the best possible in our climate. Indoor living space has been reduced to essentials which include two baths,, the interest in fireside and books has been stressed, and the sum total is a house that is both practical and beautiful.

"A small house built back of a great chimney," is the way the owner described this Colonial adaptation of the rambling houses of the Southwest, built of used brick and native stone, with its green shutters, its structural lattice porch framing a panelled Colonial door, its grey-green slate roof, and its downspouts ending in rainbarrels. It is a thorough going American house for the owner and his wife are convinced of the importance of American homes to fit the American scene.

The floor plan has been extremely simplified. Halls and service quarters have been held down to the minimum, while all the living spaces have been maintained. Both bedrooms are in excellent proportion and have three exposures which give maximum ventilation.

The house is L-shaped and faces north, leaving the choice southern exposure for the back and giving all rooms except the kitchen a southern exposure. All rooms look out upon the living terrace. The kitchen, slightly larger than an efficiency kitchen, has been arranged with careful conservation of space and makes possible efficient functioning.

The living room is paneled in V-grooved random width pine, which has been stained lightly and waxed, keeping the natural character of the wood. Book shelves occupy the west wall and a colonial bay has been set in the south wall. A door opens onto the living terrace.

The fireplace occupies the north wall of the living room and has been purposely built oversize to accommodate five-foot logs. The mantel is colonial, the trim about the fireplace is of dressed stone and the hearth of flagstones. The chimney of rough stone has been built four feet above the house to create the best possible draft for the fireplace. The floors are hardwood, stained a dark color and waxed.

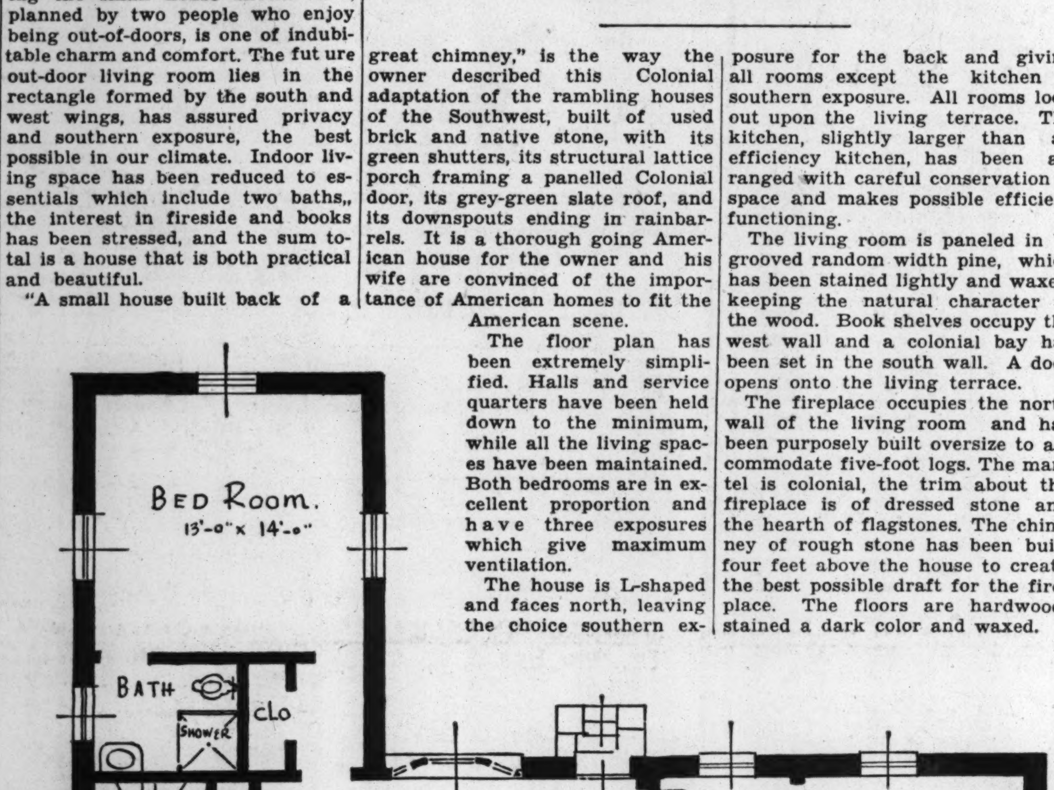
USED brick acquires a certain bloom and mellowness that only years of weathering can give and, as in this case, a house acquires a definite character and charm. The blending of deep red, gray, pinks and yellows create the effect of a fine old Oriental rug or a dimming tapestry. The cornice has been laid in dentil course, with bricks corbelled out to create a pattern of light and shade. The gable ends are covered with wood siding, with a small porthole window in each, lighting the upper portion of the house, which is used for storage. Sills are of brick and the lower half of the kitchen window which faces north, has been masked with brick. The structural lattice porch is patterned after those used on colonial houses on the Atlantic seaboard and which originated and were used extensively in Bath, England.

The basement, beneath the living room and kitchen, has been excavated, providing sufficient room for storage, laundry equipment and an air-codnitioned, gas-fired furnace. The entire foundation is of concrete. Recently a sunroom has been added to the west wing, increasing the total cubage of the house to about 19,000 cubic feet.

The house has been furnished in maple and some old mahogany. There are scatter rugs on the living-room floor and the woodwork in the bedrooms has been painted a cream color. Both bathrooms are finished in structural glass, one having a shower stall and the other a shower and tub.

THE outdoor living room is gradually coming into being. The greater portion is to be paved with flagstones and there will be a landscaped pool. The entire area will be inclosed by a white picket fence with tall growing hedge. The inclosed space is large enough for living, dining and lazing and will be furnished with painted iron furniture. The house is situated to assure air, sun and privacy for this living room. Since the lot is 100x 360, there is enough room beyond for a good-sized kitchen and flower garden. The garage is detached.

The owner has set out evergreens and shrubs for the foundation, and sweet gum, double flowering peach, cut-leaf birch, Japanese cherry and wild cherry trees.



Questions Before the House

I have been very much interested in your new building page and have been learning a great deal from it. I wonder if you will answer these questions:

Q. If I put a concrete first floor in my house where will the electric wire be placed? Also, is it practical to use chain for windows instead of sash cords? Do the chains make more noise? A. C.

A. The usual procedure is to place metal conduits on the slab forms before the concrete is placed. These conduits are enclosed and the wires are run through, giving complete fire safety. Yes, chains are practical and lasting. There is an especial pulley for the chain and the noise is negligible.

Q. Is it possible to replace swinging garage doors with the kind that run up on the ceiling over the car? INTERESTED.

A. These overhead doors require about 12 or 14 inches between the top of the door opening and the ceiling. If this can be arranged in your garage, it should be possible to install such a door.

Q. Is it safe to put some kind of screen in the chimney to keep the swallows from nesting there? Every summer when we are not using our fireplace we have toruble with them. JACK AND JILL.

A. Yes. A half-inch copper or heavily galvanized iron wire mesh may be inserted. You must watch it to see that leaves and twigs do not collect there and shut off the draft.

Q. The ground slopes gradually toward one side of our house and in rainy weather the water comes into the cellar. Can you suggest a way to prevent this? B. H. R.

A. The first thing to do is to grade that side of the house so that the ground will slope away from it for at least 10 feet. Then put in a gutter, it may be just a depression in the lawn, to carry the water around the house. This will mean cutting the slope a little steeper as far as the gutter, but it should not be unsightly. If this does not suffice, then the wall of the cellar must be waterproofed. This can be done on the inside. See some contractors specializing in this kind of work.

Q. My bedroom floors are cork tile. How can paint spots and scratches be removed? What polish can be used? D. M., Kirkwood.

A. Stains do not penetrate into cork; they are on the surface, and can be taken off with sandpaper or by scraping. Wax is an excellent finish.

Q. I have inlaid linoleum cemented on my kitchen floor, and for one and a half years a coat of paste wax was applied once a month. I decided to apply a varnish and before doing so washed the floor with benzine. The first coat did not seem to take; parts had a high polish and the rest was dull. It also appeared as though sand had been sprinkled on it. I have scraped the varnish off but there still seems to be a film of some sort. MRS. ANNA R.

A. Varnish will not take over wax, and apparently all of the wax was not removed. Your linoleum may be of a kind that is finished with wax in the factory, in which case there will be great difficulty in getting it all off. In washing with benzine, it is probable that the gums in the linoleum were damaged to some extent. The scrapings that you inclosed are apparently wax. With your floor containing so much wax, you can hardly hope to get an even varnish finish, and your best move will be to continue waxing.

Q.—How often should canvas-covered walls be washed? How often should they be painted? Should any special kind of paint be used? How many coats. MRS. F. M.

A.—Canvas wall covering should not be washed for the water is likely to loosen the paste. Going over the walls with cloths damp with soapsuds, followed by other cloths damp with clear water, should remove dirt. You can finish with any kind of paint, but flat wall paint is preferable. This paint in good quality is waterproof, and washable. Do not paint it oftener than is required.

Q.—A few years ago I built a stone house with a slate roof; chimneys above the roof are stone. Pure white stains appear on the slates just below the chimneys. No one seems to know how to remove them and they are unsightly. Can you make any suggestions? THOS. R. M.

A.—Those stains, called efflorescence, are mineral salts, brought out of the mortar by rain. They can be removed from the slates with a mixture of one part muriatic acid in 20 parts of water, followed by ample flushing with clear water.

Space Gaining.

In small bathrooms where every inch counts, it is often possible to recess the lavatory between the studs and gain about three inches, which may make just the difference between a comfortable space and a cramped one.

Heater in Kitchen.

Now that oil-burning and gas-burning heating plants have been made compact, houses may be built without cellars and the heater may be placed in the kitchen quite satisfactorily.

FOR BETTER LIVING

With summer and the hot weather only a few weeks off the question of a shower bath for the family bathroom is going to become an important one. You won't have to wreck half your bathroom to install a shower now. It is possible to purchase a complete, self-contained shower cabinet which may be set up on any kind of floor and against any type of wall. The cabinet is simple to assemble and comes completely equipped and in a large variety of colors and finishes.

While we happen to be discussing new bathroom fixtures, there is a new cabinet type lavatory on the market which provides more than five cubic feet of storage space and thus banishes forever that cluttered look that most bathrooms wear. Room is made to accommodate not only towels and bulky articles but there is a special shelf-in-door feature for toiletries and smaller articles.

Side hinged doors give quick and easy access to all corners of the interior and a recessed base takes care of toe room. Towel bars may be attached to the cabinet. The wash basin is equipped with grouped faucets and spout, leaving practically all of the flat surface free for action. The cabinet comes in sizes suitable for large or small bathrooms.

Small homes in frame are being encouraged to put on a gay and colorful exterior. It is now considered excellent form to use color other than white. For instance, if pale green is chosen for the body of the house the roof should be a deep green. The trim is white and the shutters are pale gray. Where cream color is used for the large area a brown roof is suggested with white trim and green shutters.

If your house is furnished in the modern manner by all means see that the wood work is allowed to keep its natural grain. If the wood is well matched for color and grain a wax finish is all that is needed. Modern furniture has done much toward bringing back our appreciation for the beautiful qualities of wood.

Kitchens, too, are taking a new turn in color scheme. If you have wearied of your green, yellow, blue or red combinations, try rose color. Try white woodwork, a white dado banding the room to a point four feet from the floor and the upper surface in rose. Paint chairs and table a deep blue and carry this color note to the pottery and canisters. This is a real tonic in kitchens.

Miss Baldwin Engaged to Wed Frank D. Howden

Announcement of Betrothal to Savannah, Ga. Man Made by Parents of Bride-Elect—Mr. and Mrs. L. Warrington Baldwin—Wedding in Early Summer.

MR. AND MRS. LEWIS WARRINGTON BALDWIN, 23 Westmoreland place, announce the engagement of their daughter, Miss Roccena Dodge Baldwin, and Frank Dixon Howden of Savannah, Ga., whom she has known for 10 years.

Informal invitations for an announcement tea which was to have been given late yesterday afternoon, were recalled Friday because of the death of Miss Baldwin's grandmother, Mrs. John Wilbur Dodge, in Memphis. Mrs. Baldwin went to Memphis a few days ago, and Miss Baldwin returned yesterday after a brief visit, to be here for the week-end with her fiance, who arrived yesterday.

The Baldwin family came to St. Louis from Chicago several years ago when Mr. Baldwin became president of Missouri Pacific Railroad. He was formerly from Maryland, and Miss Baldwin is a graduate of the Oldfields School at Glencoe, Md. In addition to Mr. Dodge, she is a granddaughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Richard Baldwin of that state.

After moving to St. Louis, Miss Baldwin was presented to society at a ball at the St. Louis Country Club. She was a maid of honor at the Veiled Prophet ball and became a member of the Junior League and the Imperial, which has ceased functioning. Her brother, Richard Baldwin, married Miss Almira Steedman, and she has a younger brother, L. Warrington Baldwin Jr.

Mr. Howden is the son of Mrs. Frederick J. Howden of Savannah, where the Baldwins have a winter home. He prepared at the Fleet School for Boys near Asheville, for the Georgia School of Technology. He belong to Chi Psi fraternity, and his clubs include the Oglethorpe Club, the Cotillion Club of Savannah and the Savannah Golf Club.

The wedding is scheduled for early summer.

Lumaghi-Boyd Wedding June 6

MISS KATHERINE O'NEIL BOYD, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Willard W. Boyd, 4470 Westminster place, and Louis F. Lumaghi Jr., son of Mrs. Louis F. Lumaghi, 30 Windermere place, have chosen Saturday, June 6, as the date for their wedding. The ceremony will be performed in the garden of Mr. and Mrs. Herman von Schrenk's home in Florissant, at 5:30 o'clock in the afternoon and will be followed by a reception on the lawn. Father Russell J. Wilbur will officiate, and the bride will walk to the improvised altar on the arm of her father.

Miss Boyd will have as her maid of honor Miss Jane Perry Francis, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Talton T. Francis, whose marriage to Howard Williams will take place three weeks later on June 27. Miss Barbara O'Neil, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. David O'Neil, former St. Louisans, her cousin, will come from Greenwich, Conn., to be a bridesmaid, and the others will be Miss Pauline Lumaghi, sister of the bridegroom; Miss Louise Goddard, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Warren Goddard, and Miss Emily Lewis, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph W. Lewis. Edita Lorente de No, who is the daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Rafael Lorente de No, will be the flower girl. Mr. Lumaghi has not yet announced his groomsmen.

After a wedding trip in Europe the pair will return to St. Louis to make their home.

Miss Doris Aurien To Be Wed May 26

MISS DORIS AURIEN, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George Aurien, will be married Tuesday afternoon, May 26, to Dr. Frank Krenning Bosse, son of Dr. and Mrs. Edwin H. Bosse, 6906 Washington boulevard. The ceremony will be performed at 4 o'clock by the Rev. Dr. Robert Porter of the First Congregational Church at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Aurien, 31 Fair Oaks. Because of a recent death in the bridegroom's family guests will be limited to the families and close relatives. The wedding party will be announced later.

The engagement of Dr. Bosse's brother, Edwin H. Bosse Jr., and Miss Margaret Lee Neff was announced a week ago.

Streets of Paris To Be Theme for Opera Ball May 29

THE OPERA BALL, postponed until Friday night, May 29, has been changed to the Carnival Opera Ball because an elaborate feature in entertainment has been added. Assembly Hall No. 2, on the same level as the orchestra floor, will be converted into a cabaret to depict the Streets of Paris. The postponement has given Mrs. James M. Franciscus, the general chairman, and Mrs. Robert Corley, junior chairman, and their committees an opportunity to greatly enlarge their plans for the affair.

The Carnival Opera Ball will be preceded by a concert given by principals of the St. Louis Grand Opera Co., who will be in St. Louis for the late spring season of opera.

The arrangements and decorations for the Streets of Paris will be directed by Ralph Hall. There will be a continuous show by entertainers from local hotels, skits in pantomime by members of the debutante set and the junior floor committee and several dance numbers directed by Miss Rita De Laporte, former premiere danseuse of the Metropolitan Opera Co. and now associated with the St. Louis Grand Opera Co.

The details for the cabaret will reflect a carnival spirit of the French-Latin Quarter. The tables will be covered with red and white checkered cloths, there will be flower and cigarette girls and artists to sketch pictures of the guests.

The two long hallways on each side of the orchestra floor will be converted into lounges with bars at each end. In addition to the dance orchestra, which will play all night in the foyer for dancing, Miss Martha Love, one of the vice-chairmen of the junior committee, has arranged for strolling musicians and singers to entertain in the supper room and lounges.

Opening Spring Dance

Bellerive Country Club opened its spring season with a dinner dance, attended by several hundred guests, last night. Spring flowers decorated the dinner tables, which were removed later for dancing.

The formal opening will be held May 30, when the swimming pool will be filled for the first time, and tennis courts and gold course will be ready for summer play.

St. Louisans Join in Derby Festivities

Box Parties at Race and Other Functions at Louisville Country and Pendennis Clubs.

THE Kentucky Derby has been run and won. A gala gathering, in which St. Louis was well represented, filled the boxes and stands at Churchill Downs and formed one of the largest and most striking crowds of the year.

St. Louisans, traveling down by motor and special train, helped pack hotels, apartments and clubs, and private cars, that left St. Louis Friday night, offered temporary lodgings on sidings for the weekend. Many people also visited friends and relatives in Louisville in their homes.

Mr. and Mrs. George R. Wendling Jr., and their daughters, Miss Peggy and Miss Anne Wendling, guests of Mrs. Wendling's mother, Mrs. John A. Haldeman, watched the race from the Haldeman box. Mr. and Mrs. Carl Langenberg, who always attend the Derby with Mrs. Langenberg's cousin, Robert Bonnie of Louisville, arrived several days ago in time for the wedding of Miss Virginia Bonnie and William Muldoon which took place Thursday, and will remain until tomorrow for the other festivities of the weekend.

Ingram Boyd and his son, Trustin B. Boyd II, motored down several days ago. This is an annual event for the Boyd family. They are among those who never miss the Derby. Mrs. Trustin B. Boyd II joined them yesterday by train.

Miss Lila Childress, Miss Ann Shapleigh and Miss Virginia Symes of Denver, Colo., who has been visiting at the Childress home, are staying with Miss Elizabeth Windell. Miss Windell came to St. Louis last fall from Louisville to attend the Veiled Prophet Ball when Miss Childress was crowned Queen.

Miss Martha Love and Sproule Love drove down Friday. They have been to the race several times before, and attended the party last night at the River Valley Club, where they have many friends who are members.

At 5 o'clock Friday afternoon Mr. and Mrs. James A. Seddon Jr., Miss Carroll Jones and Samuel Goodyear found the prospect of the trip so irresistible that they started in a car, arriving late that night.

Many persons left by train earlier in the week. Mr. and Mrs. George Castleman Mackay, Mrs. J. W. Jarboe, Mrs. J. L. Bill, Mrs. L. C. Stanger and Miss Ann K. Landis are among those who have been spending several days there. Mr. and Mrs. Robert A. Sherman, who have been in Indianapolis the last week, arrived in Louisville just in time for the race and are returning to-

Virginia Phelps Engaged to Wed

THE engagement of Miss Virginia Phelps, daughter of Mrs. James Orson Phelps Jr., 6907 Pershing avenue, and Bert S. Steiner, son of Dr. and Mrs. A. S. Steiner, 433 Carrswold drive, was announced Friday afternoon at a tea given in honor of Miss Frances Meriwether Wachter. Miss Wachter, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Alfred Wachter of Webster Groves, will be married May 8 to Charles Hayden Reasor.

The announcement was written on cards concealed under napkins on the refreshment plates, distributed to the guests as they entered the dining room. Spring fliwers, yellow predominating, decorated the tea table at which Miss Bonnie Wanless of Springfield, Ill., a college classmate of Miss Phelps; Miss Janet Mackey, Mrs. James Orson Phelps III, Oak Park, Ill., and Miss Margaret Phelps, served.

Miss Phelps was graduated from the John Burroughs School and attended Gulf Park College, Gulfport, Miss., where she majored in music.

Mr. Steiner is a graduate of Western Military Academy and attended Washington University.

The wedding date has not been announced.

Picnic at Spanish Pond In '70s; a Reminiscence Of the Good Old Days

Annual Event in Country a Great Affair, Planned Long in Advance—Fishing, Fun and Big Meal.

By KATHERINE LINDSAY FRANCISCUS.

THE present generation cannot form a mental picture of the pleasures that were wrung from the simpler pattern and slower pace of life in the 70's.

The gay 90's were ushered in by the Chicago World's Fair, and with this era began a change of tempo in the American mode of living. Electric lighting, telephones and finally motor cars passed from the status of curious luxuries to that of necessities. When my aunt paid $1700 for a victoria (with metal tires) at the Philadelphia Centennial Exposition, it was thought by nearly all the family and many envious friends to be an unwarranted extravagance. There was no vision then that the average American family would some day come to own, as its birthright, a conveyance costing half that much—a conveyance which, as a transportation possibility, would be a veritable magic carpet as compared to the victoria.

In the 70's and 80's the Lindsays, the Harneys, the Frosts the Chamberse, all of the Mullanphy clan, lived on farm estates situated in or bordering on the beautiful Florissant Valley. Once a year there was a reunion of these four branches of the family that took the form of a glorified picnic and fishing party. Each estate, Lindsayhurst, Harneywold, Hazelwood (originally the home of Katherine Graham, the aunt who treated herself to the expensive victoria) and Taille de Noyer, provided not only a generous quota of joyous picnickers but horse and mule drawn transportation, along with Lucullan contributions of eats and drinks that ranged from peanuts to champagne.

It Was Spanish Pond Then.

The picnic was held at Spanish Pond, now known as Spanish Lake. It was the only bona fide water hole within driving distance of the Florissant Valley.

There were some 21 children in these four households who looked forward all year to the great celebration. The frolic was staged for their pleasure and though there was a carriage in every stable, the little folk demanded that the picnic spirit be carried out in every detail, which included the jolly farm wagon.

No one today can picture the discomfort of those old houses. In ours, the rooms were 25 feet square with 16-foot ceilings. A 40-foot hall divided the house. There was no furnace, only log fires, which, however, gave out tremendous heat, as they had been built after the Aztec design, with rounded firebacks. The logs were stood on end (no andirons) and as the kindling ignited the flames licked their way to the top, inducing a free flow of rosin which decorated the fire with brilliant colors to say nothing of the deliciously fresh pungent perfume. While our faces were baking, a pitcher of water at the far end of the room would have a thick layer of ice.

In the long winter evenings, when the manicured lamps shed a soft glow in the drawing rooms, we children would gather on the hearth rug, play games and shudder at the thought of the cold bedrooms, where we knew a tin hat tub with cold water was waiting for us. When we saw an avenue of escape we took it and hopped into bed. The hat tub was the shape of a huge hat with a little seat at one side. With the aid of a giant sponge, the ceremony of bathing could be accomplished.

Planned Two Months Ahead.

As early as May the children began planning for the July picnic. The nights were insufferable (there were no screens). We children would take our sheets and pillows to the long hall on the first floor, and while seeking this cool spot we had ample time for exchanging confidence and forming plans for the picnic. There was no third floor. A tin roof belched heat into a shallow attic and this distributed itself through the sleeping rooms.

As the eventful day drew near every detail of the frolic was hashed and rehashed. The little girls scampered over the meadows, catching grasshoppers for bait, while the boys dug worms at dusk by the light of a lantern. There was enough conversation about the fishing tackle to lead one to think we were staging an expedition headed for Lake Superior. Swimming pools were unknown luxuries, so we looked forward to a dip in the muddy pond. The little folk fell heir to the bathing suits worn by the older children the previous year—new ones had to be provided for those who had made a normal growth.

The kitchens were buzzing with activities. David Nicholson, the leading grocer, sent out large orders of delicacies, along with rare brands of whiskies and a basket of champagne with G. H. Mumm in large black letters on the side. The best turkeys and chickens were fattened for the lunch basket. Hams which had been cured and hung in the smoke house were put to soak—they were rubbed with garlic and black pepper and boiled in cider for two hours. They were then skinned and covered with an inch of brown sugar. Fancy figures were outlined with cloves. They were baked for two hours, meanwhile basting with white wine and spices. The real beautification was added when halves of rich pear preserves, crystalized ginger and sauted slices of pineapple were fashioned into artistic bouquets, using angelica for stems and mint leaves for foliage.

Birth of the Angel Cake.

Angel cakes were made, which at that moment had been originated by Mrs. Beers, who kept a hotel on Twenty-ninth and Olive. She shipped one, with much publicity and flourish of trumpets, to Queen Victoria as an evidence of her loyalty and skill and with the hope of recognition as caterer to Her Majesty. Cookies in fancy shapes were stored in tin boxes against the time they would be in demand. Dozens of oranges and lemons were squeezed into Mason jars, raspberry vinegar and French fruit syrups were brought from the wine cellar. The little ones would be a thirsty lot. Great hampers were lined with white paper napkins, tied with gay ribbons and wrapped in tissue. Small mangoes and agrodolce were gracefully arranged in crisp cabbage leaves, ready to be placed on the table cloth, which was to be spread on the grass in the sheltering shade of the mighty elms which fringed the pond.

These preparations were duplicated in other households. The great day finally came. As the long pink fingers of the dawn reached across the eastern sky, the children began scampering about, collecting the equipment, the worms, grasshoppers, bathing suits and fishing lines; the little girls wore gay flowered sunbonnets and the boys large farmer hats. After breakfast the wagons drew up to the door. Improvised brakes were fashioned with ropes, as the hills over which we were to pass were foreign to the flat roads in the valley, so we had to exercise great caution. Each wagon had three seats, three passengers on a seat, while some of the children found comfortable places in the hay on the floor with the pet dogs who were to share the pleasures of the day.

Dirty, but Still Ice.

The servants, the wine and the lunch were in one wagon, where space was found for two tubs of ice wrapped in blankets. The thermometer hovered around the hundred mark, so the ice had to be protected. Fortunately we had an ice house filled with muddy ice gathered from a shallow pond on the place during the winter. The ice would be considered most insanitary today—but here we are to tell of it.

The meeting place for the party was to be in front of the village grocery, where we gathered up cases of soda and bamboo fishing poles. These stuck out five feet at the back of the wagon. Excitement ran high as one wagon after another joined the caravan, the children whooped and waved at one another and all wanted to swap places. Umbrellas were held over the babies as they squirmed uneasily during the long drive. The horses were watered frequently and were allowed to blow as we paused in the shade. We must have been a hopeful lot of nimrods, considering the limited size of the pond. We took iron skillets for the fish fry and corn meal for the frying.

About 11:30 we arrived, some more dead than alive, I am sure. The babies were parked on quilts in the shade, the older folk found comfortable places close to the trunks of trees. Mint juleps and cigars were put within easy reach, while the children refreshed themselves with iced soda pop right from the bottle. They were eager to get into the water and were hard put to find secluded spots where they could change to bathing suits. Soon they were splashing and screaming with delight and wishing they lived near such a wonderful body of water.

Fire First, Then Fish.

The servants gathered fagots and before long a fire was blazing, ready for the fish fry. Meanwhile the fishing tackle must be made ready. Of course, fish hooks found their way to little fingers and curls. These had to be removed by the papas, whose varied talents were often pushed to the limit. Finally the fishermen put out in leaky skiffs, and within an hour enough fish were brought in to begin operations in the skillets. As I recall them, no fish exceeded five inches. The snow-white cloth was spread on the lawn and the fun really began.

At this point, my Uncle John O'Fallon Delany dashed up in a glittering drag with two high-stepping black horses, having driven out from town. It was like the arrival of Santa Claus, bearing gifts for all the children and a case of champagne as his contribution to the feast.

The little people were allowed to arrange the goodies. My father volunteered to carve the hams. Gen. Frost and Mr. Harney exercised their well-known talents as mixers of rare drinks. Iced mint juleps made a second round, while coffee sputtered on the live coals and the fish were snapping in the hot lard. There was much political discussion, talk of past picnics and conversation touching on the race track, then on Page and Union. Mr. Harney was president of the Jockey Club at that time.

Fine cigars added a finish to the feast. No cigarettes in those days, unless we count those rolled by the boys behind the barn. The battle with mosquitoes and flies was now telling on the dispositions of the guests as they made ready for the long drive home. As often happens when parents stage a day's outing for the children, many return not on speaking terms, as fatigue dwarfs their patience and their fulfilled ambitions leave them deflated.

The return of the bedraggled crowd was in vivid contrast to the spic and span outfit which left home at an early hour, happy in the thought of the pleasures in store for old and young.

WASHINGTON, May 2.

NEWS of the serious illness of Mrs. Champ Clark, widow of the former Speaker of the House, and mother of United States Senator Bennett Champ Clark of Missouri, saddened her many friends in Washington.

Mrs. Clark is with her daughter, Mrs. Genevieve Champ Clark Thomson, wife of James M. Thomson, owner and publisher of the New Orleans Item-Tribune, at their home in New Orleans. Mrs. Thomson is fond of telling this story about her mother:

Speaker Clark was fond of telling a story about the first meeting of Mrs. Clark and Woodrow Wilson, after Clark's defeat by Wilson at the Baltimore convention and had been elected President. Naturally, Mrs. Clark had expressed some resentment in the matter and, when the Speaker's dinner date at the White House came around, her family was nervous about her being at the President's right hand as the wife of the guest of honor. It was feared the conversation might drift into political channels.

At the dinner, Speaker Clark noticed that Mrs. Clark and the President appeared to be getting along famously. Their conversation was animated, punctuated with laughter, and they were engrossed in it, while nearby guests seemed to be enjoying the talk, too.

When they reached home the speaker said to Mrs. Clark: "What in the world were the President and you talking about? Both of you seemed to be having a good time."

"We were, we were," returned Mrs. Clark, "we got talking about McGuffey Readers and, as both of us knew them nearly by heart; we quoted back and forth from them and had a wonderful time."

SCRAPBOOK collectors in Washington society save newspaper clippings, dinner cards, odds and ends of human living.

The chief Washington scrapbook keeper is Mrs. Walter R. Tuckerman, formerly Edith Abercrombie-Miller.

Mrs. Tuckerman's scrapbooks not only contain clippings and data concerning her own varied interests and the personages she has met and entertained, but many interesting items of the passing show.

Neatly compiled, catalogued and arranged scrapbook of the exploits of the United States Marines, personalities of World War figures, social stories about the old commandant's house at the Marine Barracks, and of the life and history of Maj. George Barnett, World War commandant of the United States Marine Corps are kept by his widow.

Among the notable scrapbook keepers were: Mrs. Calvin Coolidge, Mrs. Warren G. Harding, Mrs. Thomas Preston, once Mrs. Grover Cleveland; Mrs. George Dewey, widow of the hero of Manila Bay, and the late Mrs. Nathan S. Lincoln, mother of Gould Lincoln, political commentator, and her daugh-

Miss Gladys Miller Becomes Bride of Robert B. Hardin

THE First Presbyterian Church of Webster Groves was the scene of the wedding last night, at 8:30 o'clock, of the marriage of Miss Gladys Miller, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. C. Henry Miller, 449 Sherwood drive, to Robert Balfour Hardin, son of Mrs. Walter Lauraton Hardin of Asheville, N. C. The Rev. Dr. David M. Skilling performed the ceremony which took place by the light of 50 candles in the ferns and greenery of the chancel.

The bride's attendants were her sister, Miss Janette Miller, who was maid of honor; her cousins, Miss Catherine Taylor and Miss Jane Blackmer; Miss Virginia Koken and Miss Margaret Ray of Waynesville, N. C. Mr. Hardin had as his best man Charles Miller of Asheville, N. C., and his groomsmen were Lucien and Henry Miller, brothers of the bride; James R. Miller and Lawrence G. Miller, uncles of the bride, and Robert Oberpier.

The bride was gowned in white satin made on princesse lines with a high cowl neckline and full sleeves gathered to a tight band at the wrist, the only trimming a row of covered buttons down the back. The train was an extension of the flared skirt which was split at the front and followed the off-shoulder neckline. The sleeves were puffed. She carried a bouquet of mixed spring flowers and wore a few to match in her hair. The gowns of the bridesmaids were made like that of the maid of honor, but were a deep shade of peach. They also carried spring flowers, the color of their gowns predominating, and wore flowers in their hair. The flower girl, Nancy Miller, a niece of the bride, wore sky blue organdy made like the other attendants' gowns, with a hair arrangement of yellow daisies. She carried a small colonial bouquet.

Mrs. Miller was gowned in deep turquoise crepe with which she wore a corsage of gardenias, and Mrs. Hardin wore pink lace with gardenias.

After the ceremony a reception was held at the bride's home for the family, the bridal party and their families. The table had a centerpiece of mixed white spring flowers, and the wedding cake stood on the candle-lit buffet. Among the out-of-town guests were Mr. and Mrs. Charles Clemens of Evansville, Ind.

The bride attended Washington University after graduating from Lenox Hall. Mr. Hardin is a member of the American Society of Civil Engineers and is in the United States Forestry Service. They will spend their honeymoon motoring through the South and will live in Asheville.

Marie Martha O'Neill and Lucien Roy to Wed

THE engagement of Miss Marie Martha O'Neill, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John R. O'Neill, 5926 McPherson avenue, and Lucien Thomure Roy, son of Mr. and Mrs. Barbeau A. Roy, 5744 Clemens avenue, was announced yesterday at a luncheon given by Mrs. O'Neill at her home for a few of her daughter's close friends. The news was disclosed when the names of the betrothed pair appeared on balloons which guests blew up to find their places at the luncheon table.

The prospective bride was graduated from the Academy of the Sacred Heart and Maryville College. Mr. Roy is a graduate of St. Louis University.

No date has been set for the wedding.

APPLE BLOSSOM TIME

Pike County Makes Festival for St. Louis Visitors

By EMILY WESTWOOD LEWIS.

CLARKSVILLE, Mo., May 2.

APPLE BLOSSOM time in Pike County. For a week a pale pink haze has hung, like a mist, over the orchards, and lone little fruit trees, scattered through the pastures, have lent a fragile white grace to the serene landscape. In a day or so the blooms will be gone. The quiet valleys will look again like other valleys until next spring, when, if the frost and cold weather have been kindly, rows and rows of apple trees will make a fairyland again.

In the old days Thanksgiving and Christmas were the holidays when residents of Pike County gathered their children and relatives in their large houses, but now the chosen season is apple blossom time.

Mrs. Lloyd Stark in the apple orchard at Overland.

Mr. and Mrs. William Beattie Weakley on the veranda of Falicon.

Mr. and Mrs. William Beattie Weakley of Falicon, near Clarksville, fill their home with guests over the week-end. Mr. and Mrs. Edward Mallinckrodt, whose farm lies back from the road, several miles farther up, have as their guests Mrs. Mallinckrodt's mother and sister, Mrs. Henry Elliott and Miss Georgie Elliot of Westmoreland place. Mr. and Mrs. Eugene Pettus, who live at Overlook, on a hill above the Mississippi River, last year invited many friends from St. Louis for Sunday luncheon when the blossoms were at their fullest bloom. Mrs. Pettus is the daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. George F. Tower.

Still farther up the river, at Louisiana, Maj. and Mrs. Lloyd Stark have luncheons to which Mrs. Stark, the former Miss Katherine Perkins of St. Louis, invites a large group of her St. Louis friends. Last year she set a long buffet luncheon table under the apple trees; a whole pig was roasted over a pit, and Missouri smoked ham made the boards groan.

Mr. and Mrs. Theron E. Catlin, who spend their week-ends on their farm which adjoins Falicon, bring friends up with them to enjoy the orchards. Mrs. Catlin and Mrs. Weakley are the daughters of the late Edward Dameron, who built Falicon in the '90s.

FALICON is a large house set in a grove of trees, with a facade of stately white pillars. It is built of red brick that was made on the estate. Early in the '90s Mr. Dameron, George Tower, Edward S. Robert and several other St. Louisans who were bicycle enthusiasts, would come by boat up the river to Clarksville, and cycle all day Sunday on the gravel roads of Pike County, renowned in those days for their smoothness.

So ideal was the country for that sport that one year the National Bicycle Race was held here, the course being twice around "the square." The square, 22 miles of road, went south to Aberdeen, the former home of George M. Block, and north to Dover, where the old toll gate stood, and then back toward the river to Clarksville. It is interesting to know that with contestants entering from all over the country, Cola Stone of St. Louis won the race. He was the son of George B. Stone, who for many years was the principal of the old Smith Academy.

Thus it was that Mr. Dameron, Mr. Tower and Mr. Robert became interested in Pike County, and bought farms which they soon made their permanent homes. Mr. Robert's land included a beautiful high ridge on which he built his house, and it is there at Oaklands, where his widow, Mrs. Robert, now lives. Her daughter, the Marchesa Mattei, is now visiting her, and when the apple blossoms are over she will join her husband in Europe.

ABERDEEN, the home of the Ira Wights Jr., dates from 1834. During the previous year the Meriwether and Lewis families left Charlottesville, Va., in a covered wagon. They spent the first winter in Kentucky and in the spring, joined by a few natives of that State, they traveled on to Missouri where they settled in Pike County. George Block is descended from those two families. It was his grandparents who first erected a log cabin, and then added the frame and brick which form the lovely old house on the green hillside. Aberdeen remained in his family until 1918, and Mr. Block's book, "In the Days of Long Ago," includes a delightful history of the house.

EITHER the early settlers made the countryside closely resemble that of Virginia and Kentucky, from where they came, or else they chose Pike County because it reminded them of home. Many other Virginians found their way across the Mississippi. Dr. Joseph Bankhead, whose home is in Clarksville, is the great grandson of Thomas Jefferson, and the Carroll family, for whom Carroll County, Virginia, was named, have lived here now for several generations.

A bumpy road leads into Clarksville, and the land stretching out to low hills, is divided into large farms. Pike County is not for the Sunday tripper. There are no Dew Drop Inns or vegetable stands. It is farming country with an old heritage behind it, and its charm and fertility have attracted many St. Louis families back to the soil.

Post and rail fences mark off the pastures of blue grass where graze thoroughbred horses—whose ancestors traveled to Missouri a century ago—and flocks of sheep.

But the principal product of those valleys is apples. Golden Delicious, Red Delicious, Jonathans and Winesaps, not all of them were developed when the county was first settled; but even then the early farmers discovered that orchards thrived in the Missouri soil, and they planted trees, carelessly filled the valleys with blossoms, and shipped the fruit by boatload down the river from Clarksville. It is a different story now. The farmer must work hard and protect his fruit with eight or nine sprays, wash the apples carefully when they are picked, and ship them by truck and train to cold storage plants at Louisiana, Hannibal and St. Louis.

MR. PETTUS, Mr. Weakley and Dr. Malvern Clopton, whose home, Brookhill, lies on a hillside several miles from Clarksville, form the Pike County Producers' Association. An old mill, which dates from the middle of the last century, serves as a packing place for the apples, when they have been gathered early in October.

After Mr. Pettus married the former Miss Marguerite Tower, Veiled Prophet Queen in her debut year, he moved to Pike and developed orchards. He bought several other farms, and in reading over old deeds discovered that some of the property he acquired had originally belonged to Dr. Antoine Francis Saugrain, his ancestor, the first doctor of the village of St. Louis. Soon after Laclede and Chouteau founded that little settlement on the river they brought Dr. Saugrain there to attend to the medical wants of the community, and gave him as a gift acreage in the territory of Louisiana, in what is now Pike County. After many generations the land has returned to the original owners.

John and Ethan Shepley bought an old brick farm house close to Paynesville. They and their families spend every week-end in Pike County. Mr. and Mrs. Wade Childress Jr., live at Ashburton, one of the oldest farms in the neighborhood.

Howard Hunter has a 90-year-old frame house, and George Forrest lives at the former Scanlan place, a white house set far back from the road, with rows of trees along the lane leading to its door.

Mrs. David C. Biggs, and her son David Jr., Mr. and Mrs. Davis Biggs, and Mr. and Mrs. Isaac C. Orr are among the other St. Louisans who have inherited old farms which they visit regularly. Last week-end as well as today their homes were filled with families and friends enjoying the most beautiful season of the year.

* * * *

GUESTS motoring up from St. Louis abandon their cars and city clothes, and ride horseback through the orchards under a shower of blossoms. Then they partake of Sunday dinner, lamb and vegetables, and for dessert, apple fluff or deep apple pie! Afterward they may play tennis, for most of the houses have adjoining courts; and later visit around at the other homes in country style. If it were later in the year they might boat across the river to the sand bars and swim, and end the day with a mint julep with their host.

W. D. SIMMONS ESTATE TAX

By the Associated Press.

JEFFERSON CITY, May 2.—An estate tax of $12,025 was paid the State Treasurer's office today by the estate of Wallace D. Simmons, who died in St. Louis in December, 1929.

Hazel Ramsey Wed To W. A. Williams

THE marriage of Miss Hazel May Ramsey, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John A. Ramsey, 619 West Polo drive, and William Arthur Williams, took place at noon Friday at the home of the bride's parents. The Rev. Frederick A. Roblee of St. Peter's Memorial Presbyterian Church officiated. About 75 guests were present.

Miss Muriel Ramsey was her sister's only attendant and Clifford Drosda was best man for Mr. Williams. The ushers were George W. Herthel, Lee O'Leary, Edward P. Lungstras, Delaney V. Curran, Bert Bohannan and Philip Hancock. The ushers held white satin ribbons to form an aisle to the improvised altar of spring flowers and greenery arranged before the mantel in the living-room.

The bride was given in marriage by her father. She wore a suit of white English homespun with a white lace-trimmed chiffon blouse and a small rolled-brim white hat with a short nose veil. Her flowers were orchids worn in a shoulder bouquet. The maid of honor wore an afternoon gown of Canterbury blue crepe with a corsage of gardenias. Mrs. Ramsey was gowned in pale yellow crepe and wore yellow roses.

The bridal table was laid in thee sunroom and was decorated with white roses, white snapdragon and white larkspur and lighted by white tapers. In addition to the members of the bridal party the following were seated at the table: Miss Helen Ramsey, young sister of the bride; Miss Virginia Seifert, Miss Joy Kreftmeyer, Miss Lois Andrews, Miss Mary Margaret Hancock, Miss Ruth Wilhite and Mrs. Herthel.

Mr. Williams and his bride went to French Lick Springs, Ind., for their honeymoon and yesterday were among the spectators at the Kentucky Derby. They will make their home in Evanston, Ill. She attended Washington University and is a member of Delta Delta Delta. Mr. Williams is associated with the H. W. Kastor Advertising Co., Chicago. He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. P. A. Williams, who recently moved to their country home near Kirkwood.

Among the guests were Mrs. Oscar H. Lotton, Kansas City, an aunt of the bride; Mrs. J. Roland Casey, also of Kansas City, and Mrs. Herman W. Kastor of Chicago.

St. Louisans At the Derby

night with other weary revelers.

Four special trains left Union Station Friday night. Club cars were fitted as bars with radios, and even an accordion player was in one. At the departure there was no confetti, but there were balloons and balloons. The singing of the travelers and the shouting of their friends who were seeing them off, made the station a noisy, festive gathering place.

Mark Eagleton sponsored a car which was filled with a group of his friends, and Lon Harlow and Paul Simmons were in charge of another car. Mr. and Mrs. Thomas C. Hennings, Mr. and Mrs. Paul Jamison, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph W. Folk, Mr. and Mrs. Eugene B. Stinde and Mr. and Mrs. Winston Johns were among others who went down by train.

In another special car was a group of young St. Louis men and women. Its departure was hectic. Bradford Shingle was the chief organizer, and was greatly relieved when Alanson Brown arrived in the nick of time. The rest of the group had reached the station with a good five minutes to pare. In addition to Mr. Shinkle and Mr. Brown it consisted of Mr. and Mrs. Lee Niedringhaus, Mr. and Mrs. Dumont Dempsey, Miss Jane Johnson, Miss Betty Switzler, Miss Sally Bridge, John Overall and David Gunther. Miss Martha Nicolaus who went to Louisville the middle of last week, attended the race with them. At the last minute, as the train was slowly pulling out of the station, Miss Mary Pettus was rushed down the track and lifted up onto the observation car.

Mrs. Niedringhaus wore a suit yesterday of a dark gray striped skirt and soft gray jacket. Her small black hat had a tiny veil. Her sister, Miss Switzler, wore a print dress beneath a navy blue wool coat.

Hugh Logan, Gilbert Pirrung, Arthur Bonsack and Richard Young are also among the St. Louis visitors in Louisville for the week-end.

Mr. and Mrs. J. G. Taylor Spink, annual Derby spectators, took their daughter, Miss Marie Taylor Spink, with them this year to see her first Derby. On their arrival yesterday morning they drove to the Louisville Country Club to be the guests of Mr. and Mrs. Frank W. Bradsby, who also had as a guest in their suite Mrs. Maxwell Dering of Miami Beach, Fla., a former St. Louisan.

At the track Mrs. Spink was smartly gowned in dark blue gabandine with accessories to match, and a Roman striped Eton jacket and red hat. Her costume included a pair of silver fox scarves, a wedding anniversary gift from her husband. Miss Spink wore a grap topcoat, buttoned from neck to hem over a maroon flowered crepe dress, and a black malines off-the-face black hat.

After the races they attended a party at the Pendennis Club and returned home this morning.

Mr. and Mrs. Robert E. Grote motored to Louisville Friday to be with Mr. and Mrs. Bert Hanks, who have visited here, and were entertained extensively.

The race, however, was, for St. Louisans, only one feature in a busy week-end. Private car occupants, despite elaborate preparations made for their comfort on board, as well as guests in hotels and homes of friends, attended many of the parties arranged to entertain visitors.

At the Jockey Club, which is a part of Churchill Downs, there was a Derby breakfast, which lasted most of the afternoon.

The Pendennis Club, housed in town in a Southern Colonial mansion, gave a circus party Friday, at which buffet luncheon and dinner guests were entertained by the famous Old Kentucky Jug Band. Yesterday morning the club gave its annual luncheon.

Friday night the Kentucky Colonels, several hundred strong, attended their third annual dinner at the Kentucky Hotel after the Kentucky Colonel Handicap, arranged by Col. Matt J. Winn at the track.

Interest centered at the Louisville Country Club after the races. Each year this club is a gathering place for St. Louisans who have relatives and close friends in Louisville, and every Derby night gives a dinner dance at which both winners and losers celebrate.

No Wonder FISHING'S GOOD IN WISCONSIN

Wisconsin leads the world in fish propagation. MORE THAN HALF A BILLION fish were planted in Wisconsin lakes and streams in 1935. 7,000 well stocked lakes and 10,000 miles of trout streams in the state attract fishermen from all over the United States.

Whether you come for muskellunge, northern pike, wall-eyed pike, bass, trout or pan fish, you'll find not only wonderful fishing waters but plenty of fish.

And fishing is only one of many good reasons to come to Wisconsin this summer.

RADIO TENOR TO SING AT METROPOLITAN

GEORGE RASELY,

TENOR, born in St. Louis, whose long career in concert and broadcasting has resulted in an engagement with the Metropolitan Opera Company. He will make his debut at the "Met" in the opening week of its popular season which will begin May 11. He has been cast for a role in Smetana's "The Bartered Bride."

FCC Decides Case Affecting KSD's Petition

Denial of KFUO'S Application for Time on 640 Kc. Expected to Clear Way for a Hearing on KSD's plea for Full Time on 550.

A DECISION that is interpreted as clearing the way for consideration of KSD's application for full time on its 550 kilocycle channel was handed down Friday in Washington by the Federal Communications Commission. The decision denied all applications for time on the 640 kilocycle frequency, including that of KFUO, St. Louis, except one of a new station in Portland, Me., for day time.

In the summer of 1934, KFUO applied for a change from 550 kc., which it shares with KSD, to 640 kc., a clear channel assigned to KFI, Los Angeles.

When KSD applied for full time on 550 kc., the KFUO petition for 640 blocked consideration. As long as the 640 kc. case was pending before the commission no action on KSD's application, even the setting of a date for a hearing, could be taken.

Now that the commission has decided the status of the 640 kc. channel, it is taken for granted that KSD's application for full time will be considered, that a hearing date will be set, and that arguments can be presented in behalf of KSD's position, that the service to listeners that it has rendered, and the much fuller service that it is prepared to give, entitle it to full use of the 550 kc. frequency.

At present KFI is using 50,000 watts power on 640 kc. But it has applied for a license to increase power to 500,000 watts.

Full Coverage by Networks Of the Conventions Planned

'Pause Interpreter' Will Be One of Innovations—Noted Announcers and News and Political Commentators Engaged by WEAF, WJZ, CBS and Mutual Chains.

COMPLETE plans for covering the Republican National Convention in Cleveland by the WEAF and WJZ networks, announced by the NBC, include the definite appointment of Walter Lippmann, Dorothy Thompson, William Hard, Graham McNamee, Lowell Thomas, Edwin C. Hill as announcers and commentators.

Among innovations will be the "pause-interpreter," who, with a microphone beside him, will be seated on the speaker's platform. His job will be similar to that of the football announcer who explains what is going on during "time out" in a game. While delegates themselves are still wondering what question of procedure has halted action temporarily, the radio audience will be hearing the story from the "pause interpreter."

The NBC will operate from five pickup points — the floor, the speaker's stand, the "pause interpretor," the announcers' booth in the proscenium arch and a special studio on the balcony floor for interviews with political leaders and visitors.

Contrast With 1924.

FOR the first time, there will be a microphone on the floor of the hall for each delegation. These microphones will be under the direct control of the permanent chairman through a panel board on the speakers' rostrum. This will permit the chairman, the spectators and the radio audience to hear details of the convention proceedings.

The work of the political experts will be supplemented by NBC staff announcers, including Bennett Grauer, George Hicks and Tom Manning, who will give listeners pictures of the proceedings on the convention floor and of the activities of party leaders behind the scenes.

Graham McNamee became famous as a radio personality during the first broadcasts from a national political convention, the Republican meeting of 1924, which also was held in Cleveland. There were no floor pickups in that series of broadcasts. The announcers reported the voting, described the proceedings and even read speeches after they had been delivered. Only 18 stations in the East and Middle West were linked for the 1924 conventions. Ninety-six stations in two NBC coast-to-coast networks will broadcast the political meetings this year, as well as about 100 in the CBS Chain and 10 odd in the Mutual net.

Other Chains' Plans.

THE committee on arrangements has revised the usual schedule so that the keynote speech and important sessions will be at night, instead of in the daytime as heretofore.

Robert Trout, known as the "presidential announcer"; Ted Husing; H. V. Kaltenborn and Mabelle Jennings, a Washington columnist, will be among the CBS network's convention announcers. This chain also has invited Henry L. Mencken, Frank R. Kent, Paul Mallon, Mark Sullivan and other political writers to act as commentators. CBS net plans for microphones and studios at the conventions are similar to those announced by the NBC.

Quinn Ryan, Gabriel Heater, Arthur Sears Henning and Arthur M. Evans will head the convention announcing staff for the Mutual network, which includes WGN, Chicago; WLW, Cincinnati, and WOR, Newark. Hitherto WGN has covered the conventions independently.

Re-enacting of important episodes at the national conventions will be a feature of March of Time

Tibbett Sings Tonight on Station KSD

LAWRENCE TIBBETT will be the soloist with Erno Rapee's symphony orchestra at 8 o'clock tonight on KSD, and Dusolina Giannini, with Victor Kolar's orchestra at 7 p. m. on KMOX. The Radio City concert at 10:30 a. m. today on KWK will be devoted to music from Wagner's operas.

With the New York Philharmonic Orchestra's broadcasts concluded last Sunday, the CBS network will substitute from 1 to 2 o'clock this afternoon the first of a series of Sunday concerts by a symphony orchestra conducted by Howard Barlow and entitled "Everybody's Music." KMOX has not scheduled this concert, so listeners will have to tune distant stations for it. WHAS (820), WCAU (1170), WOWO (1160) or KMBC (950) may carry it. WABC (660), New York, carries all CBS net programs.

Listeners who have heard the Philadelphia Symphony Orchestra playing in network broadcasts will be able to hear the orchestra as it sounds in the concert hall with Leopold Stokowski's directing next Saturday night, May 9, when it will play in the Municipal Auditorium in St. Louis. Stokowski and the orchestra are making a countrywide tour in a special train, playing in the larger cities. A special program, entitled "Highlights on Stokowski and His Program," by Esmerelda Mayes, will be broadcast by KSD at 4:30 Wednesday afternoon.

Except for the Barlow concert and a French trio concert at 12 noon on the CBS net, today's radio concert schedule is the same as for last Sunday.

Richard Crooks will sing in KSD's concert at 6:30 tomorrow evening.

Tuesday evening, at 7:30, Frank Black's string symphony concert series will begin on the WJZ net and KWK. A new American work, Mortimer Wilson's Concerto Grosso for String Quartet and String Orchestra, will be featured.

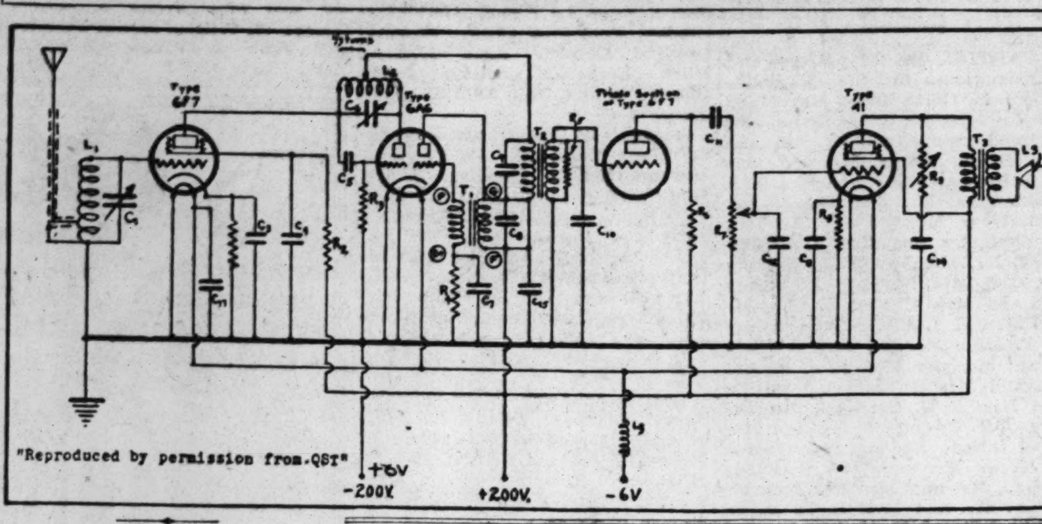
Another Ultra Short Wave Set



"Reproduced by permission from QST"

New Set Built To Tune W9XPD Has Good Tone

A RADIO SET for tuning the ten to five meters band, including W9XPD, the Post-Dispatch's ultra short wave station on 31,600 kilocycles, has been constructed around the accompanying circuit in the radio service shops of the David Ranken Jr. School of Mechanical Trades. It was built by Edwin Nissen, who operates W9PXZ, and Louis Fleschner Jr. W9WAE.

The set is of the super regenerative type, but tunes easily and gives excellent quality if good audio transformers and speaker are used. As constructed, it has a small dynamic speaker in the front panel.

Explaining the circuit, John C. Sampson, radio instructor at the Ranken Trades School, says: "For reception of stations on such high frequencies as W9XPD uses, super regeneration has certain advantages. First, super regeneration can be made to amplify a weak signal from an aerial two or three thousand times between five and ten meters, whereas an ordinary tuned radio frequency arrangement might amplify it four or five times.

"Also, super regeneration broadens the tuning so as to allow a band width of about 100 kilocycles when tuned to any station in this band. There is a tremendous spread of frequencies from ten to five meters. At ten meters, the frequency is 30,000 kilocycles and at five meters increases to 60,000. So such a receiver can be tuned through a total of 30,000 kilocycles. Compare this with the range of the broadcast band from KSD's 550 kilocycles to 1500 kilocycles, a spread of only about 1000 kilocycles. So it is apparent that the tuning ratio between the ten-to-five meter band and the broadcast band is as 30 to 1, giving 30 times as wide a coverage.

"Technically, this means that difficulties encountered in tuning the broadcast band become many times greater in the ultra high frequency band. So we come to a third asset of super regeneration, and that is stability. By this is meant the ability of a set to tune to the frequency of a station and remain tuned to that particular frequency.

"The audio part of this set may be built to suit a listener's ideas. But the special audio transformer used to couple the plate of the detector to the first audio tube is of a special kind, which may be ordered under the number T-7574, and has static shield between the primary and secondary windings. Use of such a transformer is essential to eliminate from the audio system the high frequency generated by the oscillator. An audiio amplifier can not successfully amplify audio frequency if radio frequency also is being forced through it. The construction of the super regenerative detector used in this set is worth noting.

"The detector tube is mounted horizontally to make the leads to it from the tuned tank circuit as short as possible. The variable condenser that tunes this tank circuit is coupled to the knob on the front of the panel with an insulating shaft, to prevent body capacity from having detuning effects.

"The R. F. tuning condenser is at ground potential, so it is unnecessary to place this shaft back of the panel.

"The audio transformer with the static shield is located at the extreme left rear corner of the chassis, as far away from the power transformer as possible. If this transformer is placed too close to the power transformer, a hum will develop, due to the great amplification, that can not be filtered out."

A list of parts and construction details for this set will be published later.

The circuit is published with the permission of Q. S. T., the magazine of the American Radio Relay League, whose headquarters are in Hartford, Conn.

WASHINGTON SCENE

ter, Natalie Sumner Lincoln, well known writer.

MRS. HOWARD CHANDLER CHRISTY, who came to Washington with her artist husband when he was painting the portrait of Mrs. Calvin Coolidge, now in the White House, found the way to make President Coolidge talk. She discovered his favorite author was Mark Twain. He was her favorite as well. So, hour after hour, the President and she talked about Tom Sawyer, Huckleberry Finn and other Twain characters. Therefore, it is not surprising to find that Mrs. Howard Chandler Christy is one of the patronesses of the Mark Twain ball and its pageant of scenes from Mark Twain works at the Ritz Carlton in New York May 5 under auspices of the Mark Twain Memorial Association.

Gay Spring Season in Washington Society

WASHINGTON, May 2.

WASHINGTON has been basking in ideal weather, and the last week has been a continuous whirl of dinners, luncheons, cocktail parties and receptions.

Much interest centered in the wedding of Miss Marianna Dunn, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Clement Dunn, to Count Guy de Baillet-Latour, on Thursday.

An important June bride will be Miss Valerie Prochnik, daughter of the Minister of Austria and Mme. Prochnik. She will be married on June 1 to Jean R. L. de Sibour, son of Viscount and Viscountess J. The Austrian Legation is one of the most homelike and attractive in Washington and it was there that Miss Prochnik made her debut winter before last.

An outstanding reception of the week was given at the Soviet Embassy by Ambassador and Mme. Troyanovsky. They invited their guests for a music program given by Shura Cherkassky and Miss Mildred Dilling.

Ambassador and Mme. Troyanovsky stood at the head of the sweeping marble stairway to welcome their guests. She wore a gown of ice blue satin with a short train, and about her throat on a fine gold chain was a pendant formed of three large amethysts.

Supper, as always at the Soviet Embassy, was lavish, including the inevitable caviar, shrimp and fish in aspic, salads of all sorts and "beef a la Strogoff," a famous Russian dish—only this time it was made with turkey.

CARE OF DISABLED CHILDREN TOPIC OF MEETING IN CITY

Convention of International Society to Open Today—500 Persons Expected to Attend.

MORE LEGISLATION SAID TO BE NEEDED

No Official Provisions in 13 States, President Paul H. King Points Out in Interview.

Organized care of disabled children in the United States varies widely from one state to another, with 13 having no legislative provision whatsoever bearing on the subject, Paul H. King, president of the International Society for Crippled Children, said to a Post-Dispatch reporter last night at Hotel Statler, where the society will open its fifteenth annual convention today.

In states where there is no law providing for care of disabled children the work is done by voluntary efforts of private organizations or by local agencies, he explained. In 40 states private organizations help with the work.

Although few persons realize there are three disabled children in every thousand, interest in the problem of caring for the handicapped is increasing steadily King said. Some are so skeptical regarding the existence of a problem that Michigan is listing all disabled boys and girls.

But more persons are getting interested in the subject as reflected by the development of state programs of assistance and increasing legislative appropriations for hospitals, he continued. International co-operation in caring for the maimed is also on the increase.

World Congress Planned.

The first world conference of persons interested in helping disabled children was held in Geneva in 1929, the second at The Hague two years later. A third world congress will be held in Budapest June 29 to discuss principally a uniform plan for care, treatment and education.

King, who is Federal referee in bankruptcy in the eastern district of Michigan, pointed out there were seven phases in caring for disabled children: prevention, discovery of the case, diagnosis, hospitalization, convalescent care, education and vocational training.

No two states have worked out the program in the same manner, he explained. Missouri has established a State Crippled Children's Service in Columbia but does not have a commission to co-ordinate all the work. Nine states do have such commissions.

Need of More Co-Operation.

At the present time, King said, greater co-operation between states and private organizations is needed for more effective care of the handicapped. Convalescent schools and greater educational opportunities for shut-ins also are needed.

One-third of the cases are traceable to infantile paralysis, King continued. Thus far no real cure for the disease has been found. Congenital causes are also responsible in large part for the cases and injuries, tuberculosis and paralyses of various kinds are other factors responsible.

Rehabilitation work consists of training girls in basketry, typing, fancy work, radio broadcasting and other occupations where physical condition is no handicap. Boys are trained in watch repairing, typing and various forms of craftsmanship.

Representatives at Meeting.

State societies, Rotary International, the Elks, Kiwanis, Shriners and women's clubs are among the organizations which are represented at the convention. Between 500 and 600 persons, including one from New Zealand, are expected to attend the meeting, which will continue through Wednesday.

The Missouri Society for Crippled Children, headed by Dr. J. Archer O'Reilly, made local arrangements for the convention. That organization will hold its annual meeting this afternoon.

Also on the program for today are various committee meetings and a "get-together" supper in the ballroom. The Midwest Polio Association will present a skit, "A Day on the Radio."

The opening session tomorrow morning will be called to order by Henry James Guthrie, representative of the New Zealand Society for Crippled Children.* Edgar F. Allen, president emeritus of the international society, will speak briefly.

Social security for disabled children will be discussed at a dinner tomorrow night. Dr. J. V. Cooke, associate professor of pediatrics at Washington University, will speak on "The Prevention of Infantile Paralysis" Tuesday morning. That afternoon a session will be held on the theme, "The Crippled Child in Relation to the Total School Program."

SOLDIERS' MEMORIAL BIDS BELOW ESTIMATE

$641,000 If Stone Is Cut in Bedford, Ind., $693,000 If It Is Cut in St. Louis.

Low bids for erecting and finishing the superstructure of the soldiers' memorial on Memorial Plaza, received by the Board of Public Service Friday and tabulated yesterday, aggregated $641,608 if limestone for the walls is cut in Bedford, Ind., or $693,203 if it is cut in St. Louis. The city's estimate of cost was $700,000.

President Baxter L. Brown of the Board of Public Service announced that his board and the PWA would consider where the stone should be cut and seek to award contracts for an early start on the building. Construction will require an average of 200 men over a 15-month period.

For several years St. Louis stonemasons have complained about the cutting of stone for public buildings in Indiana. Brown said masons might be too busy with work on the new postoffice to handle the memorial, so that it might be necessary to accept the bid involving cutting at Bedford, which is the cheaper.

For the structure proper there were nine bids, with alternates for the cutting. The low bid, with cutting here, was $599,969, by the Dickie Construction Co., other offers ranging up to $684,486. The low bid, with cutting at Bedford, was $548,374, by H. B. Deal & Co., Inc., other prices running up to $639,686.

Low bids on other parts of the work were: Heating and ventilating, D. F. Edwards Heating Co., $24,580; electrical work, E. A. Koeneman Electric Co., $13,500; special lighting fixtures, Edwin F. Guth, $15,137; elevators, Westinghouse Electric Elevator Co., $15,766; carving stone, special work, C. D. Donato of Bedford, $13,695; mosaic ceiling, Guidicy Marble & Terazzo Tile Co., $10,556.

The foundations have been virtually completed. Funds for the memorial, which will occupy the block bounded by Thirteenth, Fourteenth, Pine and Chestnut streets, were provided by the 1934 bond issue and a PWA grant.

TESTIMONIAL DINNER MAY 16 FOR PROF. WUERPEL

Art School Students and Alumni to Honor Director on His Seventieth Birthday.

A testimonial dinner for Prof. Edmund Wuerpel, director of St. Louis School of Fine Arts of Washington University will be held at the school on his seventieth birthday, May 16. Students and alumni of the school and friends of Mr. Wuerpel have been invited to attend.

Prof. Wuerpel has been associated with the school as teacher and director, since 1894. He became acting director in 1904 and director in 1908. He started out to study engineering, but in 1888 took up art and a year later went abroad to study in France, Italy and Holland.

In France he became interested in American student welfare and with Rodman Wanamaker and A. A. Anderson was instrumental in forming the American Art Association, of which he is an honorary life member. During his residence in France he became a close friend of James McNeil Whistler, the American artist.

The meeting will be open to the public, but reservations for luncheon may be made by telephone through office of the Missouri Welfare League.

EAST SIDE BOARD PAYING 5 PCT. ON IDLE BOND MONEY

$600,000 Borrowed for Parks in August in Anticipation of U. S. Aid, Earns Nothing in Bank.

NO WPA ALLOCATION UNTIL JANUARY

Status of PWA Application Uncertain — One $15,000 Interest Payment Already Has Been Met.

The East St. Louis Park Board has on deposit at the Southern Illinois National Bank of East St. Louis proceeds from a bond issue of $600,000 on which the bank is paying no interest, but on which the Park Board is paying 5 per cent interest to the bondholder, the A. C. Allyn and Co., a municipal bonding house of Chicago.

Stephen D. Sexton, president of the Park Board and a director of the Southern Illinois bank, told a Post-Dispatch reporter yesterday that no East St. Louis banks were paying interest on demand deposits of public funds. Until about a year ago, he said, 2 per cent was paid, but this has since been abolished, owing to excessive bank surpluses.

The bonds were dated June 1, 1934, and sold August 1, last. Coupons for interest up to June 1, 1935, were clipped off before sale, eliminating one year's payment, and the bonding house remitted payment for the two months between June 1, last and the sale date.

Part of the $600,000, out of which approximately $25,000 has been spent in the last month, is being used to pay the Park Board's supplementary share of WPA allocations. The WPA has approved four projects calling for expenditure of $808,043 in Federal funds and $113,123 in Park Board funds for development and rehabilitation program on East St. Louis parks.

PWA Loan Applied for.

The rest of the fund is being held on deposit to finance a board construction program and to repay a prospective loan of $275,000 from the PWA, which has on file an application for a loan and grant of $500,000 to the board. No indication has been forthcoming as to the status of the application.

Although the bonds were sold last August, the WPA allocation was not made until the following Jan. 20 and work was not actually started until the middle of February, so that funds from the issue lay idle until the latter date. The Park Board had to make a semi-annual interest payment of $15,000 on these idle funds on Dec. 1.

Asked why sale of bonds could not have been held up until funds were needed last month, in order to save payment of interest until that time, Emmett P. Griffin, Park Board superintendent, explained that WPA authorities led him to believe that funds to supplement the Federal grants would be needed immediately after the board filed its application for a WPA grant last August. Had he been able to anticipate the delay, Griffin said, he would have postponed sale of the bonds, at least until December, to save one semi-annual interest payment.

Another reason for premature sale of the bonds, Griffin said, was that the board had intended to go ahead with its construction program, but on learning that the PWA had raised the percentage of grants from 30 to 45 per cent of the cost of construction, it decided to apply for a loan and grant and hold up its own program.

Griffin said arrangements with bonding houses did not permit issuing bonds in small blocks as funds were needed, so as to eliminate the necessity for paying interest on the entire issue.

When the Park Board draws up its tax appropriation ordinance for this fiscal year, which began March 1, it must provide for payment of $45,000 in interest for the period June 1, 1935, to Dec. 1, 1936. Taxes for this appropriation are not paid until June 1, next year. No payments on the principal are to be made until 1938.

MOTORISTS CAUTIONED ABOUT CHILDREN PLAYING ON STREETS

Accidents to Youngsters Increase With Warm Weather, City's Records Show.

A request to motorists to be more cautious, now that warm weather has come, because of the numerous children playing on streets and sidewalks, was issued yesterday by Director of Streets and Sewers Frank J. McDevitt.

Injuries to children between 1 and 10 years of age inflicted by automobiles have tended to increase as the weather grew warmer, he said, giving the number so far this year as 24 in January, 23 in February, 27 in March and 50 in April. Last year there were 26 in January, 33 in February, 55 in March and 46 in April.

Such accidents occurred most frequently after school hours, the director pointed out, and involved children roller skating, riding bicycles, running after balls and flying kites.

In the HOLLYWOOD WHIRL

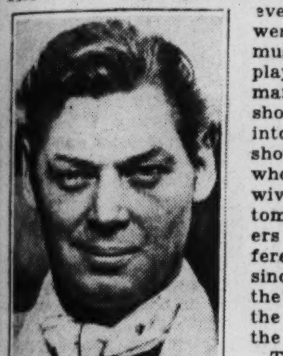
by

Margaret Post Niemeyer

A Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch

HOLLYWOOD, May 2.

SOMETHING is always coming along to give the movie folks a chance to dress up. This week it was the Stokowski concerts where the cinema darlings mingled with the non-professional elite. The latter were in the majority, of course, for the hall seated some 12,000 and every chair was taken, but the screen stars were the center of all eyes in between the musical numbers. When the orchestra was playing it was Mr. Stokowski who commanded the attention. And he put on a real show. He is, as you may have heard, going into the movies himself before long, and he showed the rather bored cinema executives, who were dragged to the concert by their wives, what he could do in the way of pantomimic skyrocketing. The true music lovers thought that the symphony rather suffered, in a musical way, as a result but, since those T. M. L.'s were mostly back in the dollar seats, their opinions were lost in the admiration for Stokowski's acting and the sables and ermine from the studios.



JOHN WEISSMUELLER

There is one dress note, although in no sense feminine, which caught and held the eye of most of the women present and which is really worth chronicaling. Mr. Johnny Weissmueller, whose social activities even when Lupe Velez is in town, are confined to swimming events, prize fights and playing Tarzan on the screen, arrived alone, about the time everyone else was seated at the first concert and stalked his six feet six, down the aisles to a front row location. There was some confusion over which was his chair and Mr. Stokowski paused, baton in air, until Tarzan was made comfortable. Meanwhile the vast audience had a splendid opportunity to inspect Mr. Weissmueller at his sartorial best. A prominent plaid polo coat, with a dazzling lining, was thrown over his arm so as not to obstruct the view of the rest of his evening costume which consisted of a violently checked coat, a pair of unpressed grey trousers and a neckless—and, I dare say—sleeveless, wide striped polo shirt. Mr. Weissmueller finally sat down and went, almost immediately, to sleep and the concert and Stokowski's pyrotechnics got under way.

—o—o—

And speaking of the movies capturing Stokowski, who almost had his way over the musical committee in the matter of presenting Bing Crosby, as a soloist for the concert, do you know that another great musician is shortly to come here to write for the films. None other than the Russian composer Rachmaninoff who is scheduled, I understand, to do something spectacular for Paramount. Having gotten these little digressions from the real of fashion out of the way, let me tell you what some of the movie people wore to the opening concert.

MARY ASTOR, who has lost a lot of weight, looked very wonderful indeed in a polka-dot satin creation with a mink cape, and Billie Burke was also polka-dotted but her dots were blue on a black net creation and her wrap was of velvet topped with silver fox. Still another dotted gown was worn by Mrs. Fredric March. Her's was a black dotted net with silver fox.

● THERE WAS PLENTY of color to the gorgeous evening gowns. Bette Davis, who was with her musician husband, Harmon Nelson, displayed a flame taffeta, and Nancy Carroll was in green taffeta for instance but, somehow, the black and white costumes seemed to predominate. There was Claire Trevor in black maline with a black sequin covered jacket, and Ann Harding who looked pale and stunning in all black. Constance Collier set off her black chiffon with a white ermine coat and Jeanette MacDonald wore a gown of black crepe of a decided Spanish style with its fringe trimming. Josephine Hutchinson wore a trailing black crepe and her wrap was green and quilted. Among those who ran to white was the new Mrs. Eddie Lowe in white taffeta trimmed with white sequins. Mrs. Edward G. Robinson wore white crepe as did Mrs. Bob Montgomery and Mrs. Jesse Lasky, Louise Rainer, however, stood out in a red and white print with a red velvet coat.

Ann Sothern put on a cocktail party the other day which was something of a novelty. Chartering a big passenger plane she took her guests down to Palm Springs and back, without a stop, serving the liquid refreshments in the air.

—o—o—

LITTLE JEAN PARKER, also one of the new brides, showed something new in gadgets at luncheon today. It was a most modest looking bracelet, just a plain band of black enamel unbroken except for a small, oblong clamp. But when she pressed the sides of this link two tiny camera like shutters flew back and there was a little watch, so little that one needed a magnifying glass to tell the time.

● I KNOW THE CRY of "Old Woman" will go up when I tell you that all the debs and sub-debs from Bowdoin to Berkeley should have a redingote this spring and summer. Even the youngest and dizziest of the movie lasses are wearing them and there is a great boon to be had from a redingote ensemble aside from the fact that it is honestly youthful in line. No matter whether it gets hot, as it will in St. Louis this summer, or turns cool, as it will during the early part of the Municipal Opera season at Forest Park, the redingote fills the bill. You can wear it without a topcoat and if the St. Louis sun gets too energetic, you can even take it off, provided, of course, you are wearing a whole dress and not just a foundation underneath. In modern version redingotes have gone formal on us. Just imagine a glorified version of lace-trimmed mousseline over taffeta with a round collar, sky-pointing shoulders, short sleeves, fitted waist and no belt, and a whirl of narrow ruffles on the floor. Yes, that's our old friend gone social, and it's no mere fabric of the imagination, either, because Marion Davies has one. Another luxury version" of the redingote, owned by Beverly Roberts, is velours-striped black net over black taffeta, tied in a smashing bow at the throat and spreading out full from the waistline over a skin-tight underskirt. On the screen, in "Stage Struck," Joan Blondell will wear a model designed by Orry-Kelly for the street, an imported print over black crepe, with short skirt, wide, tight belt, and a turn-down collar finished with a knot of green and white flowers at the throat. Joan's accessories, for this, are a stiff black straw sailor with a white grosgrain band, and big white pom-pons both on top of and under the crown, white gloves, black bag, and black patent pumps. And Margaret Lindsay has a frock printed in white on a dark background, with the coat exactly the reverse in color but the same design, styled with a snowy white fischu collar, than which nothing is more youthful. Her accessories being T-strap white shoes, dark gloves and a small dark straw hat with a big white flower in front. Yes, ma'm. When you see how they look on the screen you'll want a redingote for your very own.

Met Bebe Daniels dashing into the Vine street Derby yesterday noon in a tailored suit and straw hat with dotted veil and amazing the lunchers by singing "I'm Rich." It seems her dress shop had just sold three gowns during the morning.

● A GOOD MANY OF the movie stars are picking up the easy money offered by the radio these nights. Wonder if you happened to hear Ann Harding the other night when she broadcast a condensed version of her old play "Holiday." I had gone to the air studio to see and hear her do her stunt and was rather surprised that she had

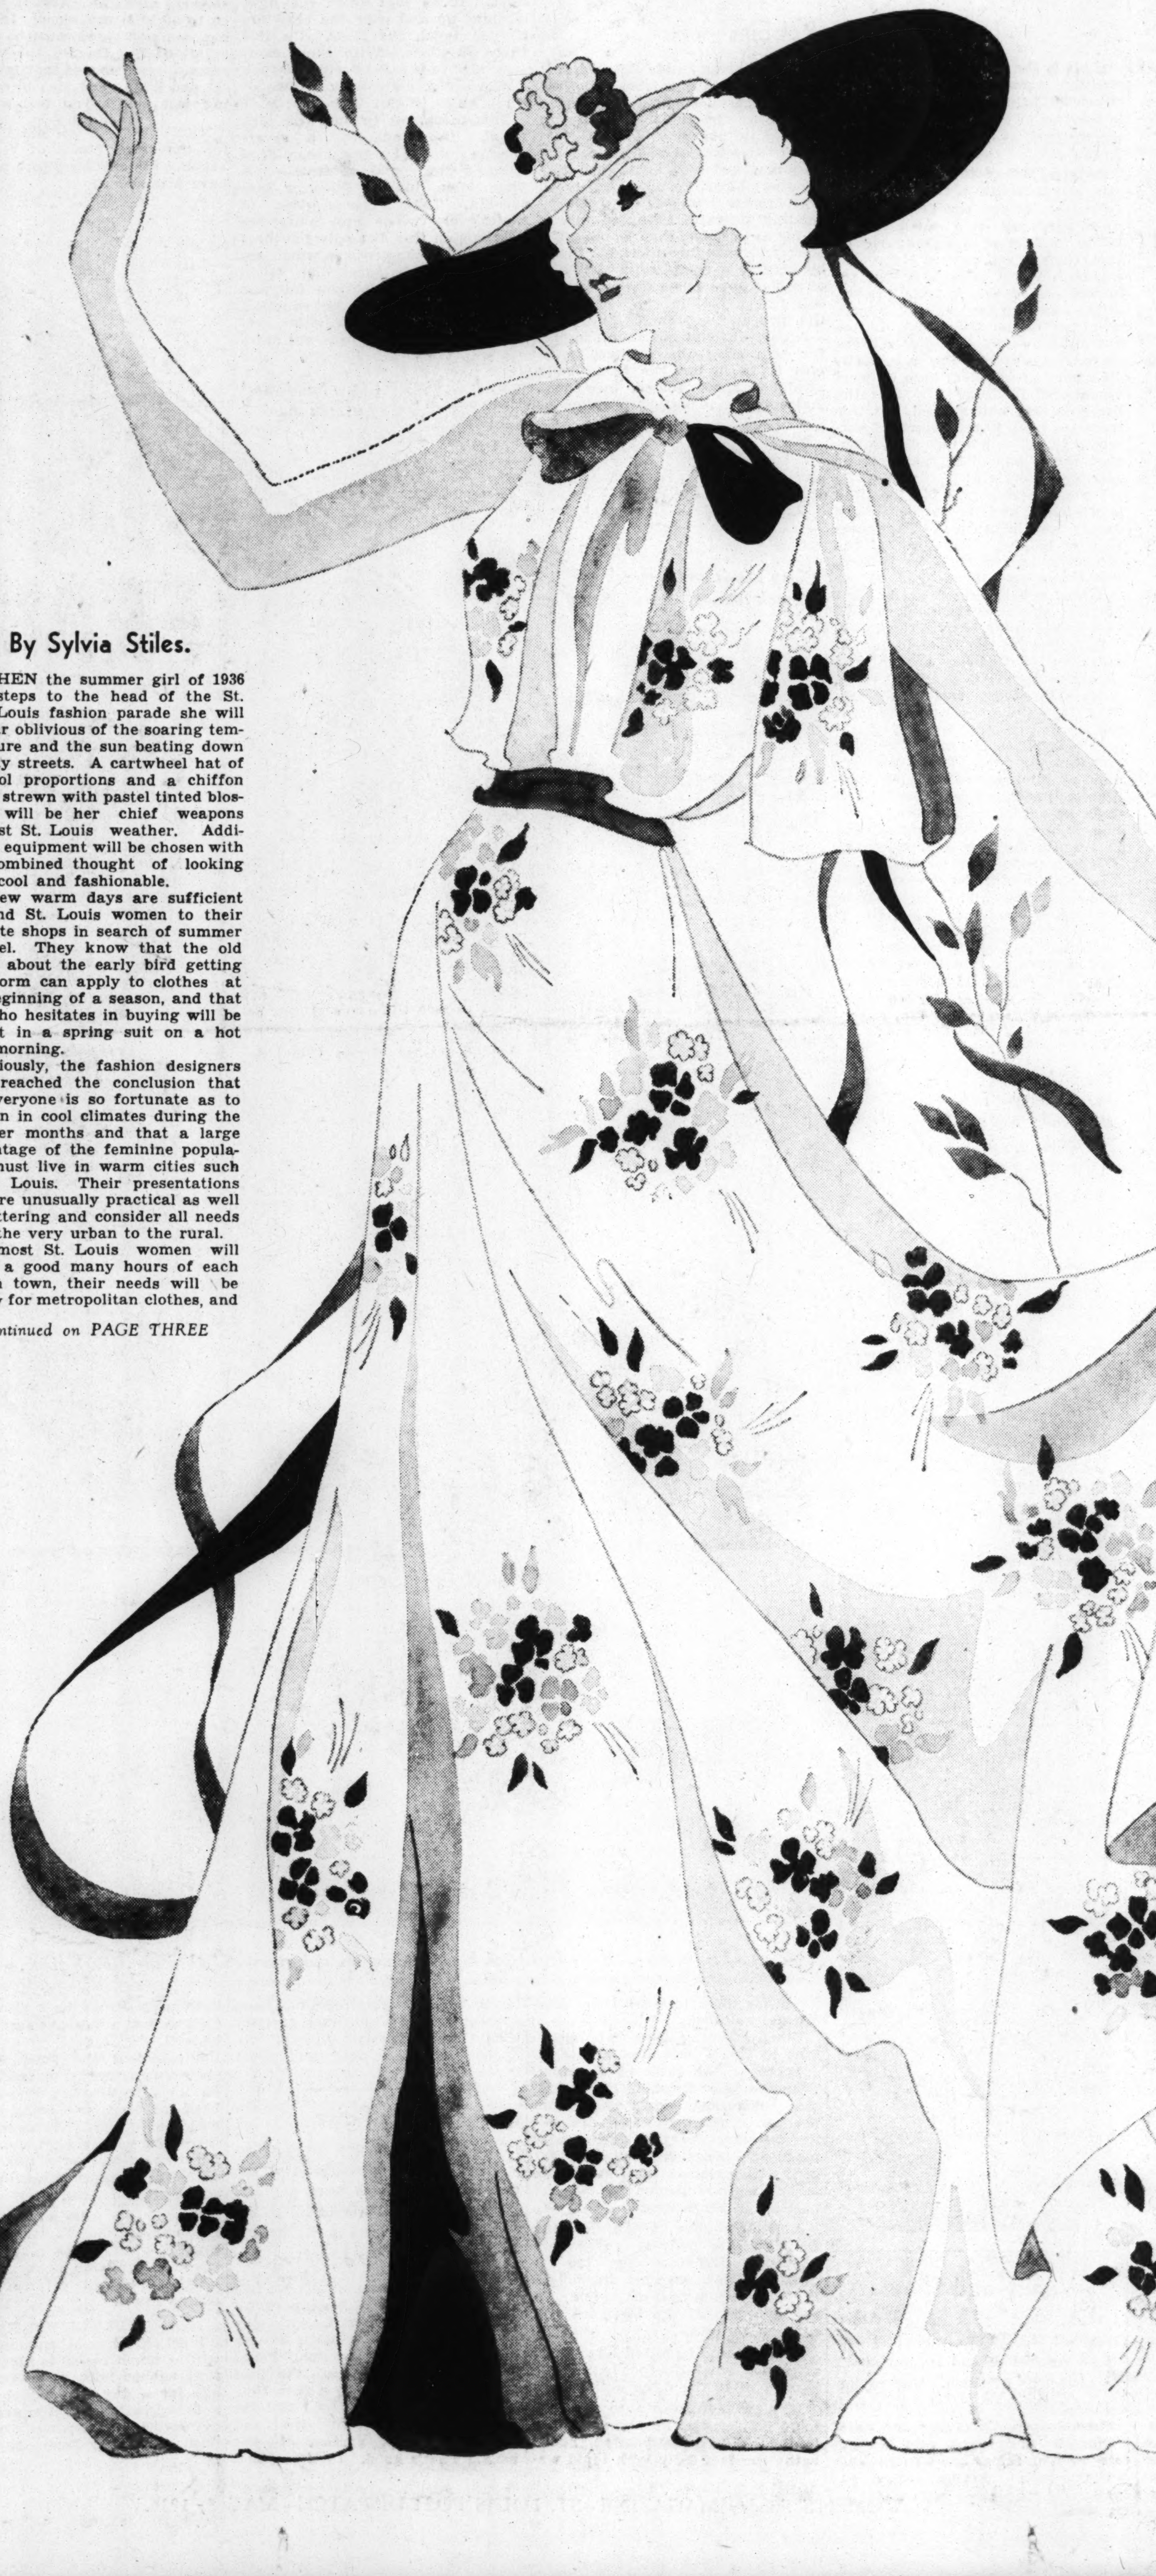
LOOKING AHEAD to SUMMER TIME

A Forecast of Hot-Weather Fashions in St. Louis



By Sylvia Stiles.

WHEN the summer girl of 1936 steps to the head of the St. Louis fashion parade she will appear oblivious of the soaring temperature and the sun beating down on city streets. A cartwheel hat of parasol proportions and a chiffon frock strewn with pastel tinted blossoms will be her chief weapons against St. Louis weather. Additional equipment will be chosen with the combined thought of looking both cool and fashionable.

A few warm days are sufficient to send St. Louis women to their favorite shops in search of summer apparel. They know that the old adage about the early bird getting the worm can apply to clothes at the beginning of a season, and that she who hesitates in buying will be caught in a spring suit on a hot May morning.

Obviously, the fashion designers have reached the conclusion that not everyone is so fortunate as to sojourn in cool climates during the summer months and that a large percentage of the feminine population must live in warm cities such as St. Louis. Their presentations now are unusually practical as well as flattering and consider all needs from the very urban to the rural.

As most St. Louis women will spend a good many hours of each day in town, their needs will be largely for metropolitan clothes, and

NEW YORK, May 2.

THE envy of rival entrepreneurs and a part of the gleaming legend of the more urbane Broadway producers, Dwight Deere Wiman has rung the bell again with his presentation of "On Your Toes." A polished and dapper fellow, he ranks as the most social play producer since Winthrop Ames, and is the recognized and ranking theater figure in Manhattan's cafe and professional society. Like Ames, too, he stems from a family whose fortunes were founded in the manufacture of agricultural implements. He is by no means unfamiliar with the commercial complexities of the Deere Plow Works. Even after a career in the theater of substantially more than a decade, he is still one of the youngest figures at first nights. His long friendship with Monty Woolley, dating from the time when he was a Yale undergraduate and Woolley drama coach at New Haven, has been even more closely cemented by his insistence that the roaring and whiskered Monty have a prominent role in his current success. While he is reported to own only a minor share of "On Your Toes," he is credited with being, more than any one else, responsible for its major success.

A YOUNG thing of along 20 trailed in to the bar of Sherman Billingsley's Stork Club a few afternoons since, with a couple of lads around town in tow. Every one present seemed just a thought staggered when, in reply to the barkeep's inquiry of what would it be, she unabashedly demanded a Manhattan with bonded rye and two ponies of Haig and Haig pinch-bottle Scotch. Every one else had Tom Collinses and waited to see what the little lady would do with this peculiar whisky arrangement. When her drinks arrived she removed an atomizer from her handbag, unscrewed the top and filled it with the two glasses of Scotch. "My boy friend is on the wagon," she muttered, downing her Manhattan in a single gulp. "I was thinking perhaps he'd feel better about it if he could spray a little good liquor in his hair and on the lapels of his packet. Then, at least, he could have the smell of it."

THE old familiar names of the dreadful prohibition era keep coming to light, surrounded with auras of hitherto unsuspected respectability, but other wise hardly changed from the bad-check and judas-hole age. Even Mat Winkle is still doing business at a lineal descendant of his original Kinvara Cafe, in the East Fifties, so nobody who remembers the town in those days is surprised to walk into the Meurice, in West Fifty-eighth Street, just back of the Plaza by a block and find Steve Bozonnetti as one of the proprietors. There wasn't a Yale or Princeton undergraduate in the days of Stutz bearcat roadsters and the Club de Vingt who didn't know Steve and Ed Bozonnetti's place in Forty-sixth Street. It was contemporary with Dan Moriarity's and the Jungle Club antedating such latter-day magnificence as "21," the Villa d'Este and the original Stork Club, and was, like Dan's a happy focal point for the lads of the Brooks four-button-suit set. No amount of screaming, howling, falling, nose pasting or singing of the song about the hedgehog at Harvard upset Steve and Ed. Tumults and commotions were as much a part of the establishment as the fancy bottles of that Italian liqueur that floated a tree of sugar and were brought down from the shelf for the admiration and wonder of young things from Farmington on an urban toot. Steve and Ed were town institutions. Now Steve's partner at the Meurice is Frank Beccaro, one-time associate of George Marbardi in the old Backgammon Club, and their best patrons derive from the musical world, Nino Martini, Lawrence Tibbett, Nelson Eddy, Richard Bonnelli, Dusolina Giannini. Long ago Steve was a great friend of Victor Herbert and when his oldest boy celebrated his fourth birthday Herbert wrote some verses, with original music, for him on a celluloid toy. The toy is still in Steve's safe, and he'll bring it out if you ask him. The title of the song is "I Want What I Want When I Want It."

AROUND THE CAFES: Rumor has it that the Dionne quintuplets have been entered for Foxcroft School and will be social as nothing human in a few years. . . . Nothing makes other night-club proprietors so furious as that zebra-stripe back-

by

Martha Carr

Letters intended for this column must be addressed to Martha Carr at the St. Louis Post-Dispatch. Mrs. Carr will answer all questions of general interest but, of course, cannot give advice on matters of a purely legal or medical nature. Those who do not care to have their letters published may enclose an addressed and stamped envelope for personal reply.

what shall I do

My Dear Mrs. Carr:

MY HUSBAND is a man 47 years old, who has just told me he is in love with his 21-year-old secretary. We have four children, one a college student and one not yet in school. He asked for a divorce and I refused. Later, his indifference and cold treatment led me to consent. He said, "All right," but could not arrange a settlement. Then later, still, he said, "Just let it go. I am satisfied to leave things as they are; I am not anxious to break up this home."

But he never speaks to me except on business matters and refuses to take me out. He also asked me not to invite our friends here. He says his conduct is all right as he always takes the girl's mother along when they go out. They go on week-end trips; the girl's married brother and wife or her mother are supposed to go along. These people know all about the circumstances and he says he enjoys their company and I have no right to interfere. He provides very well for the family, but goes with us nowhere.

These conditions are, as you may imagine, unbearable to me, as we had such a happy married life until these people entered his life.

Of course I would be much happier separated from him, but wonder if the sacrifice would not be too great for the children to have to divide the income with this girl. This has been going on over two years. I would thank you for your advice.
L. E. S.

It is evident that he is afraid of the outcome, should he apply for a divorce. Certainly he would have little to offer in justification, in any court. I am sure he has inquired about this and after being posted as to what the outcome would be, he has "decided" to leave things as they are.

In your place, I certainly would investigate my own status in the case from the legal standpoint. I would not "give" him the divorce without full justice for my children and myself; especially in the matter of income.

The evidence is so much against him, I fancy you could get just what is due you and your children. Consult a lawyer about the legal phase. From the standpoint of justice and fairness, he hasn't a leg to stand on and his calm conceit and selfishness is beyond comment.

No wonder he dosn't want friends asked in.

My Dear Mrs. Carr:

● MY LITTLE girl is to make her Holy Communion next month. I would appreciate it very much if you will give me suggestions as to what to serve for breakfast for the family.

I have thought of having bacon and eggs or fried chicken, but don't know what to serve with it.

Kindly answer as soon as possible. A READER.

You will make your work light if you will combine, in a rather well-known dish, the hot buttered toast on which is placed a slice of broiled ham and on top of this a few stalks of fresh asparagus and then the poached egg. Over this a little cream sauce having melted butter and perhaps soft cheese in it.

If you care to serve fruit before—have a glass of orange juice or half a grapefruit. Coffee of course will be served with this.

Or you can serve bacon and scrambled eggs, with waffles and syrup to finish off.

—o—o—

Dear Martha Carr:

● I AM WRITING you in regard to a matter which may interest many St. Louisans at this time.

Last fall we bought and remodeled a home. Shortly after moving in we noticed a large congregation of winged creatures on the ground in the rear of the house. We did not know what they were. I have since learned to my horror that they were termites.

Now, how can these termites be exterminated when they come out again this spring? It should be easy to destroy them when they are on the ground and also destroy the channel they have built to re-enter but I do not know how to go about this. Could you get this information and publish it as I feel sure a great many people would appreciate it very much, as would, I.

If your house already has these destructive creatures you will have to have expert work done, before your wood work is undermined. There are firms here which do this work. I could not mention their names in the column but should you not be able to find them through building firms, I can send you addresses if you will mail me self-addressed, stamped envelope.

My Dear Martha Carr:

● PLEASE PRINT this in the Post-Dispatch. I am a girl 16 years old. My mother has six children. She treats me worse than any of them. I know she hates me because she calls me all kinds of names and tells me to go jump in the river. And if she tells me to do something and I don't jump and run, she says I am lazy. I am getting tired of the way she treats me. I told her that some day I will get out of her way, by letting somebody kill me.

She wants me to stay in the house all the time and doesn't even want me to go out with any boys. Now that's the way she treats me, Mrs. Carr. Please help me by giving your advice.

THE BLACK SHEEP.

Isn't the fact that she doesn't let you run with boys all the time, the very worst thing she does? And when you are around home, sort of moping maybe, and a little bit lagging with the housework, while she is busy and having to watch the time to get things done, aren't you just the least bit trying? I expect sometimes she is cross—but you mustn't let that make you so tragic; it is merely the tension and weight of responsibility and hurry. When she is in a hurry, try speeding up a little and don't take everything she says literally, because she doesn't mean them.

Dear Mrs. Carr:

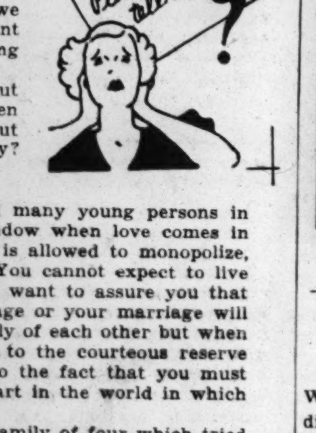
● We are engaged, both 22, and very much in love. We plan to be married within a year. One thing we cannot understand, and which is a great obstacle in our way is this . . .

When we are alone, its like heaven on earth, everything is fine, but when we mix with a crowd, or even just another couple it seems that something comes between us and we are distant to each other, which feeling leaves us irritable, because we cannot understand why.

Another thing that puzzles us is, while we are not jealous of each other, we both want an account of what the other was doing when not together.

We've tried to get over that silliness but it will persist; and we're only happy when we know that one has done nothing but thing about the other. Can you tell us why?

JUST WE TWO.



and every thing I do seems wrong! Please tell me ?

Well, one reason is, with a good many young persons in love, common sense flies out the window when love comes in at the door. Possessiveness, when it is allowed to monopolize, is not a pretty nor a noble quality. You cannot expect to live in the world and not be of it. But I want to assure you that you must work this out before marriage or your marriage will be a failure. Alone, you may think only of each other but when others are about, you adjust yourself to the courteous reserve you owe others and adjust yourself to the fact that you must divide, unselfishly, so as to be your part in the world in which you live.

You doubtless have heard of the family of four which tried to live life without thought of those others who made up their community—and on whom, in reality, they were dependent, as is the case of everyone. Their idea of living was summed up in utter selfishness—"Me and my wife; my son John and his wife—us four and no more."

COMMON SENSE IN REDUCING

Correct Diet and Plenty of Sleep Help in Guarding Health When Taking Off Weight.

By Duke Robbins

(This is the second of a series on common sense methods of weight reduction by the physical director to the cast of the Municipal Opera.)

IN THESE days, when freak diets have taken the place of filet mignon and potatoes, we must look to our health in this matter of reducing. If you are going to reduce, you must do it sensibly.

The first step in getting rid of superfluous flesh, as told last week, wasn't so hard. But now that we have accomplished that and arrived at the stubborn fatty second layer—well, that is another story. After having taken a few simple setting-up exercises and having trained our stomach to be content on a reduced amount of food, we find that the battle is only half started. At this point we have to take stock of ourselves again, renew our determination, revise our diets, increase our activity—and fight!

When a person gets fat, the flesh is stretched, and the fat penetrates deeply into the muscles. Then massage is helpful. The flesh of the offending bumps must be twisted, rolled and sometimes "hacked" or "beaten" to break the fat cells. That helps to eliminate the flabby condition and to properly mold the figure.

Exercises for this second phase of reducing are much harder and should be done with snap and vigor. Among the most beneficial are: Stretching the arms, back and legs; pulling and twisting the body, kicking, running in one place, dancing and jumping rope. These exercises may be interspersed with the preliminary exercises explained last week of aeroplane twisting, squatting, lunging and thrusting. Spend 15 minutes daily on your exercises. It is best to do them on arising.

Let us consider the new exercises in detail: Stretching—Clasp hands, the back of one hand in the palm of the other, elevate arms over the head and pull until you feel the need of rising on toes. Reverse hand clasp and repeat. Do this several times. Keeping hands elevated over head, bend sideways from waist, till trunk is parallel with floor. Repeat in opposite direction. In doing this exercise do not turn body. Repeat four or five times.

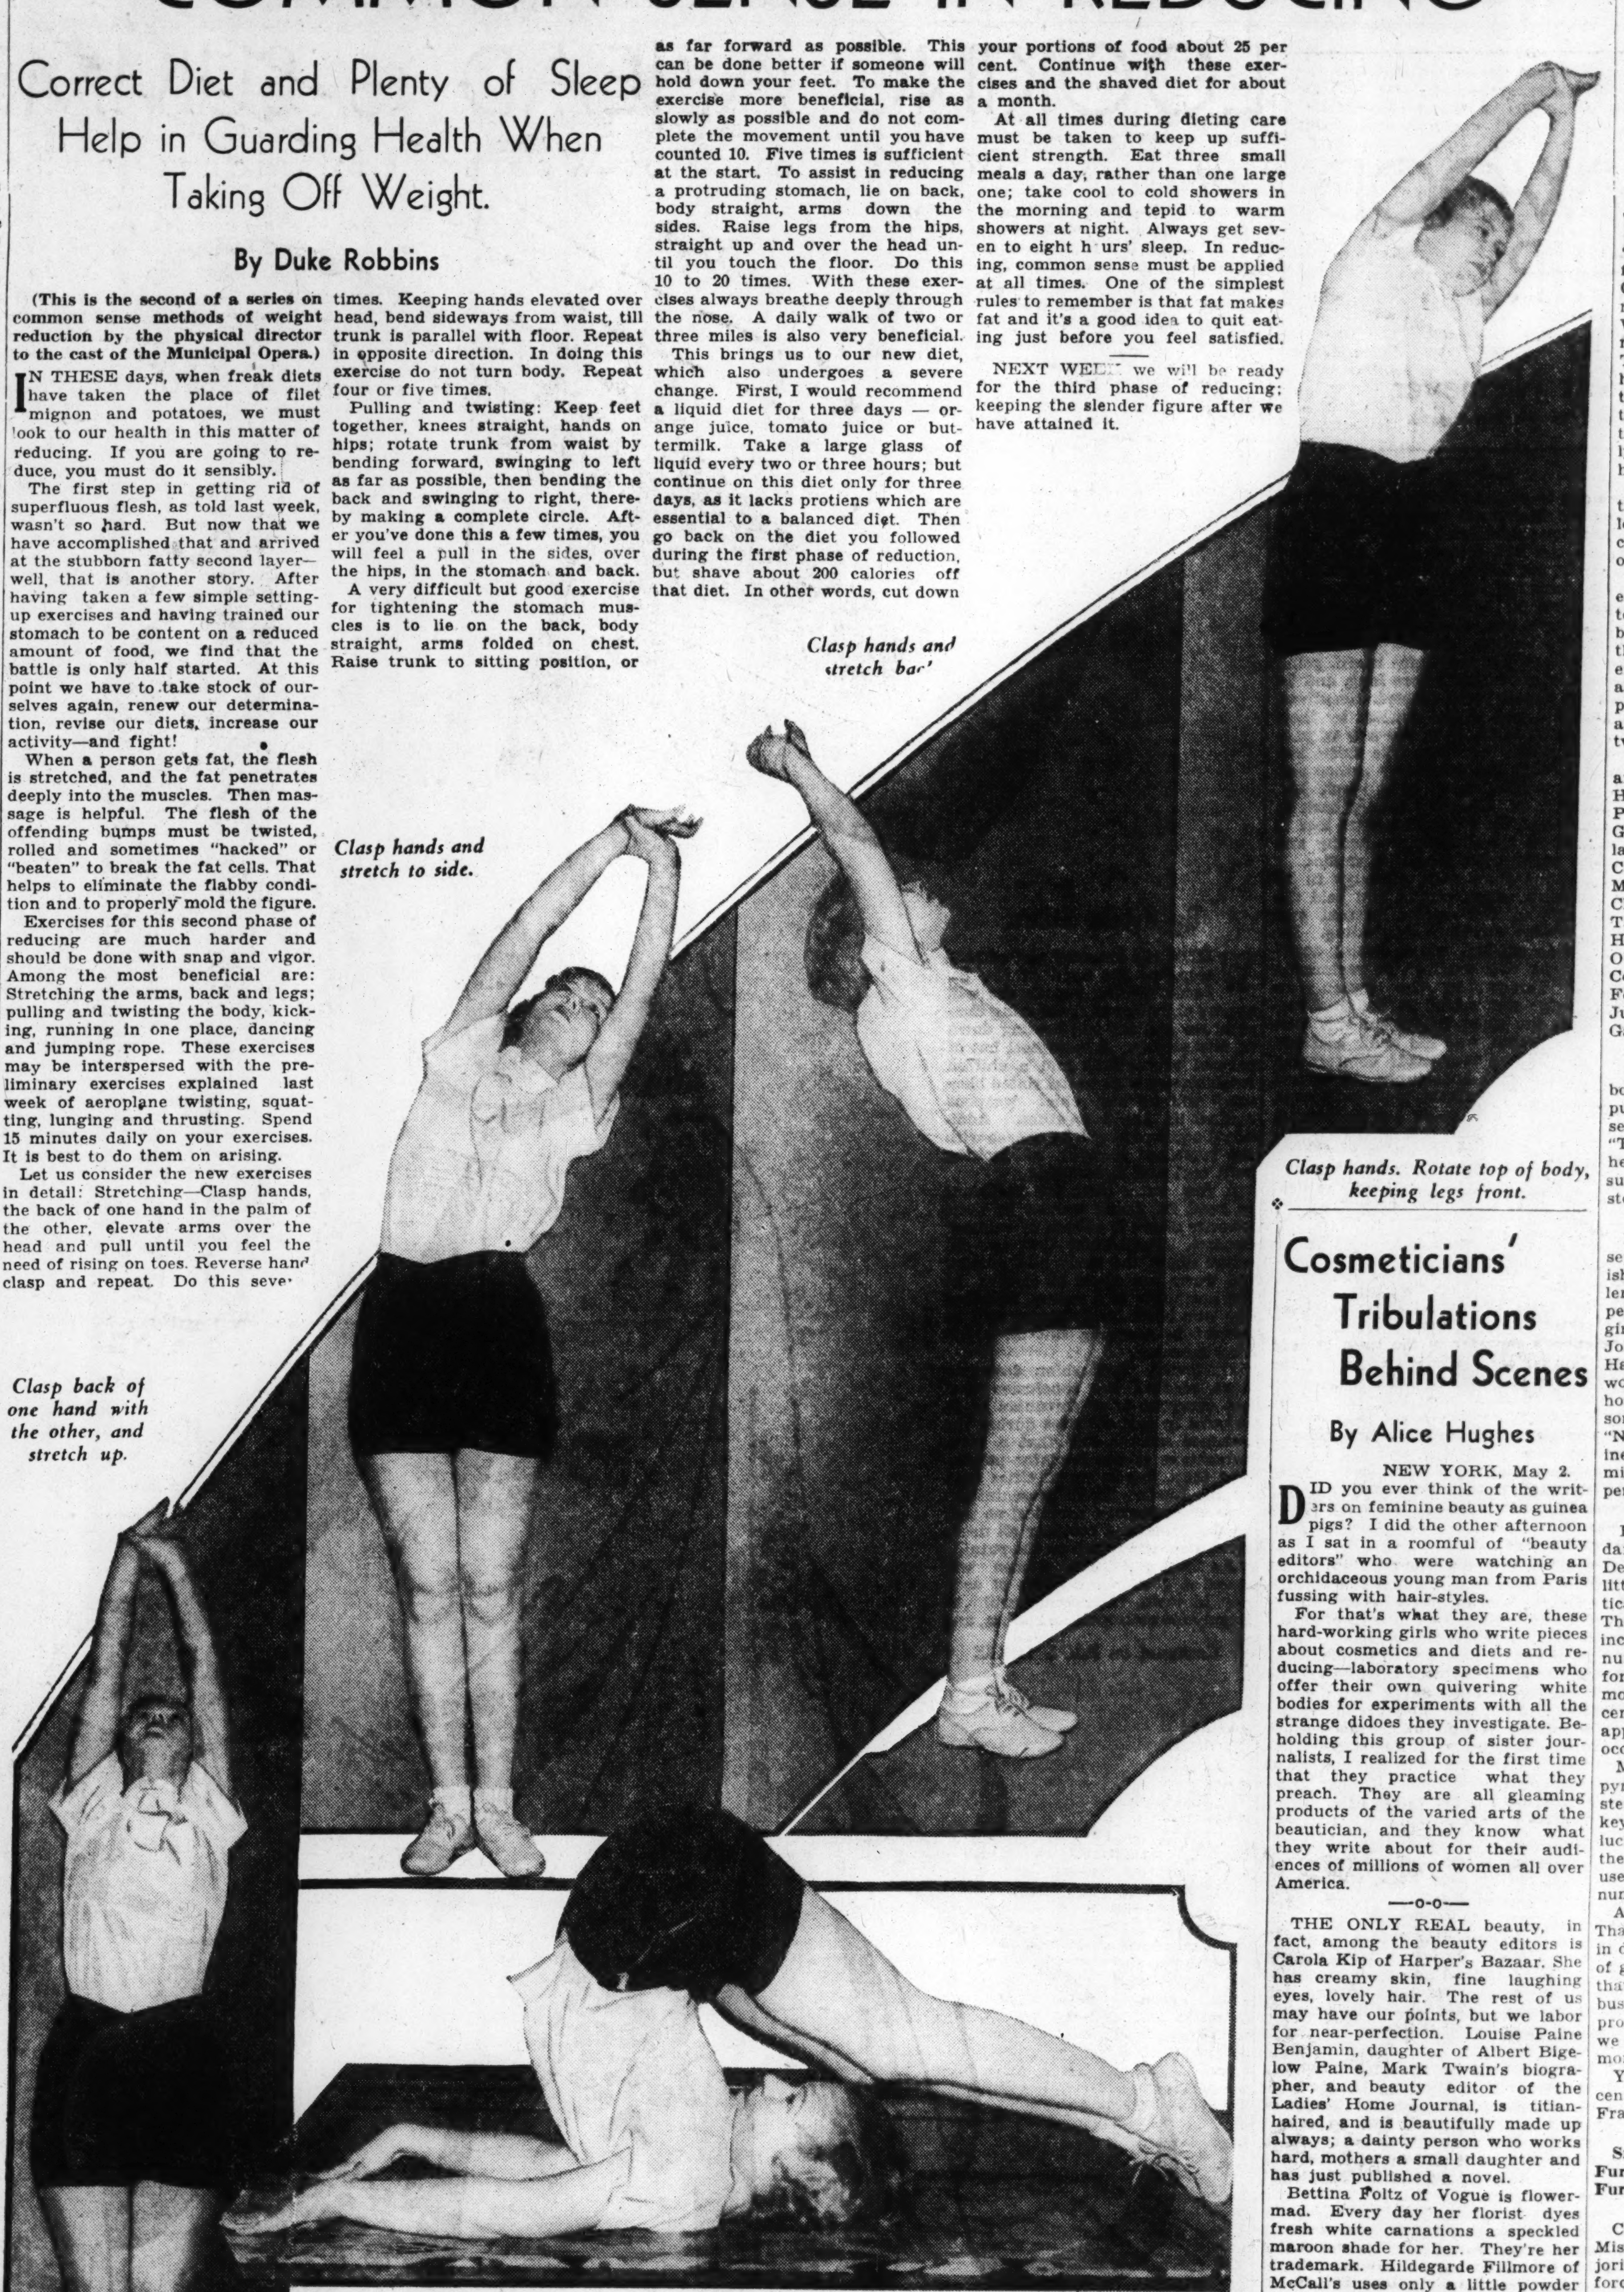
Pulling and twisting: Keep feet together, knees straight, hands on hips; rotate trunk from waist by bending forward, swinging to left as far as possible, then bending the back and swinging to right, thereby making a complete circle. After you've done this a few times, you will feel a pull in the sides, over the hips, in the stomach and back.

A very difficult but good exercise for tightening the stomach muscles is to lie on the back, body straight, arms folded on chest. Raise trunk to sitting position, or as far forward as possible. This can be done better if someone will hold down your feet. To make the exercise more beneficial, rise as slowly as possible and do not complete the movement until you have counted 10. Five times is sufficient at the start. To assist in reducing a protruding stomach, lie on back, body straight, arms down the sides. Raise legs from the hips, straight up and over the head until you touch the floor. Do this 10 to 20 times. With these exercises always breathe deeply through the nose. A daily walk of two or three miles is also very beneficial.

This brings us to our new diet, which also undergoes a severe change. First, I would recommend a liquid diet for three days — orange juice, tomato juice or buttermilk. Take a large glass of liquid every two or three hours; but continue on this diet only for three days, as it lacks protiens which are essential to a balanced diet. Then go back on the diet you followed during the first phase of reduction, but shave about 200 calories off that diet. In other words, cut down your portions of food about 25 per cent. Continue with these exercises and the shaved diet for about a month.

At all times during dieting care must be taken to keep up sufficient strength. Eat three small meals a day, rather than one large one; take cool to cold showers in the morning and tepid to warm showers at night. Always get seven to eight hours' sleep. In reducing, common sense must be applied at all times. One of the simplest rules to remember is that fat makes fat and it's a good idea to quit eating just before you feel satisfied.

NEXT WEEK we will be ready for the third phase of reducing; keeping the slender figure after we have attained it.



Clasp hands and stretch to side.

Clasp hands and stretch back

Clasp hands. Rotate top of body, keeping legs front.

Clasp back of one hand with the other, and stretch up.

Lie on back. Raise legs from hips, straight up and over head until they touch floor.

Vanity and Shoes

What about your pedals, Mrs. Walker? If they are in healthy condition as feet should be, you won't be conscious of them. The majority of unhappy patients who trail into chiropodist's offices for relief from toe pangs and sole twinges are women. Shoes are wrong! Vanity urges them to wear shoes that are not suitable.

When selecting shoes it is important to find a last that acts as a support to the arch of the foot. They should be flexible. It is necessary that there should be a band over the instep. Pumps are not designed for everyday wear, only for special occasions. The shoe that gives the greatest comfort is the oxford with semi-rounded toe and heel of proper height.

A narrow shoe means that the weight of the body is not evenly supported and the big toe is pushed inward against its neighbor, a condition that may set up an inflammation of the big joint and cause deformities.

Shoes should be fitted late in the afternoon, when the foot is fully expanded after the day's activities.

If a woman wants to get her mind off her feet all she has to do is to get correctly-fitted boots, bathe the feet daily with tepid water to which baking soda has been added, massage the little trotters with light gravity mineral oil, change stockings daily and shoes twice a day.

Body Poise

When shoulders are thrown forward and the head carried low, the muscles of the neck have a grand old holiday. Nothing at all to do. The neck either gets fiddle stringy or gathers fat cells and is utterly unpresentable.

The cure for both fiddle strings and fat is a spirited body pose, together with exercises that will stir up the functions of glands, tissues, muscles and blood streams. Stand erect, hands on hips, turn the head from side to side with a firm flexing of the muscles. You'll feel the pull at the sides of the chest and along the upper portion of the back. That's good. In time you'll tighten up fibers, the neck will take on a normal appearance and all will be well.

Supplement the good work by spreading a heavy massage cream on the skin surface, throwing the head far back, smoothing the flesh with the palms. Another stunt: throw the head back, touch the finger tips at the nape line, smooth with the thumbs from the collar bones to the skin.

Do all this after creaming the face at bed time. Let the emollient remain on. In the morning turn the cold spray on neck and chest, friction like all get out with a coarse towel.

Steel that has become very rusty will be much easier to clean if it is first rubbed with a cut onion and left for a day. It should then be polished with paraffin and emery powder, or turpentine and brick-dust, whichever one happens to have.

Cosmeticians' Tribulations Behind Scenes

By Alice Hughes

NEW YORK, May 2.

DID you ever think of the writers on feminine beauty as guinea pigs? I did the other afternoon as I sat in a roomful of "beauty editors" who were watching an orchidaceous young man from Paris fussing with hair-styles.

For that's what they are, these hard-working girls who write pieces about cosmetics and diets and reducing—laboratory specimens who offer their own quivering white bodies for experiments with all the strange didoes they investigate. Beholding this group of sister journalists, I realized for the first time that they practice what they preach. They are all gleaming products of the varied arts of the beautician, and they know what they write about for their audiences of millions of women all over America.

THE ONLY REAL beauty, in fact, among the beauty editors is Carola Kip of Harper's Bazaar. She has creamy skin, fine laughing eyes, lovely hair. The rest of us may have our points, but we labor for near-perfection. Louise Paine Benjamin, daughter of Albert Bigelow Paine, Mark Twain's biographer, and beauty editor of the Ladies' Home Journal, is titian-haired, and is beautifully made up always; a dainty person who works hard, mothers a small daughter and has just published a novel.

Bettina Foltz of Vogue is flower-mad. Every day her florist dyes fresh white carnations a speckled maroon shade for her. They're her trademark. Hildegarde Fillmore of McCall's uses only a little powder and a dash of lipstick; wears tailored clothes with ruffled blouses. And Hazel Cades of the Woman's Home Companion has a daughter just reaching the age where she can try out some of these creams and oils for mother!

'They have lacquered nails, false eyelashes on occasion, endure innumerable gymnastics and massages and hair treatments—all that they may write for you with the pen of authority. Gosh, how they do suffer!

THE death of Marilyn Miller has removed from the American scene a figure of real beauty that the rather dismal world of today can ill spare.

Marilyn's life was not too rosy. She lost her first husband, a handsome lad named Frank Carter, when she was barely 20. Her life with Jack Pickford, her second, was hardly considered jolly.

The girl was not the greatest dancer or singer or actress among us, but she had one amazing quality which was unique. She gave off

GIRL ABOUT TOWN

DOWN back of Busch's Grove yesterday the Moochers had their annual spring barbecue for stags only. As usual, N. S. Chouteau Walsh and Robert Bagnell wielded the carving knives and Willard Cox as usual was lord high master of the salad mixing bowl. The Moochers, who have been hanging out down there for more than 15 years, admit the ladies to their functions just every now and then. Otherwise they are positively excluded from the little clubhouse complete with locker rooms.

They don't even get a look-in on the horseshoe lot, and they've learned to stay off that new tennis court, with its all-weather surface of asphalt and cork.

To insure privacy there is no telephone at the Moochers' headquarters. Their man, Joe, who's probably waited on you at Busch's more than once, runs down from the tavern with important messages. He also sees that drinks and food are provided and more than once has arbitrated domestic differences between Moocher and madame.

Officers and members of the club are: Edwin T. Stanard, president; Henry G. Keeler, vice-president; Percy Orthwein, secretary; Elzey G. Burkham, treasurer; Louis Nicolaus, S. W. Greenland, Marshall Cochrane, N. S. Brown, Joseph Moon, Dr. Robert F. Hyland, N. S. Chouteau Walsh, John Little, E. S. Taylor, Robert A. Bagnell, Alfred H. Murphy, Louis Dozier, Ferd B. Oberwinder, Jack Sullivan, Willard Cox, Edward A. Magnus, Marquard Forster, Virgil Lewis, J. W. Newell, Julius W. Reinholdt and Russell Gardner Jr.

MARTHA GELLHORN'S second book is in the hands of English publishers, with no date for release set. At present it's being called "The Trouble I've Seen," and unlike her first novel, "What Mad Pursuit," is a series of four long, short stories.

RUMOR HAS IT, too, that Josephine Johnson is putting the finishing touches on her second full-length novel, title undecided. She's perturbed, right now, over a Virginia poetess, also named Josephine Johnson, who has cropped up in Harper's since Novelist Johnson won the Pulitzer prize. She writes honeysuckle-and-moonlight love sonnets, not at all in the mood of "Now in November." Our Josephine Johnson has started using her middle initial, W., but may take a pen name in self-defense.

BEFORE YOU PUT money on a dark horse in the next Kentucky Derby we recommend you burn a little Wish-a-Wish incense. It practically guarantees to pick a winner. The exponents of "the science of incense" burn it mostly to find the numbers to play in policy games for a season. You light up a little mound of black powder with a 10-cent store fragrance. The numbers appear in the fumes if you have the occult power to see them.

Maybe you're the kind who'll see pyramids or a vacuum cleaner instead. Then you consult an incense key for an interpretation and a lucky number. Some people prefer the cake method of divining. They use tablets which show up three numbers in the ashes.

All by ourselves we found out: That a stranger would help us when in danger; that an unexpected piece of good fortune would be ours; and that we ought to accept the next business offer because it will mean prosperity. And besides all that we were instructed to put our money on numbers 23, 35 and 71.

You can get a Wish-a-Wish incense almost anywhere along Franklin avenue for a dime.

CO-EDS FROM the University of Missouri are definitely in the majority on the Peck and Peck sales force. Over there now are Miss Florence ("Sissie") Guitar, Miss Mabel ("Bubbles") Cotton, both from Columbia, and Miss Eliza Atwood, who hails from Ferguson, but was a Kappa at Mizzou. The reason: the manager of the shop, Miss Jessie Lansing, is a Columbian. "Lidie" Atwood deserted the family roof last fall and is now living at the home of Mrs. Zenophon Wilfley, 5275 Westminster place, widow of the former United States Senator Wilfley. "Sissie" Guitar lives there, too, and so does Miss Mimi Buescher, another Columbia co-ed, who has a secretarial job downtown. It must be kind of like a sorority house just off campus. Only there are no house rules to speak of.

CLOSE-UP of ST. LOUIS FASHIONS

Prints Holding Firm Place in Spring Picture

Designs and Color Schemes in This Material Are Unusually Attractive.

PRINTS INSIST on their place in the fashion picture, basing their claim or the theory that designs and color schemes are more beautiful than ever. Molyneux uses plenty of prints for day and evening. An evening dress of platinum-gray taffeta has a print of mutli-colored tulips in their natural hues. The dress has low-waisted drapery that swoops into full double-bank panels. Gloves of tulip pink suede are worn with this model.

—o-o—

CHIFFON OR net with a spattering of brilliants is always liked, especially for late spring and summer wear. Dark blue chiffon with hugs stars made of diamante is a smart choice as is a frock of midnight blue chiffon, embroidered with clusters of tiny rhinestone stars. A star-shaped brooch is set at the deep point of the front decolletage.

—o-o—

BEADS ARE being strung onto the mode by some of the more important designers. Dresses of black chiffon have beautiful flower bouquets embroidered on the bodice, irridescent sequins being used. Each designer uses beads of a different type, including round, square or diamond-shaped sequins, wooden beads, porcelain beads, large and small.

—o-o—

BUGLES OF crystal or jet, making a beautiful beaded fringe, also spun-glass beads shaped like tiny buds of leaves, are being used with success. Lelong makes a slim, white wool dinner suit and finishes all the edges with narrow black sequined bands. An evening frock of pearl-gray tulle has a trellis design of gold sequins.

ST. LOUIS STYLE PARADE

they have the task of appearing tailored while trying to be comfortable. Suits of light weight materials of the type which men have found most serviceable are their solution of the every-day clothes problem. These suits are being shown in white and pastel tints, many of them being adapted to travel as well as workaday needs. Linen suits also are shown again, but there have been some innovations which go a long way toward making the fabric less subject to wrinkles.

Every woman who has owned a printed jacket dress in summer colors insists upon purchasing another as soon as collections are placed on display. Navy and white provide the most effective color combination but this year there are some interesting diversions that feature dark red, green and the popular toast shades. The dress with matching short jacket has competition from the coachman's knee-length fitted coat and the full-length printed redingote. The short flaring jacket that resembles a cape is being exploited equally with the hip length fitted model. Fabrics of the pussy willow type are important and give the assurance that they will not stretch out of shape as has been so frequent with many sheer synthetics in seasons past.

THE redingote theme is so prominent in the summer mode that it appears for all hours of the day and evening and in many different fabrics. A novelty that is as practical as it is pretty is the printed linen redingote that may be worn over a white linen frock. It serves somewhat the purpose of a smock and is quite tailored in appearance. The redingotes that are featured of printed chiffon are quite artistic and do accomplish something toward transforming an informal dinner dress into one which may appear for afternoon. The evening redingotes are very swanky and the means of making a formal low cut gown into a dinner type as well as supplying all of the wrap that is needed for most summer evenings in St. Louis. These after-dark redingotes appear of cotton fabrics as well as chiffons and heavier crepes, one of the loveliest on display being of white embroidered batiste over a low-cut navy linen gown.

Twin prints, the alliance being of chiffon and crepe in identical patterns, are of value in the completion of a cool ensemble that is practical. Shantung and other Oriental silks that are noted for their cool qualities also are in fashion's favor and are used extensively for shirt waist frocks as well as jacket dresses.

Most of the summer prints, whether designed for dark or for daylight, have plenty of white in their composition, and this is a point in their favor. The contrast shade may be very gay, but the abundance of white takes away any suggestion of warmth. Printed chiffons and mousselines are employed to greater extent than they have been for many summers, their entrance into the formal mode giving it a freshness and vivacity that is flattering. White backgrounds have splashy flower designs in vivid colors that give a picturesque quality to the garden party and the roof garden type of frock, as well as to the low-cut gown created for special occasions.

These flower prints are among the evidences that this summer will see feminine fashions dominating the more masculine trends of the early springtime. Even active sportwear seems to have gone feminine, and women have decided to keep their skirts on except for beachwear. The divided skirts, commonly known as culottes, are responsible for this trend away from shorts for outdoor activity. When shorts are worn, the majority of women prefer to add a wrap-around skirt that does not detract from freedom of movement. The prevalence of the wrapped skirts for use on the beaches and for enveloping capes which cover bathing suits also indicates that the censors will have little work to do this summer.

THE tendency in accessories is toward the very feminine, with many of the cartwheel hats decorated with flowers and velvet streamers, gloves introducing frilly cuffs or a lacy quality, and footwear very gay and dainty. The large hat which has a brim that dips decidedly at the front and back is getting most attention. It is shown of light straws and of pastel colored felts. The only deviation fro mthe rule of the cartwheels in millinery is in the restaurant hat, which is very small and is flower-laden.

Blouses that are to be worn with the summer version of the tailored suits are very frilly and transparent, bringing a new emphasis upon lingerie and presenting rigid requirements as to shade and condition of shoulder straps. Organdies, laces, nets and dimities are the important summer blouse fabrics.

Summer wraps are mostly of the casual type, many of them suitable for travel as well as for general wear in St. Louis. The pastel swagger coats are quite the vogue and as the season advances there are additional shades to consider. Pastel blue, rose and chartreuse are three that rival chamois and the true pastel green. The toast shade also is being emphasized in casual coats, as it is in other summer apparel. Very short swaggers that have flaring hemlines and a little-girl look about them are new and interesting.

Variety in Hats

If variety is the spice of life, then fashion should rejoice, for everything goes. Your spring hat should be most flattering for never were there so many different types. They range from the scant pillbox to the huge capeline. For formal afternoon wear we saw a little turban of black glass tubing straw with a lace veil arranged to make an upstanding frame for the hat. An open crown with two huge, white carnations posed at the side top give added charm to this model.

Daytime Clothes

Despite color, black and black with white are most in demand this spring. Some of the nicest daytime clothes are of black woolen with white touches while black and white prints register well. A neat daytime ensemble of frock and jacket is in black, the frock having a novel belt treatment. Over a wide, crushed belt of the wool dress fabric is worn a narrow belt of white stitched pique. The skirt and the jacket hem are scalloped.

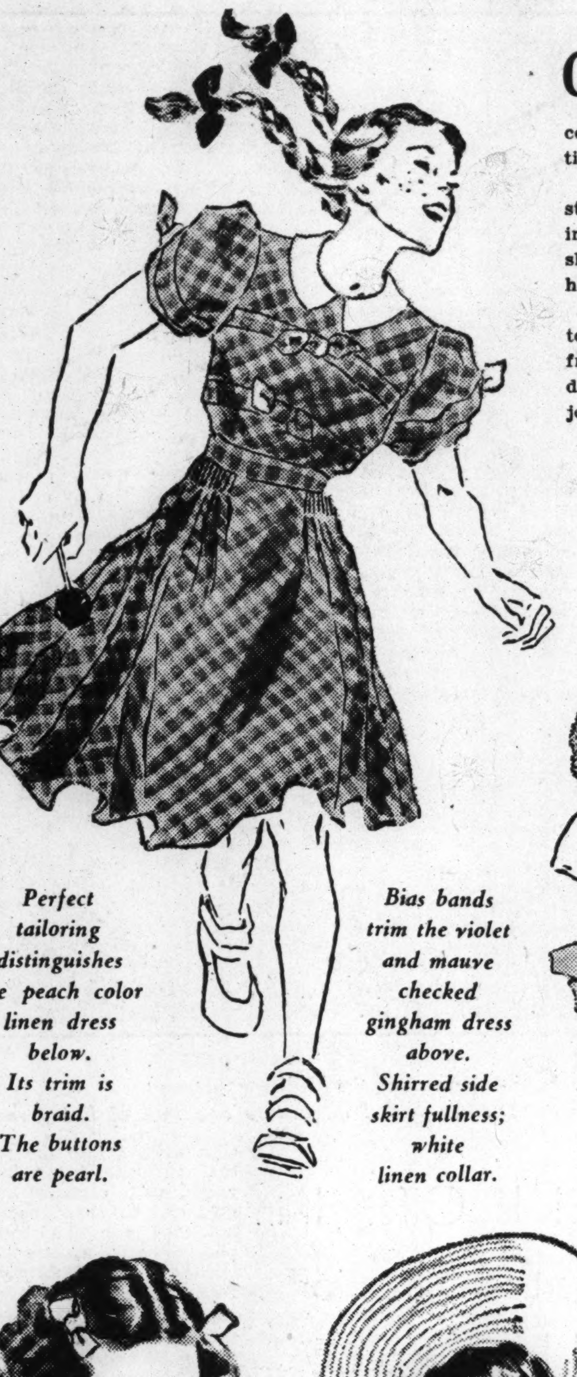
SCHOOLGIRL TUB FROCKS

By Prunella Wood

GINGHAM, lawn, organdy, linen—that's what good little girls' wardrobes are made of, come Summer and Long Vacation!

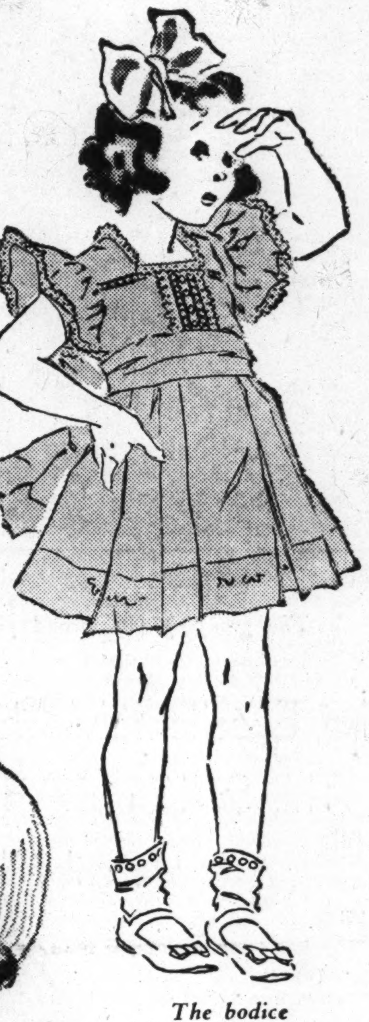
Colors are sun and soap fast, styles are amenable to the ironing board, fabrics are preshrunk, and usually there is a hem "to grow on."

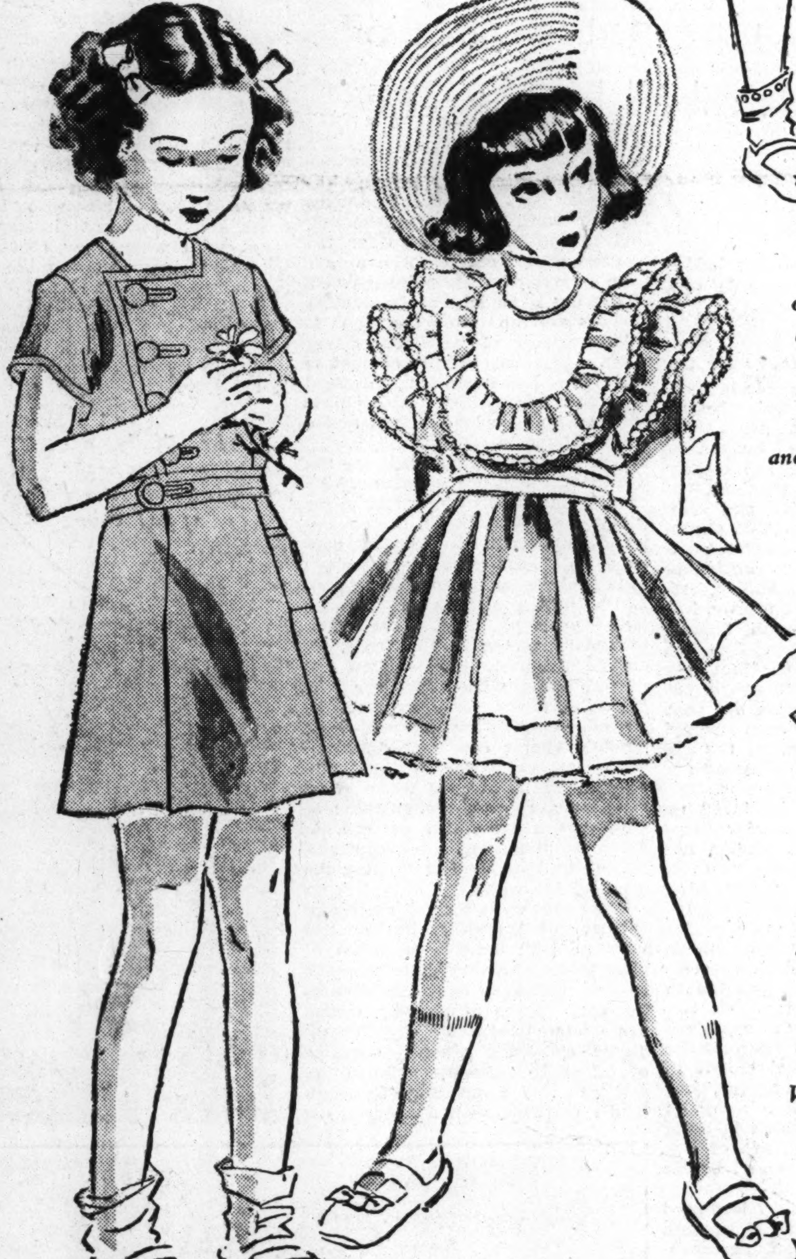
And this department is thrilled to see the return of feminine frills on little girls' dresses; daughters are really feminine joys.



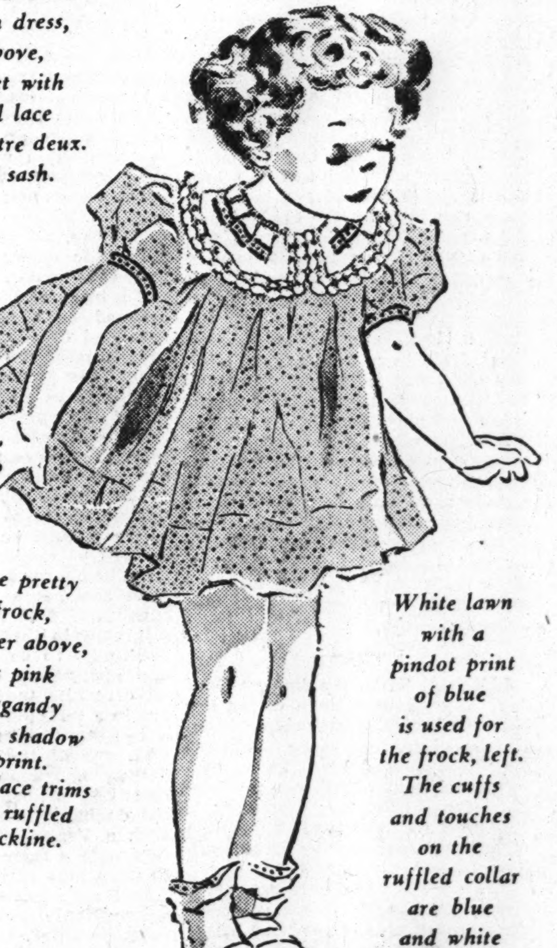
Perfect tailoring distinguishes the peach color linen dress below. Its trim is braid. The buttons are pearl.

Bias bands trim the violet and mauve checked gingham dress above. Shirred side skirt fullness; white linen collar.





The bodice of the orchid color lawn dress, above, is set with Val lace and entre deux. Self sash.



The pretty frock, center above, is pink organdy with shadow print. Val lace trims the ruffled neckline.

White lawn with a pindot print of blue is used for the frock, left. The cuffs and touches on the ruffled collar are blue and white striped lawn.

Many Uses for Bright Scarfs On Warm Days

Adequate Supply Will Help Make One Costume Do Work of Six.

MANY prudent maidens have discovered that if you have an adequate supply of colorful scarfs, you can make one costume do the work of six.

And this season there is practically no end to the uses you may make of a few well-selected scarfs.

With the summer coming on and with the trend to thoughts of summer sportswear, consider these new wrinkles in scarf lore:

For wear on the beach, you'll want a couple of bright tyrolean printed cotton or challis scarfs—one to tie over your head peasant fashion, and a matching one to wear about your shoulders like a shawl. The brightest debutantes are making an effort this season to emulate Ellis Island immigrants in their more colorful moods.

Also for beach wear you'll want a big bandana scarf or so in turkey red or indog blue cotton, to wear with shorts as a halter. Fold it on the bias, tie two ends around your waist, and fasten tapes on the third corner to tie around the neck.

For your casual sports dresses, you'll want some printed cotton or linen scarfs, as vivid as possible, to twist around your head into a "martinique" turban, grand for rumble seat riding.

For your sweaters you'll want some bright chiffon or shantung square to tie around your neck and fill in the sweater neckline.

For evening, you'll find much comfort in some huge chiffon scarfs to tie over your permanent, peasant fashion again, to protect the waves.

And for your summer suits you'll want a whole collection of bright scarfs to wear in the ascot manner.

Coat-Frocks

Slim coats that also do duty as frocks with separate furs are being promoted with much success. Rolls of padding are used to give height to cape or coat shoulders. Tiered skirts for evening are decidedly "in." Chanel sponsoring this silhouette. A triple tiered skirt marks an exquisite frock of black net with allover design of appliqued white silk flowers.

FACING the FACTS

By Helen Jameson

GLANCE through the histories of styles and you will conclude that old lady Fashion has a funny bone. Sometimes she is dramatic, more often she inclines toward a sartorial exploitation of comedy. The world is her three-ringed circus. Evidence: the day of the hobble skirt, the reign of the bustle, that remote period when women blanketed their brains with pounds of factory hair.

As women's manners change with their appearance, the influence of fashion is considerable. In the day of the knee high skirt and the shingle, the gamin type was nuts and raisins for artists. Girls were bold and playful, somebody called them wild women. Came long draperies, and they were ladies again.

With the exposure of the forehead and the arrival of simple robes with fullness like a nun's dress, isn't it possible that the girl that is on the way may be demure and angle-faced? We live up to our clothes. You know it. No woman sits in the corner if she has on a new red frock; she is the life of the party. Put her in last year's gown and she obliterates herself. All psychological, explainable.

There is another something that points the way, the disappearance of rouge. Lips red but cheeks untouched with synthetic flushes.

There's something compelling about foreheads that are out in the open, and that's why the sleeked-back coiffure hangs on and on. Mona Lisa had a whole faceful of forehead. Just a brow and a slick smile and that girl became famous. Marvelous!

Note some of the quaint hats. As old-fashioned as silk mitts and phaetons, yet striking a new note. There are descendants of poke bonnets in hat shops. Hah! When women wore them they were chattels; they were clinging ivies that wheedled papa whenever they wanted a new black silk dress for Sunday, which they got every third year maybe, vanity being sinful.

It's so funny to think that fashions of the Victorian era have been resurrected. We won't be Victorian, but there will be poses. And Lady Fashion will have her little laugh.

—o-o—

Look at the brides of this day. They have that saint-like look. Foreheads exposed, hair completely covered with a tulle bonnet, long sleeves, high necks, frocks as plain as pillow cases.

Girlology is a thrilling subject. The beauty fad plays a big part. It pops upon the world of women, causes intense excitement. When everybody has fallen for it, it is a bore, gradually evaporates; another comes to stimulate the feminine brain cells.

What a dreary, gray world this would be if women wore a uniform as do men. Poor things, an extra button on a sleeve is about all the boys can expect by way of change.

Rainy Day Clothes

Since there is an old saying that April showers bring May flowers, the fashion designers are doing their best to be cheerful about rainy spring days. The flower colors that appear in May are blossoming this month on raincoats and capes. Every floral tint that is associated with gayety of the springtime is used with success. Rubberized shantung is a material which shows them off to perfection and which keeps out the rain without adding much warmth. Bright glass buttons and contrasting collars are other cheerful features of rainy-day clothes.

Novel Fabrics

Challis and chintz are two old favorites that have returned to popularity this year. The challis is being used for sports dresses and for tailored jacket frocks, while the chintz is recommended for evening dresses. The challis which has a dainty flower design on a white background is ideally suited to the spectacular type of sports frock and the darker version is employed for two costumes. Glazed chintz in vivid shades is displayed for the bouffant type of formal frock as well as for tailored dinner suits.

The House You Live In

LET ME SUGGEST

by

Josephine Walter

MAYBE you out-doorsy people know when summer is almost here by aching muscles brought on by too much dandelion picking, but we store snoopers sense the arrival of hot weather when furniture floors begin to blossom with gaily striped awnings, garden tables and other outdoor equipment. And the things are so completely charming this season that you really should take a little time out from getting the garden in order to make a round of the shops "to see what you can see."

Delicately twisted wire, intricately wrought iron, gracefully bent metal tubing—pardon me if I'm getting too lyric—and rattan and blond woods are all being used this season and designed in styles ranging from the quaintly Victorian to the dashingly modern. Colors, too, are exciting, and although white is always attractive, brilliant deep tones such as Taiti blue, emerald green, sulphur yellow and even brown and black are newer. Couches, chairs, tables and every type of equipment for outdoor comfort are on display, but the darlings of our fancy are the elaborate chaises longues which do everything but sing you to sleep. Equipped with wheels so that the occupant may follow the sun and rigged with awnings for those who wish to avoid it, these modern contraptions are crying invitations to "delay in the sun."

Don't think we're kidding when we tell you that you can now get your favorite scent ready mixed in paints and lacquers and don't answer, "So what?" Think how grand it would be to paint your drawers for dainty underthings with a paint scented with gardenia, lilac or heliotrope while your closets may be treated with sandal, pine or cedar. In addition, these new paints are said to retain their perfuming qualities for a year.

- NEATEST TRICK of the Week: When a friend's darling little tyke knocked over and broke the best lamp in the house she didn't burst into tears; she simply went out and bought an enormous jar of mayonnaise. And it wasn't to eat away her sorrows, either. She filled the glass part with sand, water, a little greenery and her pet paradise fish; had hubby cut holes in the top part for feeding and air and attach the lamp part; popped a simple little lamp shade on top and achieved a lamp which is not only decorative but interesting as well.

Alex Piaget has been doing exciting things with photo-murals and if you haven't awakened yet to their decorative possibilities, please give ear. Photo-murals are merely enlarged pictures which may be used to beautify walls in place of wall papers or wood panelling. These pictures may be taken from small camera snaps you, yourself, have made, from specially photographed objects or from old prints and pictures. A cunning little barroom I saw had two photo-mural panels made from snap-shots the owners had taken in Mexico while one of the loveliest dining rooms in the city has a continuous photomural made from old St. Louis prints used completely around the walls.

This Week's Decorating Term: Cabriole leg—A tapering leg in an elongated S curve, frequently with carving at the knee. A distinguishing characteristic of Queen Anne and early Chippendale furniture.

- QUESTION: We have a quaint little early American dining room, but the maple furniture against the wood walls give a rather drab effect. Could you suggest any way of introducing color into the room in addition to that found in the draperies? MRS. E. M.

—o-o—

Answer: A charming spot of color might be introduced through using seat and back pads on the chairs. These might be in a gay plaid or of quilted chintz or they might be in solid color with a contrasting binding and strings to tie them to the chairs. If the ceiling is of some paintable surface you might introduce such cheery colors as lemon yellow or turquoise.

- QUESTION: We are trying to made a modern study in an old apartment, but the doors with their old-fashioned panelling simply ruin the effect. What sort of a treatment would you suggest for these doors without going to the expense of replacing them with new ones? MRS. B. M. H.

Answer: The simplest method would be to cover them flush with plywood or some type of plaster board. Over this plain surface you could do any type of decorative treatment you desire. One attractive method would be to cover them with suede cloth, leather or some less expensive fabric and then, if you wish a decorative design, work it out in nail-heads, metal bandings, or cord rope. A very simple and effective method is to cut your monogram into the plywood, paint the entire door the color of your woodwork and place another piece of plywood, painted in a contrasting colod, behind the open-work of the monogram.

New Ideas in Centerpieces For The Table

These Articles No Longer Merely "Space Takers" in Modern Home.

By

Virginia W. Maremont

THAT there is nothing new under the sun does not hold in today's adages. Time was when a centerpiece was a "space-taker," but modern artists, and china and linen manufacturers won't permit you to get by with that, unless you have no table pride, in which case you are automatically relegated to the kitchen.

Wandering through the shops, one gets excited with the innumerable possibilities that offer themselves to the eye.

Tole is having its day! Not only has it been executed in flower pots, lamps, and ash trays, but now it becomes the basis for an enticing centerpiece. They are showing several different styles of this thin, attractive ware in bright shades. One of the prettiest was a laquer-red fruit bowl and candle holders, painted with a lacy wreath-pattern. On a sky blue cloth or chalk white luncheon set it would carry high honors.

NEO-CLASSICISM has come to the table, too. The lovely flowing lines of the Grecians, has been molded into an oyster white pottery flower bowl, with low candle holders, like sturdy columns. Purple and green grapes with an accent of colored candles would make it an asset to any table. Another simple, designed set with a crystal cog wheel centerpiece, with a low bowl, like a large corrugated wheel, and candle sticks to fit in. Floating flower heads or water lilies with a live baby turtle escort in it would make an exciting complement to your table.

Cork is being utilized since it graduated from bottle stoppers. One of the most naive pieces was a cork bowl, in squared angles out of which grew gingham flowers. The candles repeated the bright orange color, and the entire set seemed a novel, almost humorous table-diversion.

ONE OF THE most interesting observations made was that the shops are now using two centerpieces! The "equalization" plan is over, or diminishing. Whereas the usual procedure is to use a center object for decoration, with an even balancing of candlesticks or nut dishes, flanking each side, they distract you with two objects.

For example, on a shell pink table cloth, a delicate Dresden couple "minuet," to a large pink and blue Dresden flower basket. It is charmingly effective and the broken line of high and low is a welcome respite from the ordinary.

An exceptionally attractive formal dinner table utilized four very low agate marble candlesticks on the left of the table, in one-two-three-four formation and on the right half of the table, modern artificial fruit in a flat marble bowl. The cloth was yellow satin damask and the candles black, as was the china and glass service.

Another striking table that was severely modern was a buffet service entirely of Wendell August alumium, set on a deep wine shade cloth, with a towering centerpiece of bright green glass grapes, strung on an "aluminum tree." The complete contrast of the red and the green with the blending grey was stunning.

LINENS, TOO, are having their day. Rust brown linen cloths are set with brown glazed china, in an English hunting scene pattern; grey and green lend their cool selves to spun aluminum modernities, for garden tea; burgundy is enhanced by startling white china and turquoise has a buttercup yellow coffee set.

Table mats have gone to raffia, straw, glass and bamboo sticks. Such a multitude of selection leaves no excuse for the uninspired table. If the table covering, regardless of material, is chosen with attention to the color of the china to be used, there will be a balance between the two that will make for a refreshing effect. By selecting the most predominant color in the china and either accenting it with direct contrast or by blending it, the enterprising hostess can take her place in the sun, too!

Cleaning Brushes

Hair brushes can be cleaned by washing in lukewarm soapy water plus a dessertspoon of ammonia. Rinse in clean lukewarm water and finally in cold to stiffen the bristles. Shake well and hang in the open to dry. Do not immerse the backs of handles. Where these are of silver, clean with silver polish before washing the bristles. Thoroughly rub the wood of ebony brushes with vaseline before washing. This will prevent any ammonia or soap used in the water from spoiling the wood.

IDEAL HOME for a SPRING BRIDE

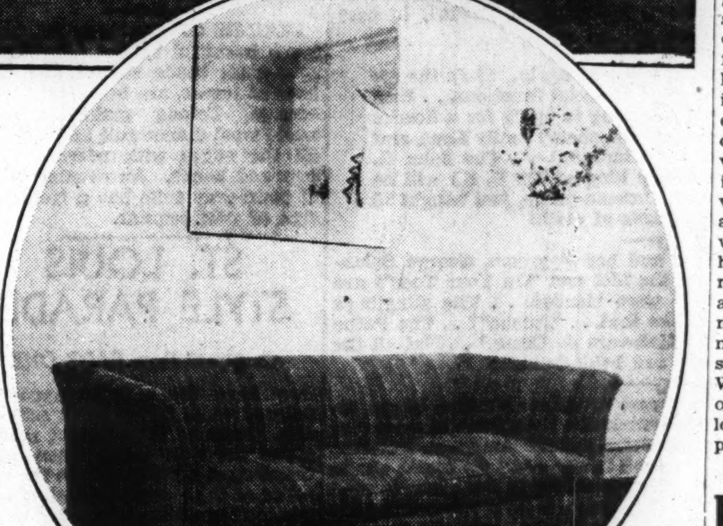
The grouping (in second picture) gives added interest to one wall of living room.



An Excellent Model Is Offered in The St. Louis Apartment Interior Described Here.

"Shopping tours and gifts from showers
Blossom into bridal bowers."

THINKING about spring brides and their first ventures into housekeeping has caused us to burst into, what we playfully call, verse. For shopping today for the furnishings of a new abode is truly a thrilling adventure, with the joy of choosing from a wealth of excellent styles and the burden of avoiding those which are merely cheaply smart at the moment.

The apartment of Mr. and Mrs. James J. Mullen Jr., at 7519 Cromwell drive, might well serve as a model for spring brides furnishing their first homes. Mrs. Mullen, herself a bride of the past season, has selected each piece with infinite care and excellent taste. She has kept in mind the fact that not only should her present little apartment be attractive and liveable but that all of the pieces chosen would prove adaptable when, in the future, they were used to furnish a gracious and dignified house.

The apartment itself offered no unusual features to provide decorative effects, so Mrs. Mullen immediately realized that interest must be obtained through charming color schemes and well designed furniture. The living room walls, originally in that ugly tan tone, so habitually to be found in present-day apartments, were painted in an off-white tone. Draperies, too, are in a matching shade to present a monotone effect in accordance with one of the newest trends in decorating. These hangings, attractively draped with a swag on the double window, which is hung with a Venetian blind, are of taffeta with a satin stripe and bound in deep blue satin cord.

In front of this window is placed a knee-hole desk in fine eighteenth century English design, accompanied by a desk chair of classic design painted off-white and upholstered with white leather. In fact, the entire apartment is done with the basic pieces in the English eighteenth century style, accented by notes of classic inspiration. To one side of this desk is placed a comfortable wing chair done in deep blue satin bound in white corduroy and complemented by a two-tiered table holding a lamp and smoking accessories.

One entire wall is devoted to the couch, and its decorative complements. Covered in plum damask striped in gold, it, together with the blue tone found in rug and upholstery, provide the accenting notes of color against the off-white background. At either side of the couch are placed matching columns in off-white holding classical urns filled with exquisite blue and yellow flowers. Above the couch is placed a large, plain mirror which, through its reflective quality, enlarges the apparent size of the room and provides perspective.

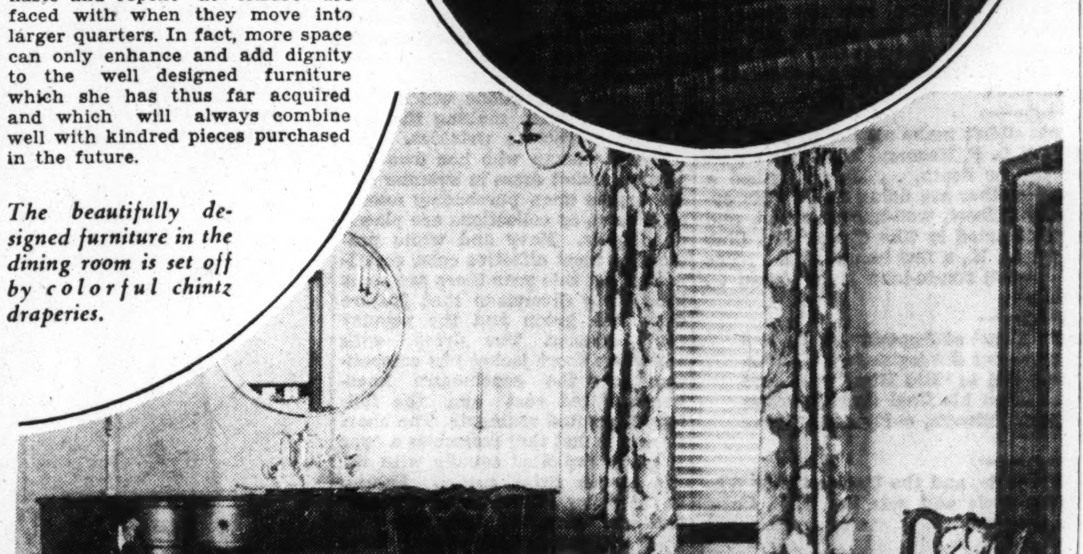
The most unusual part of the room is that containing the charming little what-not cabinet. This piece, interestingly designed, has the lower part in dark wood with the open-work arrow door revealing shelves containing service for tea or after-dinner coffee. Above are open shelves of white painted wood, displaying a variety of interesting bibelots and on the very top is placed a pair of handsome silver birds. Adjacent to this cabinet is an inviting lounge chair upholstered in a most interesting printed chintz with a ground color of plum and a plume design in off-white.

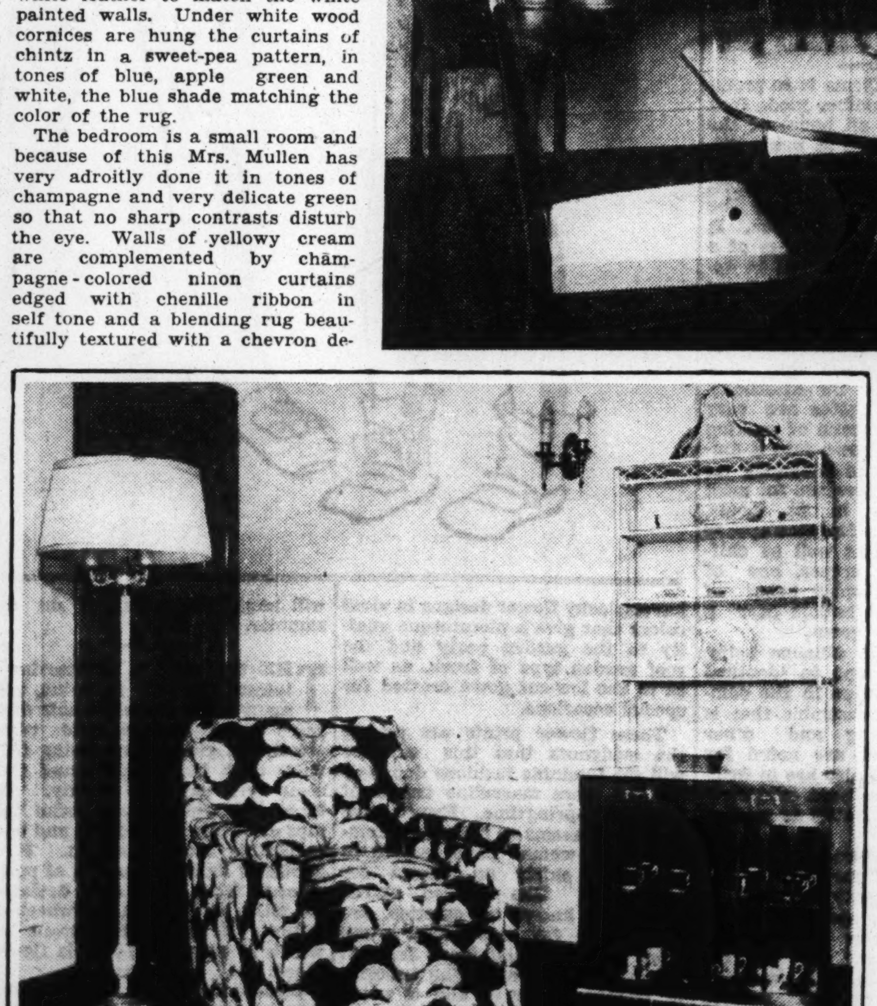
Sheraton and Chippendale are the combined furniture styles which provide an excellent background for gracious entertaining in the charming dining room. In pleasant contrast to the square or refectory type table so much in vogue today is the oval dining table, with its twin pedestal base. The other mahogany pieces in the room, including a buffet, china cabinet and server, are excellent foils for the gleaming silver and crystal displayed. Beautiful ribbon-back Chippendale chairs are upholstered in white leather to match the white painted walls. Under white wood cornices are hung the curtains of chintz in a sweet-pea pattern, in tones of blue, apple green and white, the blue shade matching the color of the rug.

The bedroom is a small room and because of this Mrs. Mullen has very adroitly done it in tones of champagne and very delicate green so that no sharp contrasts disturb the eye. Walls of yellowy cream are complemented by champagne-colored ninon curtains edged with chenille ribbon in self tone and a blending rug beautifully textured with a chevron design worked into the pile. All of the furniture is painted a soft green, with classical touches in gold and the head boards are upholstered in eggshell leather with a pinkish cast. A little slipper chair is done in a gold fabric patterned to resemble bamboo.

In reviewing the furnishings of this apartment, it is readily seen that good taste and judgment have guided Mrs. Mullen in her selections. Bcause of this, she obviously will not be confronted with that unhappy "weeding-out" process which so many brides who "buy in haste and repent at leisure" are faced with when they move into larger quarters. In fact, more space can only enhance and add dignity to the well designed furniture which she has thus far acquired and which will always combine well with kindred pieces purchased in the future.

The beautifully designed furniture in the dining room is set off by colorful chintz draperies.





This what-not cabinet introduces a classic note into the room.

Overalls for Garden

The feminine gardener who insists upon wearing a trouser costume regardless of the trend toward divided skirts can get a new type of overall which simplifies her clothes problem. This garment is quite mannish in its styling but has the big cut sufficiently high in front that no blouse is necessary. Wide straps go over the shoulders and down to the waistline at the back, exposing sufficient bare skin to assure a good sun tan. Large pockets have been provided for gardening tools unless the gardener is merely posing, and then they do very well for cosmetics.

From the Ground Up

HAVE you ever picked tomatoes or pulled up a handful of radishes for a salad from your own garden? Have you made a last-minute dash to cut mint for the drinks, or get a few sprigs of parsley or chives to garnish a cold dish? If not, then have a small kitchen garden this summer, and see how much fun it can be. Plan it carefully with neat rows of vegetables and borders of flowers and herbs, and it will be both decorative and useful.

Select a site if you can with the following qualifications:

At least five hours of direct sun.

Level land, or with a gentle slope to the south or southeast.

Good drainage, but not so steep that it will wash in the rain.

Plant in open ground — away from large trees that will sap food and moisture from your plants.

If there isn't room anywhere for a garden on your property, perhaps a piece of a vacant lot might be pressed into service. Wherever the weed growth is heavy there is good soil. Pick that spot in preference to a hard packed place where even the ubiquitous weed refuses to grow. Start to work the ground as soon after a rain as it is dry. You can test this by squeezing a handful—if it packs and shows your hand print, the soil is too wet—if it crumbles, start to work. Plow or fork the ground about 12 inches deep, and if it is heavy and lumpy, which it probably will be, lighten it with sand or ashes. Coal ashes will have to be screened to remove any clinkers. Wood ashes are more valuable, particularly from oak or hickory logs, as they contain as much as 7 per cent of nutritive agents. Enrich the soil with leaf mold and manure (a "treated" manure or commercial fertilizer will save you lots of future weeding). When the ground has all been thoroughly worked and is in a good loose condition, you are ready to plant.

USE STAKES and twine to make the rows for the vegetables, as the straight lines will not only be more pleasant to look at, but will make cultivation much easier after the garden is growing. Have the rows run north and south so that the plants will get all the available sun and will not shade each other. Mark off curved borders along the sides and at the corners for flowers and herbs. Hollyhocks, foxgloves, sunflowers or golden glow are fine strong background plants as they all grow over six feet in height. Use any of your other favorite annuals or perennials for the sides and front flower beds, and outline them with herbs and savories.

Buy the best seeds, selecting only the more usual vegetables. Don't waste your time on doubtful crops. String and wax beans, beets, carrots, salsify, turnips, radishes, tomatoes, lettuce, onions, spinach, peppers, kohlrabbi are all satisfactory and are useful in any kitchen, and follow planting directions on the package of seed in every case. For extra early crops of vegetables buy small transplants from a nursery man or farmer. They may be set out in rows after May 10, water well and shade during the noon hours for a few days. Beverley Nichols used umbrellas for shading his new plants, but use whatever you have.

Herbs and savories are fun to try, for they will give you a chance to experiment with cooking flavors. Chives, parsley, and mint are all "must-haves" for your list, but there are many others you may like. Chervil, taragon, borage, thyme, sage have aromatic tangy leaves and stems grand for seasoning. Dill, fennel, caraway and anise have pungent tasting seeds to pep up salads and sauces. No kitchen garden is complete, however, without the fragrance of lavender, santalina, rosemary, and the sweet geraniums; and the last two have even found their way into the cooking pot. The annuals, chervil, parsley, dill and borage can all be seeded in the open ground, but will have to be reseeded for a succession of crops. All the other herbs mentioned will have to be transplanted from seed beds, or the small plants bought from a grower.

Food and Drink

SAUCE for the GOOSE

by

Irma S. Rombauer

CALIFORNIA and Florida both claim to have originated broiled grapefruit. A St. Louis woman is sensitive about a very good combination of club flake and canned soups diluted with milk or stock; it has been generally adopted and she had considered it a "specialite de sa maison"—Vain hope! We can no longer retain a culinary secret. Our newspapers and periodicals make this impossible. Once a recipe has started, it travels across the continent with the rapidity and thoroughness of a lie and little or no attention is paid to the person or to the locality that gave it birth. Inexorably, dishes sweep over us.

Take ice box puddings. Where did that wave start? Suddenly it was upon us and how it rolled and rolled before it spent itself. Over night the nation became ice box pudding conscious. No matter how heavy the dinner, no matter where you were dining, you were sure to wind up with an orgy of whipped cream, lady fingers and the richest of fillings. Ice box pudding was as inevitable as the first of the month. Now it is as rare as a night-blooming cereus. Where is the caramelized corn flake ring of yesteryear? Will it bloom again in berry time? As for up-side-down cake, we shall pass by that in silence. May it rest in peace.

I often think about the times of limited communicational facilities when it was possible to associate a new dish with a definite locality. The covered wagon must have carried cook books as well as cherry chests and rose clippings, but its pace was slow enough to enable a dish, once composed, to become localized. I like to follow the early settlers (of course only in fancy) notably the English and the French as they applied their home methods to the food stuffs at hand. What struggles they must have had with the new and unknown ingredients such as potatoes, corn, persimmons, yams and sassafras. The dishes thus created are the basis of our national cuisine (enriched by subsequent immigrant groups—the Pennsylvania Dutch, the Germans, Scandinavians, Italians, Chinese, etc.), but to this day baked beans spell Boston, pepperpot Philadelphia, clam cakes Baltimore, spoonbread some spot south of the Mason and Dixon line and so on.

● A CLEVER woman, Sheila Hibben, in a collection of recipes called "The National Cook Book," has attempted to list these dishes geographically. Read the book, if the opportunity offers. I liked it. The two dishes she attributes to St. Louis are "filet of beef with sour cream sauce" and what she calls "glee wine." I assume that the latter is supposed to be "gluhwein" (glow-wine, a hot spiced red wine frequently served in German households in cold weather).

I took issue at once at these dishes being considered typical of St. Louis, but simultaneously came the thought, "What is, or what was, typical of St. Louis?" Much as I have heard of the past glories of Tony Faust's or the old Planters' House I know of none of their dishes that have survived. What did the St. Louis people of the past eat? There must be many who can answer this question. St. Louis was too French not to have harbored innumerable connoisseurs of good food. Their cook books, if available, would show evidences of interest and high quality in culinary matters.

● THE FOLLOWING comes to you through the courtesy of Mrs. Charles Green, who was a Miss Prenat of the charming old river town of Madison, Ind. (When I visited there recently I was told by the oldest inhabitant of its former glamour—"Ah!" he said reverently, "you may not know it, but one of the 14 stops made by the famous Jenny Lind on her first American tour was at Madison.") Mrs. Green has maintained the high standards of the "menage" set by her French ancestors. Her house has an atmosphere of distinction, her recipes are outstanding. She frequently served the following liqueur made from an old recipe given to her family by a French priest:

Quince Liqueur.

Wash and core two quarts quinces.
Put them through a food-chopper.
Combine and mix with:
One and one-half gallons *whisky.
Two ounces cardamon seed.
One-fourth ounce mace.
One-half ounce aniseed.
One-half of a vanilla bean.
One-half ounce grated nutmeg.
Put this mixture in a stone jar.
Let it remain there for three weeks.
Strain it through a jelly bag.
Boil to the thread stage:
Five cups water.
Ten cups sugar.
Cool the syrup. Add it to the liqueur. Bottle it.

*If whisky is not available, two quarts of alcohol and four quarts of distilled water may be substituted.

When you drink this you will subconsciously follow the advice of the old German who said, when serving a rare vintage, "Don't gollop it—sipp it!"

My next recipe, reputed to be a very old one, is, unfortunately, anonymous. It came to me through a friend whose cook had a friend who worked for an early St. Louis family. It is so good that I recommend its adoption by some newly rich hostess in search of family lore.

Eggplant Fritters.

Pare, then dice:
A small eggplant.
Drop it into boiling, salted water, to which add:
One tablespoon vinegar.
Boil until tender.
Drain, mash and add:
One egg.
One-eighth teaspoon salt.
Three tablespoons flour.
Beat it well.
Add:
One-fourth teaspoon baking powder.
Fry the batter in hot fat or oil.
Drain the fritters on absorbent paper.

—o-o—

● These fritters are a mystery to the consumer. They answer a double purpose for they are an accompaniment to a meat course and a guessing game at the same time (commercially speaking, "they regale while they fortify.") When you serve them you may dispense with the intellectual effort you are sometimes called upon to make to cover the deficiencies of your dinner. ("Tell another story, Madame Scarron, there is not enough roast.") For you will find them highly diverting.

Now, how about more old recipes? It would be very interesting to me to unearth some dishes of a past day typical of this section of the country. Like Peter Pan, my appeal is a direct one. Will you help me?

Avocados and Crab Meat in Canape Menu

Hearts of Palms and Orange Muffins Go With This Dinner.

By Gladys T. Lang

Baked Crab Meat in Shells
Hearts of Palms Orange Muffins
Parsley Butter
Strawberry Cheese Tarts
Coffee

Mexican Canape

Rub four ripe avocados through a sieve and mix with the solid meat of one or two ripe tomatoes. Either rub the mixing bowl with a split clove of garlic or mix in one tablespoon of grated onion. Add one rounded tablespoon of stiff mayonnaise, the juice of a lemon and a generous dash of cayenne and salt. Mix well and form into mounds on individual plates. Surround with heated toastados. This must be eaten by dipping the toastados in the avocado mixture.

Baked Crab Meat in Shells

Brown one teaspoon of chopped chives in two tablespoons of butter, add two rounded tablespoons of flour and stir to a nice golden brown. Gradually pour on two cupfuls of half milk and cream, adding one-half teaspoon of English mustard dissolved in one tablespoon of worcestershire sauce, salt, pepper, a grating of nutmeg and a dash of sugar. Cook until slightly thickened. Add a chopped hard boiled egg, a little chopped parsley and two cups of picked-over crab meat that has been slightly browned in butter. Stir thoroughly and pile into fish shells. Cover with buttered bread crumbs, dot with butter and place in oven for about 10 minutes. Garnish with watercress and lemon curls.

Hearts of Palms

Remove the hearts of palms from can and cut into two-inch pieces, splitting the stalks. Heat in their own liquor, then drain and over them pour salted melted butter and chopped parsley.

Orange Muffins

One-third cup of half lard and butter.
One-half cup sugar.
Two eggs.
One and one-half cups of flour.
Three level teaspoons of baking powder.
One-half teaspoon salt.
Scant two-thirds cup of milk.
One tablespoon of orange juice.
Grated rind of one-half orange.

Cream the shortening and sugar. Add the beaten eggs, then the flour, sifted with the salt and baking powder alternately with the milk and orange juice. Stir in the grated orange rind. Pour into well-buttered muffin pans and bake in a moderate oven about 20 minutes.

Strawberry Cheese Tarts

Make a pie dough by pouring one-fourth cup of boiling water over one-half cup of lard. Stir until lard is melted. Sift and measure one and a half cups of flour. Sift again with one-half teaspoon of salt and one-eighth teaspoon of baking powder. Stir all together until well mixed and place in a bowl in refrigerator for two or three hours or longer. Roll out and cut in pieces large enough to cover outside of tart tins. Press against edges and prick with a fork. Bake in a moderate oven to a nice brown. Carefully remove from tins and allow to cool.

Mash three packages of cream cheese and soften with about one-half cup of cream, adding a pinch of salt. Beat until smooth. Spread on inside of tart shells about one-half inch thick. On top place perfect strawberries and sprinkle lightly with powdered sugar.

Crush and stew one pint of strawberries. Strain through a fine sieve to extract the juice. Return to fire and add one-half cup of sugar which has been mixed with one tablespoon of cornstarch. Let cook until thickened and clear, which will take from three to five minutes. Allow to cool and about an hour before serving pour this glaze over berries and place in refrigerator.

Hail to the HUMBLE HERRING

Become an Adept at Handling Herring and You Will Add Many Succulent Dishes to Your Table, Says This Writer, Who Gives His Favorite Recipes.

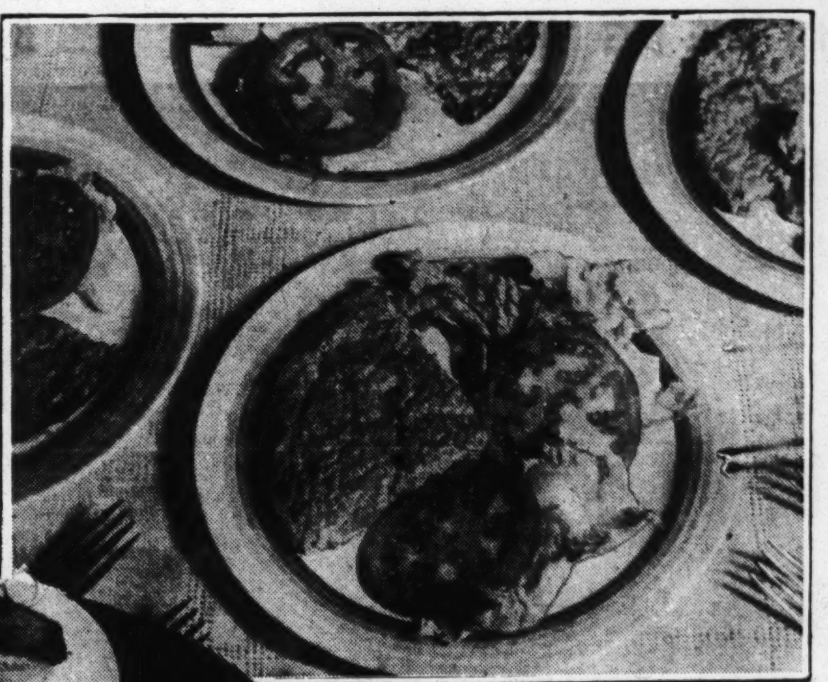
By JAMES MILLER

IT seems to me that the salt herring has been sadly neglected. Considering that it is an important food product of many countries, and has had a battle, and a cloth-weaving and building process named after it, I think it has not received its proper due.

I have heard of recipes for rare sauces and puddings, formulas for fine wines and secret methods of preparing fruit cakes handed down in families, but never any recipes for herring. I have also heard women discussing roasts, lipstick, hats, husbands, stoves, shoes, bridge and lingerie. However, I have yet to hear an argument on a salt herring.

I like herring and am proud of it. My wife hates to prepare it but loves to eat it. Therefore, I am the herring chef of the family. My mother was famous for her herrings dishes. She had over 20 methods of preparing this succulent morsel. She could give a 10-course meal, every course consisting of herring. And each course tasted as different from the next as lobster does from wheat cakes. I am not quite as versatile, but I can do justice to this fish in at least a dozen different ways.

Perhaps if the poor herring had another name, a name smacking of aristocracy, most women would not turn up their noses at it. It comes of an old strain, and culture and refinement can easily be given it by adept and skillful handling. It is remarkably adaptable and easily disguised, whether served as an entree, appetizer or piece de resistance, without losing a bit of its exquistie savor.



Never Had a Herring Pie? Then Try This for a Treat.

This Is a Kabob Herring—and Excellent.

As a Taste Teaser We Present a Recipe for Tante's Herring.

The imported Holland herring, or the domestic kind—that come barreled in brine—can be used for all the recipes that follow.

There are three principal kinds of salt herring. One is called matzos, which is very tender and can be served plain, with just a garnishment of sliced Spanish onion and lemon. Another kind is called schmaltz; this type is a bit firmer fleshed and has a slightly different flavor and can also be served in its natural state. The third variety, called milt, is generally larger and more solid than the other two species. It is best used for baking, broiling, pickling and cooking.

To avoid repetition I will say now that all herring should be soaked in cold water for at least 24 hours. The water should be changed two or three times during that period, depending on how salty one likes this palate tickler. The heads and tails and entrails should always be removed.

If you are partial to interesting flavors and seasonings in food, here is a method of adapting the plain salt herring.

Baimel Herring.

Use at least two dozen herring. Place a layer of them on the bottom of a stone crock. Sprinkle heavily with caraway seeds, a few bay leaves, a few mustard seeds and some tiny hot peppers. Alternate layers of fish and spice in this way. Pour olive oil in crock until the contents are covered. Put a flat dish over the top and weight this to keep herring pressed down firmly. This should stand from three to four weeks. It can then be removed and served as entree or appetizer. It will keep a long while.

Baked Herring.

Two salt herring
Water
One and one-half cups tomato juice
One-half green pepper, chopped
Three slices onion.
Paprika

Soak herring 24 hours in water to cover, changing water once or twice during process. Drain, dry and remove larger bones, heads and tails. Place in a greased baking dish. Pour tomato juice over fish and add green pepper and onion. Sprinkle with paprika. Bake in a moderately slow oven (325 degrees F.) about 30 minutes. Makes four portions.

Kabob Herring.

Two salt herring
Water
One-half cup olive oil
Three tomatoes
One Spanish onion

Soak herring 24 hours in water to cover, changing water two or three times during process. Drain, dry and remove larger bones, heads and tails. Cut herring into small pieces. Dip each piece into olive oil. Alternate on skewers with pieces of tomato. Broil under high flame about four or five minutes, turning frequently, until edges start to frizzle. These may be deliciously broiled over glowing charcoal or wood coals. Serve with onion. This recipe makes four portions.

Herring Paste.

One salt herring
Water
One small onion
One-half medium-sized apple
One slice stale bread
One-fourth cup milk
One sprig parsley
One hard-cooked egg
Dash of pepper
Two tablespoons vinegar
One teaspoon granulated sugar

Soak herring 24 hours in water to cover,, changing water frequently during process. Drain, dry and remove skins, bones, heads and tails. Place in chopping bowl with oninon, peeled and quartered; apple, pared and cored; bread which has been soaked in milk and wrung out. Add parsley, hard-cooked egg, pepper, vinegar and sugar. Chop thoroughly until mixture is reduced to a paste. The ingredients may be combined and put through a food chopper, using finest knife. Serve as an appetizer or sandwich spread. This may conveniently be kept in refrigerator, and the recipe as given will make about three-fourths cup of paste.

Herring Balls With Potatoes.

Four medium-sized potatoes
Two small onions, sliced
Two cups milk
Two cups water
Two salt herring
Three slices bread
One egg, well-beaten
Parsley

Cook potatoes and oninon in combined milk and water about 15 minutes. Have herring previously soaked in water about 24 hours. Drain, bone and skin. Chop finely with slightly moistened bread and stir in egg. Make this mixture into small balls and add to potatoes. Continue cooking about 15 to 20 minutes longer or until potatoes are tender. Serve at once, garnished with parsley. This recipe makes four portions.

Boiled Herring in Milk.

Four medium-sized potatoes
Two medium-sized onions, sliced
Two cups milk
Two cups water
Two salt herring
Pepper
Parsley

Peel potatoes, wash and combine with onions. Place in suacepan with milk and water. Cook until potatoes start to become tender, about 15 minutes. Cut into halves the herring which which have been previously soaked for 24 hours in water. Remove larger bones, head and tails. Add fish to potatoes and cook until potatoes are tender. Season with pepper. Serve at once, garnished with parsley. This recipe makes four portions.

Herring Pie.

Two salt herring
Water
One medium-sized onion
Two slices bread
One-half cup milk
One egg
Pinch of celery salt
Dash of black pepper
Two tomatoes, sliced
Four lettuce leaves

Soak herring in water to cover about 24 hours, changing water once or twice during process. Drain, dry and remove bones and skin. Peel onion and soak bread in milk, wringing it out when completely moistened. Chop fish, onion and bread together until well mixed. Place in a greased pie plate. Beat egg thoroughly, season with celery salt and pepper and pour over herring mixture. Bake in a moderate oven (350 degrees F.) until brown, about 25 or 30 minutes. Serve either hot or cold with sliced tomatoes and lettuce. This recipe makes four portions.

Tante's Herring.

Two salt herring
Water
Yolks of two hard-cooked eggs
One-half cup olive oil
One tablespoon vinegar
One-half teaspoon salt
Oone-half teaspoon granulated sugar
One-half cup thick sour cream
Lettuce

Soak herring 24 hours in water to cover, changing water once or twice during process. Drain, dry and fillet herring, removing all bones and skin. Mash egg yolks to a paste. Gradually stir olive oil into this, beating until creamy. Add vinegar, salt, sugar and sour cream, stirring until well combined. Serve fillets on lettuce with this dressing. This recipe makes four portions.

Pan-Roasted Herring.

Two salt herring
Water
One and one-fourth pounds sauerkraut.

Soak herring 24 hours in water to cover, changing water once or twice during process. Drain, dry and remove larger bones, heads and tails. Do not skin. Wrap fish in oiled paper or moistened cooking parchment. Place in a very hot even (450 degrees F.) about 15 to 20 minutes, until fish is thoroughly heated through. Remove paper and serve at once with sauerkraut. This recipe makes four portions.

This recipe may also be prepared by broiling the paper-wrapped fish over glowing coals until paper is burned.

Fried Herring.

Two salt herring
Water
Two small onions, sliced thin
Two tablespoons butter
One-fourth cup light cream or
One-fourth cup evaporated milk
One hard-cooked egg, minced

Soak herring 24 hours in water to cover, changing water once or twice during process. Drain, dry and carefully remove bones, heads and tails, cutting fish into portions for serving. Saute onions in butter in skillet until tender but very lightly browned. Add herring, cook for five minutes, turning fish once. Add cream or evaporated milk and egg. Cook five minutes longer and serve at once. This recipe makes four portions.

Springtime Is The Time For Varied Salads

Recipes That Will Give Variety to Warm-Weather Meals.

By Alice Lynn Barry

SPRINGTIME is salad time, and from now on we expect all our faithful readers to splurge on fruit salad, vegetable salad, salad in bowls or on plates, salad for Sunday night supper, for luncheons for the whole meal, salads for parties or for any old time. That's a pretty tall order, but then it's spring, and as we've just remarked, it's salad time.

So here goes for a few recipes and some pertinent salad news.

For a healthful spring salad, combine three chopped green onions, one teaspoon chopped parsley and one cup cold chopped rice. Marinate with French dressing. Serve on lettuce leaf with spoonful or ball of cottage cheese garnished with dash of paprika.

For iris salad, place three slices of red ripe tomatoes on romaine leaves. Place slice of egg on each slice of tomato. Just before serving add julienned blanched almonds and diced bananas to French dressing. Serve dressing at table.

For date party salad, steam one package dates until soft; press through sieve. Cream two packages cream cheese and combine with date pulp, two tablespoons orange juice, half cup cream, whipped. Pour mixture into trays of mechanical refrigerator and let freeze until solid. Or pour into mold which has been rinsed in cold water and pack in ice and salt for three hours. Serve on lettuce with cream mayonnaise.

Cucumber "boats" are nice for a spring luncheon. Divide three small cucumbers lengthwise into halves; remove centers carefully and dice. Add one teaspoon onion juice and three tablespoons French dressing and chill. Refill chilled shells, arrange on lettuce on individual salad plates and serve with sour cream dressing and sprinkle with riced egg yolk.

NOW for our promised new salad news: Save your brocoli stalks, cut into strips, soak in French dressing and use in green or vegetable salads. The tender inside leaves of spinach make good salad greens!

Tuna fish, salmon, shrimp, ham or chicken salads are news when they are made with bananas, as are fruit salads, garnished with candied fruit peel. Ripe olives cut up in your salad dressing are flavorful—especially good with orange-banana salad. Pasteurized dates stuffed with your favorite cheese will dress up any salads; four "cheesed" dates on lettuce make a salad in itself.

Crispy little rice-cheese balls are the perfect salad accompaniment. Make little balls of nippy cheese, spread lightly with mustard and horseradish, roll in salted, boiled rice to cover, and make compact balls. Deep-fry to a golden brown and serve hot with salads or as appetizers. Tender little flowerets of raw cauliflower are excellent in salad—crunchy and crisp.

Raw cranberries, chopped and mixed with chopped apples, make a good salad-like garnish for meat or bowl. Jellied canned tomato cut in cubes is the prettiest garnish.

Scrambled Eggs.

Nine eggs.
Milk.
One and one-fourth teaspoons salt.
One-fourth teaspoon paprika.
Seven tablespoons butter or margarine.
One four-ounce can mushroom caps.
Four tablespoons flour.
One-eighth teaspoon worcestershire or similar sauce.

Beat eggs slightly; add one cup milk, three-fourths teaspoon salt and the paprika. Scramble in the usual way in three tablespoons butter. Meanwhile, drain the mushroom caps, reserving the liquor. Heat the caps in four tablespoons butter; add the flour and blend. Add enough milk to the mushroom liquor to make two cups. Add to the mushroom mixture with the salt and worcestershire, and stir over low heat until smooth and thickened. Serve with scrambled eggs. Serves six. To serve two or three, make half this recipe.

Bacon ofter proves to be too salty to be palatable if cooked as it is bought. Try making it less salty and more appetizing by soaking it in cold water for 10 minutes. Then wipe it dry with a clean cloth and fry it in the usual way.

Lamb Curry

One tablespoon flour.
One teaspoon salt.
Two teaspoons curry powder.
One cup water.
One cup lamb gravy.
Two cups cooked diced lamb.
One-half cup chopped cooked ham.
Three tablespoons seeded raisins.
Two medium onions.
Two tablespoons fat, butter or oil.
One egg yolk, beaten.
One-half cup milk.
One and one-half cups raw rice.
Grated coconut.
Chopped salted almonds or peanuts.

Combine the flour, salt and curry powder, and mix to a smooth paste with a little of the water. Then add the rest of the water and the lamb gravy. To this add the diced lamb and ham. Toss in the raisins, which have been washed, and let this mixture simmer over a low heat for 15 minutes. Meanwhile, peel and slice the onions. Dry your tears and brown the onions slowly in a covered skillet in which you have put the fat. When tender, add them to the meat and gravy mixture and continue the simmering process for 10 minutes. Just before serving, add slowly, while stirring constantly, the beaten egg yolk which has been blended with the milk. Meanwhile, cook the rice until tender and dry, and then serve with the lamb curry. Serves six.

Muffins placed in a quick oven for 5 minutes, then taken out and buttered, are a great improvement on the usual way of toasting before a fire.

Stuffed Avacados

One cup drained cook or canned peas.
One cup cooked sliced carrots.
One-half cup diced celery.
One-fourth cup mayonnaise dressing.
Three avocados, lettuce, French dressing.

Combine the peas, carrots, celery and mayonnaise. Halve the avocados, remove the stones and peel the avocados. Arrange the halves, one on each of six individual beds of lettuce. Place about one teaspoon of French dressing in each half and then fill each with some of the vegetable mixture. Serves six. To serve two or three, make half this recipe.

OFF the LEASH

by
H. F. Owen

WHENEVER I sell a puppy I feel as though I ought to go along with him and stay a day or so, to be sure that he will not be misunderstood and will feel safe in his new home. I try to put myself in his place, a little tyke, picked up and transplanted immediately into a new world, hearing new noises seeing so many strange sights. To expect a puppy not to be lonesome for a day or two is like expecting a small child not to miss its mother.

In some cases he has traveled hundreds of miles in a crate or crude box, hearing the roar of the train for several days, been moved about from one corner to another, until his little heart must sometimes nearly stop beating from fright. He arrives at his destination, nervous and tired and when an anxious owner opens the crate, excited children squeal with delight, and immediately he is tossed from one to another for inspection, for hugs and endearments—which is the natural thing, but think how confused he must be. Not a familiar voice or face greets him.

Then he is put down on the floor and every one expects him to start romping with glee. But he is tired and perhaps hungry. Someone gets some food and puts it before him. He probably does not even sniff but looks around bewilderingly for a dark corner and makes a dash for it. A great dark form looms over him, suddenly swoops down upon him and the same performance is gone through with again.

● THE NEW owners, not realizing how frightened he must be, are convinced that they have been imposed upon. The puppy is sick. He has no pep and they either send him back or take him to the basement, to grieve his heart out. In a few days he is really ill.

When your new puppy arrives, put him down on the ground and let him wander around awhile, before taking him into the house. Walk away from him and let him be just near enough to feel your presence. He will accustom himself naturally to the surroundings. Let him inspect you and the yard in his own way. When he has taken care of his needs, stoop down as nearly as possible to his level and call him. Do not grab him when he comes to you. Talk to him and win his confidence. Let him know you understand how he feels. Then get up and start to the house and call him. Nine times out of 10 he will come running after you, for he will be afraid of losing you, again.

Pet him and show him he is safe with you and pick him up gently and carry him into the house. Talk to him soothingly and follow the same procedure after he is in the house. Do not force your attentions upon him. Put his food within his reach and let him find it for himself. If he does not want to eat it at once, just leave it there and after a while he will go to it of his own accord. He will soon start making friends with the family. I am sure that if you follow this plan of receiving your new puppy he will be a lively and happy one, and every one will be satisfied with his behavior.

● YOUR DOG has learned to come when called, to lead, and heels as well as to sit on command, so that it will be easier, now, to teach him new lessons in which you can naturally use exercises just learned. 'Say Your Prayer," will follow nicely.

Lead your dog to a chair with the dog on your left side, the same as you do when leading or heeling. See that the dog walks directly to the chair. Guide him so that he can go neither to the right nor left of the chair. With a little urging he will put his front feet upon the seat of the chair. Do not allow him to get upon the chair with all four feet, but stop him with your leash held to check him and say "sit."

He is now in a sitting position with his front feet upon the chair seat. Push his head firmly down between his paws. When he moves or raises his head, push him back again and say, "no, say your prayers." Continue until he has learned to hold his head still. When he has accomplished this, say, "Amen." Step back and he, feeling the tug on his collar as you step back, will get off the chair and stand on all four feet naturally. Praise him and show him that he has done well. Do not let your dog get down from his prayers at any other word than "Amen." In a very short while he will learn to go to a chair, get into his praying position at your command, "Say your prayers," and get down on no other word than your command, "Amen."

● SITTING UP is another trick that depends upon your dog's knowing what "sit" means.

Lead your dog to a corner of the room where you wish to teach him. A floor that has been highly polished is not so good, as your dog will slip and become frightened. If your floor is slippery place a small rug in the corner you practice in.

Turn the dog with his back to the corner of the walls and have him "sit." Now say, "Sit up" and at the same time put your hand under his chin, pushing him up and back into the corner. The angle of the walls, you see, will brace him from the sides as well as from the back, thus giving him confidence. A chuck under the chin, if he tries to get down will push him back into position.

When he has learned to sit up in the corner, move him to the side wall where he will only be braced from the back and will learn to balance himself to keep from falling sideways. Next, move him away from the wall entirely, but hold the leash ready to help steady him should he become unsteady or off balance. Hold the leash just taut above his head, ready to gently pull him back into position. Many dogs, especially small dogs and young puppies can be taught to sit up, by holding tid-bits over their heads just out of reach of their mouths.

● THE DACHSHUND CLUB of St. Louis is looking forward to its First Licensed Specialty Show, to be held the early part of June. This will be an outdoor show, and in addition to standard ribbons, there will be money prizes and special prizes. Many out-of-town entries are expected and there is every reason to believe that it will be a five-point show in both sexes. The date will be announced later and applications for entry blanks may be made to Reginald Jackson, 310 South Gore avenue, Webster Groves, Mo.

Mrs. Conrad Wissman has recently imported a good clear red male long-haired dachshund. She is the only member of the club who breeds long-hairs, and she has some good-looking puppies, with which she expects to do some winning in future shows.

—o-o—

Miss Marcella Daley, who with her dachshund, Otto Schmalzgesicht, won the "Lady and Her Dog" contest at the recent Mississippi Valley Kennel Club show, is still being congratulated upon the beautiful trophy won in that event.

—o-o—

Homer Steinhoff is negotiating for the purchase of an outstanding male winner in dachshunds from the famous Teckel Kennels in Germany.

—o-o—

Another victory has been registered by Velvet Sonny, Dr. P. H. Gregory's cocker spaniel. By winning the sporting group at the Nebraska Kennel Club show, held at Omaha on April 21-22, and stepping up to winners male in the winners' class, he has made it three straight five-point shows.

—o-o—

The St. Louis Shepherd Dog Club's semi-annual field trial was held at Lackland and Brown roads, as scheduled, with an enthusiastic group of spectators in attendance.

The trophy, a handsome cup, was won for the second time by Harry Brunsen, with Turk. Second place was won by Fritiz, owned by Jimmy Kozler, third by F. H. Manger's Graf and fourth by Ina of Owen Park, owned by Paul Taylor.

The trial was held under American Kennel Club rules.

IN THE BIG VILLAGE

"But the man said it would drive itself!"

The Stamp Review : : by John Chamberlin

SIMON BOLIVER, the South American patriot, probably did more good for more different countries than anyone else in history. He was born on July 2, 1783, at Caracas, Venezuela. He studied and traveled extensively in Europe, and also visited the United States. During his stay in the United States he became interested in the new country's form of government. His desire to help free his country from Spanish rule grew, and on his return to Venezuela he joined a secret organization of patriots. (They are "patriots" when they win and "rebels" when they lose.) Bolivar was involved in the first revolutionary outbreak in 1810, which was a failure.

With the aid of other revolutionists from other parts of northern South America, he kept trying to drive out the Spanish without much success until 1819. All the Spanish troops were driven out by 1822, Bolivar by that time being President of the combined countries of Colombia and Venezuela. In this same year the people of Peru asked him to come there and help them with their revolution. Two years later he was named dictator of Peru. At a congress at Lima he resigned his position. The southern part of the territory was organized into a separate country named Bolivia in his honor, and Bolivar was chosen dictator.

About this time Colombia separated from Venezuela, but Bolivar was elected President. Dissatisfaction and jealousy among the natives and rejection of his plan of a confederation similar to the United States in North America broke his heart. He died on Dec. 10, 1830, at San Pedro, his private fortune exhausted.

He has been often described as the "George Washington of South America." Like Washington, he came of wealthy family and had a large private fortune. Like Washington, he aided his native country in freeing itself of foreign rule. Like Washington, he was the first President of his country. More than Washington, Bolivar helped free other countries, and was also their first President. And like Washington, he was not wholly appreciated until after his death. But from the point of view of the stamp collector, many countries have issued many stamps honoring Simon Bolivar, the "Liberator."

Bolivia's standard coin is called boliviano. Bolivar's portrait appears on the stamps of Bolivia only four times, but always on the one boliviano value.

—o-o—

THE Colombian Republic has honored Bolivar on many issues, including a special issue on the centenary of his death. Among the Colombian states, his picture appears on practically every issue of the state of Bolivar.

Panama, at one time a part of Colombia, honored him on the series of 1921. The 5-cent value of this series is unusual in that it shows a tablet with a quotation from one of his speeches. These stamps are also found overprinted for use in Canal Zone. Costa Rica, in 1921, issued a stamp with his picture, and Ecuador shows him on the one-sucre value of the 1920 independence issue.

He was overlooked by Peru until 1909, but his portrait has appeared on many of the subsequent issues. On the stamps of Venezuela it is difficult to find the portrait of anyone but Bolivar, and the standard coin of Venezuela is the bolivar.

Thus we find one man's picture appears on the stamps of eight stamp-issuing countries, and overprinted for use in the United States leased Canal Zone.

After the Belgium airpost stamps of 1930 (Scott's Nos. 531-34 inc.) had been in daily use for several months, a curious mistake on the part of the artist or designer was discovered. The design of the stamp is an airplane circling over a city; and the faux pas lies on the letters inscribed on the under part of the wings, showing the nationality of the airplane, according to the international code. In examining these Belgium airmail stamps it can readily be seen that the insignia consists of the letters "I. B." instead of the insignia assigned to Belgium, which is "O. O.". In the international aerial code "I. B." stands, not for Belgium, but for Italy.

Siam No. 1 has three types differing mainly in the background of the small oval at the top. Scotts list the color as blue, but actually the shades are indigo Prussian blue and violet-blue.

In the first type the oval has a solid blue background. This type is found only in violet-blue, and, except for the imperforate variety, is the scarcest type.

The second type has the oval with a lined background, and is found in both indigo and Prussian blue. This is the type most commonly found.

Type three has the oval with lined background, but the lines pass through the white Siamese characters in the oval. This is found in indigo and Prussian blue.

These differences are no more difficult to find than are the diffeernces in the United States 1894 triangle types.

How to Treat Infections in Nose, Throat

Tired Feeling May Be Caused by Tonsil or Sinus Trouble.

By
Dr. Logan Clendening

THIS past winter was a hard one for sensitive throats, with several influenza epidemics, pneumonia epidemics and queer epidemics of sore throats that nobody can identify. And it would not be surprising if today finds a good many people with residues of infection in the nose or throat. Perhaps that dragged out feeling is a little focus of this kind in a sinus or tonsil.

Pharyngeal infections include any inflammation in the back of the throat, in front or behind the soft palate or on its surface. There is no particular germ which is certainly responsible for generalized pharyngeal inflammation, although the streptococcus is the most common. This is likely to produce a generalized, rather than a localized infection, with sore throat and feeling of rawness and irritation.

The important thing to do is to attempt to localize troubles of this kind with moist heat and a hypertonic substance. Irrigation and gargling should be done with very hot salt solution in water, using as much as half a gallon an hour. The irrigation is best done by allowing a tube to come down from a rubber bag or irrigating can, and leaning the head over a basin with the right side downward. Introduce the rubber tube into the back of the throat on the left side of the jaw, and let the hot salt solution play over the back of the throat and run out of the back of the mouth.

Such treatment will not cause congestion, and will relieve the feeling of constriction or obstruction that may be present with these diffuse infections which follow influenza and the colds of the winter.

Questions From Readers.

E. F.: "Is there any standard for visual requirement for safe automobile driving?"

Answer: It is generally believed that it would not be necessary for the vision to be perfect. It is generally recorded as 20-20. "A person to possess safe visual acuity for driving must have at least 20-40 vision in one eye with or without correction, and his other eye should not be less than 20-100. A person possessing only one eye should have a visual acuity of not less than 20-30 vision and a normal field. In case the applicant is totally blind in his right eye but has a vision of 20-40 in his left eye, with or without glasses, and a normal field, a restricted license for daylight driving only would come within safe limits. Where glasses are required to bring the vision up to 20-40 in either or both eyes, a person should be required to wear them when driving. Color blindness, while a great handicap in city driving, should not necessarily be cause for rejection." The sad thing is many people are driving who are way below these minimal requirements. A physician told me recently that he had noticed in the paper that a patient of his had been arrested for the ninth violation of traffic laws, and he happened to know that this patient had a vision of only 20-200.

Editor's note: Seven pamphlets by Dr. Clendening can now be obtained by sending 10 cents in coin, for each, and a self-addressed envelope stamped with a 3-cent stamp, to Dr. Logan Clendening, in care of this paper. The pamphlets are: "Three Weeks' Reducing Diet," "Indigestion and Constipation." "Reducing and Gaining," "Infant Feeding," "Instructions for the Treatment of Diabetes," "Feminine Hygiene" and "The Care of the Hair and Skin."

Feather Pillows

When remaking a feather pillow, rub the inside of the new case with beeswax. Make an opening in the old case and sew the two cases together. Shake the feathers from one to the other; pin the seam before undoing the stitches. The old case can then be removed, and the new one sewn up without the feathers flying about.

THE MASCULINE ENSEMBLE FOR OUTINGS IN SPRING

By ESQUIRE

PICNICS are a delightful diversion. We might qualify this generalization by limiting our enthusiasm to picnics held in the spring, since we must admit that when the flying and crawling pests reach their full summer voracity, they take the fun out of this pastime. An appetite, engendered by a ride to location through a countryside resplendent in spring sunshine and verdant foliage, will fully appreciate the concoctions that come under the heading of a picnic lunch. You needn't remind us that our province is clothes; we're coming right to the point. Though we concede their right to such an opinion, we do not concur with those who hold that a straight jacket is the only appropriate outfit for picnickers. We suggest here an outfit that fits into any countryside setting, irrespective of your picnicking proclivities.

A brown reversed calf shoe is the essence of comfort and practicability. The model that is most favored has no toe-cap, but a blucher front with leather sole and heel.

The omnipresent gray flannel slack still retains its uncontested position as the trouser for all country wear outfits. It's favored in a medium light gray shade.

Fashion approves a simple, free-swinging, half-belted-back model for sports jackets, in checked and plaided tweeds and Saxony type woolens.

A sport shirt for early spring that combines the elements of two useful sport garments, with its chamois front and knitted sleeves and back, always goes well in the masculine wardrobe.

Button-down collared shirts are neat and nonchalant enough for the country outfit. With a checked shirting, an even space silk repp tie is suggested.

A new lightweight felt hat follows modified lines of the popular Tyrolean top-piece . . . an echo, rather than the yodel itself.

dressed for her part as carefully as though she was actually playing it in sight of the thousands, or is it millions, of listeners all over the country. She wore a home spun crepe suit of desert tan with matching collar; a gunmetal toque with silver kid trimming looking like Mercury's wings pressed flat to his sides, and gunmetal kid pumps. She did not remove her wrap during the broadcast which rather made you believe she meant her last line in the play which was that she was dashing to the pier to catch a boat. All of the stars or, rather the women stars, really dress up for their broadcasts in keeping with the roles they play. The men, pretty much, go on "as is" just as they happen to arrive from the golf links or the studio.

You probably didn't know about it, for she keeps her moves secret, but Katharine Hepburn, having finished the final shots of her new picture, "Mary of Scotland," was due to spend about 15 minutes in St. Louis today for she hopped off last night, by air for New York. Katy expects to have a short vacation in the metropolis and get back here before the end of the month.

SAW MARY PICKFORD at an informal gathering the other night. Always conservative and always correct, she looked charming, and still very young, in a navy blue seersucker organza dress cut with a round neck in front and high in the back. With it she wore a soft crowned matching straw hat having a notched brim and a little veil hanging down from the back. At the same party was Ida Lupino, in a black crepe dressmaker's suit and a black, close fitting felt hat, her white, lingerie blouse had a full collar and frill edging of valenciennes lace, about her neck was a handsome pointed fox scarf.

DO YOU REMEMBER Anita Stewart? She was the first leading woman of the films as far back as I can recall them, and although she has long since retired from pictures she is still in Hollywood. I ran across her the other night at the Clover Club looking very smart, too, in a light blue shark skin suit with dark blue hat and an ascot scarf of the same color. At the next table was youthful St. Louis actress, Betty Grable, with her equally youthful fiance, Jackie Coogan.

● MARY CARLYSLE DOESN'T seem to care very much whether that persistent suitor, who still cables or phones from London several times a day, has gone and gotten married to some English girl or not. The story in all his messages is to the effect that he "can explain everything" but Mary's mother told me her daughter was not at all interested and never was. It seems that when Mary was in London recently she got lost in a fog and asked some stranger on the street to direct her to her hotel. From that minute he dogged her footsteps and she came back home a short time ago preceded by the news that she was engaged. The Los Angeles papers made a good deal of the story. Then came a news dispatch from London which said that Miss Carlysle's admirer had suddenly married. The same day he began calling Hollywood on the phone and he has been calling ever since. If Mary knows what his explanation is she has not told the world about it and she certainly isn't breaking her heart. She has just come back from another short vacation, this time only as far as San Francisco, where she startled the natives with her entire wardrobe of 25 new gowns which she gathered up in Paris. But yesterday, when I saw her, she was being very comfortable in a good looking culotte outfit of a novelty cloth resembling Turkish toweling which was dotted with plump little tufts of blue.

Flower Note

When hyacinth bulbs have finished flowering they should be taken out of the soil, removing as much as as possible, and laid out in the air on a sunny day to dry. They should then be stored in a dark, dry, cool place until the autumn, when they can be replanted Any offshoots should be removed.

I MET BELLA SPEWACK, co-author of the comedy rage, "Boy Meets Girl," darting out of a dress shop the other day. She had just bought a ruffly party dress, and was as happy as a child. Size 12, which shows that successful playwrights have to go to the girls' department for their clothes sometimes. Bella has an odd idiosyncracy—she's never satisfied with the place she's living, and is forever on the move, towing husband and typewriter.

GRETCHEN UPPERCU (that's my favorite society name) is about to become a bride—and she has cooked up a new sort of wedding ring. She and the lucky man went to a swank jeweler's and bought two lengths of malleable gold wire. Each tied a knot in the wire, the jeweler spliced the two knots together, and thus Gretchen and her husband-to-be have knotted their own nuptial knots. . . .

NOTE THE name of Kathleen Harding, a New York woman who has had the same job for 27 years. For over a quarter century she has pounded the piano at the Metropolitan Opera Ballet School, giving the music cues to young ballerinas-to-be. And today the Ballet School is being sold as a means to reduce and not as a means to becoming an Anna Pavlowa. But Miss Harding plays on devotedly! . . .

YOU MAY have heard that Arlette Stavisky, the beautiful French girl whose late husband nearly provoked a revolution in France through his financial skulduggery, is a chorus girl at the famous French Casino night club in this insane city. I had a long talk with her the other day. She's not capitalizing on her French notoriety at all. She, a brunette beauty, has her eye on Hollywood, and is studying English, dancing and singing when she is not posing on the French Casino stage.

IF YOU contemplate a late Spring dash here, the musical show to see is "On Your Toes," a recent arrival which is a roaring burlesque on the Modern Ballet. There are so few girly shows here now that chorus girls are a dime a dozen, in shops and restaurants. Luella Gear is in "On Your Toes."

CULBERTSON · Weekly Pattern · PATRI

WHEN PLAY VARIES

By
Ely Culbertson

EVEN very good players have difficulty in grasping the salient truth that both offensive and defensive technique must vary according to the objective; i. e., the number of tricks needed to fulfill or defeat a contract.

At contracts for only one and two odd the usual trump conversation and suit establishment tactics must often be abandoned by the declarer in favor of deliberate self-ruffling-down process. High-card tricks should be cashed as quickly as possible and low trumps utilized to the fullest extent.

Since this is declarer's proper plan, it follows that the defenders should adopt one diametrically opposite. Their objects will not allow them to "weaken" declarer by forcing him to ruff; too often this scheme is consummated only after seven or eight tricks have been conceded.

I am well aware of the apparent inconsistency of prescribing different measures of play for the same hand. Obviously it is logical to say that declarer and defenders should amass all the tricks they respectively can. The inconsistency results from the fact that bridge is not played double dummy; the number of winning and losing tricks cannot always be predetermined, and therefore lines of play must be aimed not so much at a theoretical maximum as at the practical goal of contract.

Let us examine a perfectly ordinary hand from two different viewpoints:

♥6 5 3 2
♦A K J 2
♣A 8 4

SOUTH

Opening lead ♦K.

♠A K J 7 5

● FIRST WE will assume that South is playing a four-spade contract. A count of possible losing tricks leads us to the conclusion that aggressive measures—and considerable luck — are imperative. There are two hearts, two diamonds and an indeterminate number of trumps that may be lost; our problem is to reduce these to three tricks if possible. Pressing this line of inquiry, we see that successful trump and club finesses offer the best opportunity, and we proceed to play the hand on that plan. Its success, of course, depends entirely on the adverse lie of cards.

Now let us suppose that because of a part score we have contracted for only two spades—eight tricks. With this radical change of objectives there must be an equally radical change of technique. Now, instead of counting losers and trying to reduce them to three, we will find the more direct method of counting winners effective.

We see that in top cards we have two trumps, one heart, two diamonds and one club—a total of six. Our only concern should be to win two additional tricks, and our only problem where to find them. In this connection we recognize the fact that a finesse is at best a 50-50 chance, and therefore we cast our eyes about for a surer plan.

● SO WE COME to the proper line of play: the cashing of dummy's ace and king of diamonds, the ruffing of a third round, entering dummy with the club ace, and leading the fourth diamond in the hope that East will not follow and that we can safely ruff with a low trump. If East does follow, which means that West will not, to avoid the danger of an overruff we discard a club and maneuver for a trump lead up to our tenace. At the worst we can always finesse against the trump queen if the lead comes through us.

To sum up, it is apt to point out that, as in a foot race, the pace must be gauged by the distance!

—o-o—

● QUESTION: Please give the correct bidding on the following North and South hand. Both sides vulnerable. East dealt and passed. As may be imagined, East and West never entered the bidding.

SOUTH	NORTH
♠KQJ65	♠A42
♥AK7	♥Q
♦732	♦AKQ5
♣A6	♣KJ973

Answer: The bidding should go as follows:

South	North
spade	3 clubs
spades	4 diamonds
4 no trumps	5 no trumps
7 spades

Having located the other two aces, and on the knowledge that North has two good suits, South correctly figures that his 4½ honor tricks should make a grand slam "cold."

Question: Is the following hand a good three-spade bid, first hand, not vulnerable, against vulnerable opponents?

♠KQJ97653, ♥—, ♦QJ108, ♣2

Answer: A better pre-emptive bid, from both offensive and defensive viewpoints, is four spades.

Fish will not stick to the frying pan if a teaspoon of salt is sprinkled in the pan before putting in the fish.

How GABLE Became a MOVIE STAR

The Actor's First Wife Tells of Clark's Early Struggles

By Josephine Gable

In this installment, Josephine Dillon Gable concludes her story as the ex-wife of Clark Gable.

NO! It is not all bitterness in the life of an ex-wife of a movie star. There is the contentment that comes from hard work—work that results in progress; there is the joy that comes from helping others to accomplish their hopes; and there is many a good laugh.

I try to see as many of those who apply to me for interviews as I can find time for. I feel that it is part of my duty as a native Californian to do what I can to help stop the steady stream of hopefuls that come here to crash the movies.

A goodly proportion of them are very large young men from various parts of the world, who either bear some resemblances to Clark or have been persuaded that they do.

Such boys have come to me from as far as England and Australia, Shanghai and France. Some with a smile like Gable's, some with his eyes, some with gleaming teeth, and some even have his famous ears—and they are all big, all eager, and all quite ignorant of the long job that success on the screen means. And they all think that the ex-wife coach can wave a magic wand.

The truth is that it is a handicap to resemble a star. To be of his same general type is a help, but not to really look like him.

Bruce Cabot was first sent to me because his agent thought he looked like Clark Gable. But I persuaded the agent to let him develop his own individuality, and his rise was rapid.

I often wonder what other ex-wives do who have no profession.

Most of us would be glad to forget, as much as it is possible to forget a marriage, and go on our way. But when—added to the misfortune of the broken marriage there is the misfortune of being constantly in the limelight because the former husband has become famous—is news—that is indeed, a "tough spot."

CLARK GABLE . . . the matinee idol of today.

Exaggerated, sentimental slush in "human interest" stories have presented me as a silly sentimental old woman mad about a sexy young man; as a shy, thwarted maiden school teacher hugging to her frigid heart the one gleam of love in her life; as a designing, calculating woman, determined to hold on at all costs to her famous ex-husband's name in order to fill her studio with "suckers."

And all an ex-wife like me can do is to go as quietly as possible about her business and make it as successful and as honest as possible. But it is much harder to meet the stupid and well-meaning chatter of casual acquaintances.

My students and friends rarely speak to me of Clark. But people who have seen my name or picture in stories about the "Great God Gable," say the most astonishing things.

In a hardware store the other day, where I was buying dishes for the new studio, I gave my address and name for delivery, and the clerk launched a flood of questions about Clark's recently publicized divorce. I left the store without completing the purchase. In a hairdressing shop while I was helplessly submerged in soapsuds, the operator burst forth with violent opinions of an ex-wife who could have been so mean to such a wonderful man as Gable; she knew a girl who knew him. A hotel clerk who started gossiping about the Gables, when I registered. The guests at a cocktail party who split into groups for the first wife, and I escaped through the pantry and went home. The often repeated: "Haven't I seen you somewhere? Oh, yes, you are Clark Gable's ex-wife, aren't you?" The small-titled foreign dinner partner who insisted on explaining the trouble between Mrs. and Mr. Gable and their financial settlement, until I turned for help to my neighbor.

And we ex-wives just smile and smile.

—o-o—

PROBABLY nothing of what I have told you would apply to the "stepup" marriages of Hollywood—the marriages that are made merely to advance a career or for benefit financially.

Mating in Hollywood is either of the "step-up" type, or because they happened to work on the same picture—or once in a while, because they happened to love each other.

All too often the real Hollywood marries to help itself along in its career, trying to step itself up in each marriage.

Imagine these conditions — and then imagine a man like Clark Gable—not in Hollywood, with its glories, its tinsel, its tremendous competition, its glorious successes and heartbreaking failures. But imagine him in a real home in a real home-town. Such a town as Cadiz, O.—a real town that has produced more than its quota of famous men. Such men as Fulton of steamboat fame or Gen. Custer, the romantic Indian War hero.

Imagine the big elm trees of such a town—the old and beautiful city hall in its square on the hill—imagine the fine sturdy people of secure and high ideals—their close groups of family relationships—fine friendships that last through life—imagine what marriage might mean in such a community. What a life Clark could have had there, what a marriage, and family—and probably peace and happiness.

Surely fame has its heavy costs!

I believe that in his heart Clark would have liked such a marriage. I believe that if his great talent for acting had not driven him through this long climb to recognition, he could have been a very happy and contented married man, there in his home town, among his own people.

But Clark didn't have that sort of marriage—or marriages! No—not fine secure home-town marriages—but, his were not "step-up marriages either—they were not typical Hollywood. At least ours was not. Ours was founded on mutual affection and mutual need of understanding. It was a good marriage.

Clark was never a victim of that common Hollywood belief that getting along is the result of knowing just the right people—and doing the right things—and being seen in the right places. He always knew that success came from delivering what the producer wants for the public—and delivering it a little better than the next fellow.

Often when we were talking about his chances for a career, he would say to me:

"Do I really know anything about acting?—Could I bring money into the box office because people like to see me act?—Could I make people laugh and cry and go home happier because I was in that show?"

That's why he does just those things today—because he wondered if he could—and then fitted himself to succeed. He was too busy preparing himself for his "job" to wonder who were the right "contacts."

Clark's and my ideals were to "deliver a good job"—"never mind who you know, learn your stuff and they will all know you"—"pick your friends for friendship's sake"—let your "contact" be like the trolley of a streetcar—activity that will give you enough energy to carry your load to success—not people to carry your load for you."

Clark used to say he would have a haberdashery store if he didn't make it acting. He has taken care of himself so many years—traveling for a men's clothing house—patroling oil tanks—driving an ambulance—selling automobiles. He would have been a success in any business.

We have a lot of "big-name" marriages here too. Ambitious young actresses marrying the sons of great names in order to reap the publicity.

—o-o—

SO you can readily see that these successive "set-up" marriages leave a lot of ex-wives around Hollywood. We really should have a club.

But has Hollywood no love?—No love marriages?

Of course—if by "Love" is meant confidence, companionship, the sharing of griefs and of triumphs, a home, a family unit, mutual affection and trustworthiness.

Yes, indeed—there are, thank the Lord, many instances of such love in Hollywood, among the top people and among the lowliest—and all along the ranks.

But this town witnesses the survival of a person far more often than the survival of a marriage. And the survivers in this town seem to all have a common quality —they have something the public wants. They did not survive through "contacts," they survived because they delivered something.

Many of us ex-wives belong on that list of survivers. We are there because we have battled our way up from the oblivion that divorce thrust us into, up into the sun of public friendliness, step by step. just because we delivered something the world wanted — not through contacts. The ex-wife of a famous man has no contacts.

But for myself, it is better to be the ex-wife of a man who has become a success, than to have to face a dreadful disappointment in your man's ability to deliver something valuable.

At least, one can look on and say, "I helped do that."

Day-Dreaming Does Not Get The Work Done

Do Noble Things, Not Dream Them, Was Advice of a Poet.

By Angelo Patri

THERE is something poetic about day-dreaming. The idea is associated with artists and poets who are supposed to do their best and most creative work in this state. A poet, Charles Kingsley, had something to say about it. "Do noble things, not dream them, all day long." He knew that any sort of a job was actual, hard work, no dreaming about it. One has to be wide awake to get anything done.

Dreaming children are the bane of the teacher's life. She sees the child, present in body, removing himself far off in mind, and it is his mind that she is trying to waken and set into action. She calls his name, but he does not hear until in exasperation she shouts it. Then he looks at her with vacant eyes, the eyes that see not, and she knows well that he has heard her with the ears that hear not. "Get to work, why don't you. Get to work instead of wasting your time dreaming."

The child forced into some semblance of activity takes up his pencil, looks about to get a hint of what he is supposed to do, fails to find any, makes a few idle scratches and, as soon as he feels that the teacher's eye is directed elsewhere, relapses into his dream state. What is to be done about it?

The teacher hates to tell the child's mother that he is a dead loss in the classroom, so she softens the blow by saying, "He is a dreamer." Mother is not so shocked by that poetic term, but she reproaches the child, scolds him, even punishes him, as the weeks pass and there is no change in the behavior of the dreamer. But he continues to dream.

When one has to deal with a child like this there is no time to be wasted in talking about him. He dreams to escape conditions that pain him. We have to find what those conditions are, and why they hurt him enough to drive him into an unreal world for respite. The teacher, the doctor, the family, all those who come into daily contact with him are engaged in the effort to discover why this child is retreating, running away from his life.

Begin with his physical being; have him examined to find any failure of function or adjustment. This is to be done by those who work with children in hospitals and clinics. It takes time and much patience, but it has to be done. Search his mental being for hidden troubles, troublesome questions for which the child finds no answer. Probe to find if there are things he wants to know and dares not ask about and answer him fully if there are such. Test his mental development and his achievement. If he is too high for his powers, or too low, regrade him. If he is in fear of any person, or any situation remove that fear either by taking him away from the person or place, or by clearing up the fear.

Day-dreaming is not a poetic accomplishment. It is a danger signal. It is to be promptly heeded if the child's mental and physical health are to be saved from disaster. It is to be corrected if the patient is to become a self-sustaining citizen.

come out of this section of the country and is unusual in that it has been organized and financed by the artists themselves. Fred Conway, James Turnbull, Oscar Thalinger, Joseph Vorst and Joe Jones formed the original committee.

—o-o—

THE GROSSMAN twins, Mary and Althea, are just back from Chicago where they attended meetings of the Central State Co-operative League. They've been boosting the consumers' co-operative movement here almost ever since they came home from Radcliffe. Helping get out literature to several thousand prospective joiners, seeing that the 175 members receive their share in the purchase rebates, and doing some of the actual marketing. They consider it encouraging evidence of the growth of the movement that some of the wholesalers have refused to sell to them directly. They're beginning to feel the competition.

Flowers Leaving Left Shoulders

MAYBE you've noticed that many of the debutantes are wearing their flowers tucked under their chins these days, instead of the traditional location on the left shoulder.

The neckline has become the focal point of costume accessories this season, what with jabots, bow ties, wing collars and what not.

And you'd be surprised what wonders a couple of carnations or a nosegay of field flowers (real or synthetic) will do for your costume if you fasten them just south of your chin.

Fresh flowers are always the most effective. But if you want something practical, then look over the displays of synthetic boutonnieres on the counters of your favorite department stores.

New Ideas for The Salad Course

IF SERVING chops, steak or cutlets, try a mushroom sauce for "good taste." To make it, saute your mushrooms, peeled and chopped, in a pan with a little cooking oil, seasoned with chopped garlic. Cook slowly for 10 minutes, add half cup finely-chopped chives. Pour over meat and serve.

Now we'll get on to the salad course and evolve a swell fruited French dressing, so good with a salad of chopped greens. Combine half cup salad oil, quarter cup vinegar, one and a half teaspoons salt and half teaspoon paprika. Beat well or shake in covered jar to form a French dressing. Add three-quarters of a cup mashed banana (two), one teaspoon lemon juice, two and a half teaspoons sugar and quarter teaspoon nutmeg. Mix thoroughly, chill and serve.

Chutney dressing is nice with avocado slices or orange or grapefruit salad. Mix three-quarters teaspoon salt, half teaspoon mustard, half teaspoon sugar and paprika. Add to six tablespoons oil, and then add half teaspoon onion juice and two tablespoons vinegar and stir until it thickens. Add three tablespoons chutney and beat thoroughly.

Spices Are The Life of Many Foods

POSSIBLY because spices are amongst the most ancient of the food delicacies, a good many cooks treat them like antiques.

More than one woman who insists on dated coffee and dated eggs, who fusses about the extra-special freshness of butter, and who is always sniffling at the fish and meat, has on her shelves spices that have stood there for ages. And, what is more, when she does use these spices she expects them to give a rich flavor and aroma to her cooking.

Of course, if the spices have been kept in tightly-covered containers they should retain their strength and body for months. But if exposed to the air for a period of time, or if the spice has been on the shelf for over a year, as is often the case, it is bound to have lost most of its value, as its delicate oils will have evaporated. So, for the best cooking results, use spices but see that they are fresh.

When buying your pepper, mace, allspice, cloves and such, buy small tins and use frequently, then there will be no chance of the spices going stale. Baking day offers a splendid opportunity of demonstrating the appetite appeal of spices. Here are some new recipes that owe much of their goodness to spice.

For a grand prune cake, sift two and a half cups of sifted cake flour, three-quarters of a teaspoon of baking powder and one teaspoon each of soda, cloves, allspice and cinnamon. Cream half cup butter, add one and a half cups of sugar gradually and cream together until light and fluffy. Add two well-beaten eggs and one cup of cooked prunes, coarsely cut. Then add the flour alternately with one cup sour milk or buttermilk, adding a small amount at the time and beating thoroughly. Bake in two greased nine-inch layer tins in a moderate oven from 25 to 30 minutes. Spread with caramel frosting.

If the youngsters won't eat their spinach despite the doings of the redoubtable Popeye, then the addition of nutmeg might do the trick.

LISTEN, WORLD!

By Elsie Robinson

TO YOU—if you have never lost one you loved by death—this article will have little meaning. You may imagine that you know what such loss means, but do not fool yourself. Until the stars have been torn from your sky and the heart from your bosom—until you have been drowned in that vast loneliness which lies like a black sea between the Here and the Hereafter—you cannot know what death means to the desolated living. You are not among the initiate. You cannot speak the new and dreadful language they have learned, nor can you follow the shadowy trail their feet must tread.

For you who have not known heartbreak by death this article has, happily, no significance. I write to those who have—as I have—gone down into the grave and come back again. And to you I say—

I DO NOT BELIEVE IN DEATH.

I do not believe that life can be destroyed, nor that it ever ceases, or is even interrupted.

It is obvious that this physical body is—and must be—outgrown. But this does not happen merely in the phenomenon we call Death. It happens many times in our active life.

You are not the child you were at 7, nor the youth you were at 17. Those young bodies disappeared long since. They are as dead—as completely finished—as any mummy. And you, as you stand today, are as new as any angel—as released from the old body which once you inhabited, which long since you cast off because it grew too small or weak for you.

There is nothing mysterious or mystic about these statements. They are simple facts which any child in grammar school must learn. And if we would follow them through to their logical conclusion, we would have been released long since from our fear of death. But we have never dared follow these facts through—just as, for tortured ages, we never dared follow other facts through.

● TIME WAS when men accepted the plague as a Divine visitation — A cross from God—whose hideous mystery must never be probed. So the plague took its toll of millions. Then at last a few brave men dared to doubt that such a horror was the Will of God. Dared to rebel. Dared to question and experiment. And today the plague is a nightmare that has passed.

And once men endured tragic barriers of time and space—lived walled and fettered by loneliness and silence which seemed inevitable. Today the silence is gone and the space is shattered. Across the heavens wing the airplanes. Along the wave lengths ride song and human voice.

There is no corner in the universe—nor any niche in his mental domain—which man dare not explore. SAVE ONE. The terrible taboo of Death still stands as it stood in our jungle days. And, as we did in our jungle days, we bow before it — offer as sacrifice our broken, bleeding hearts, and wail "It is the Will of God."

But I who believe in God and worship Him—I cannot, I will not believe that bereavement by death is the will of God, any more than the plague was the will of God, or the seemingly impenetrable walls of time and space.

● I BELIEVE that the horror and heartbreak of death are the products of man's own fear and ignorance, and that we will be freed of them when we are brave enough to dare to doubt—to dare to rebel—when we dare to believe as much in Life as now we believe in Death.

The grave does not matter. The dead body does not matter, any more than your cast off seven-year-old body matters. Life is all that matters. And Life, I believe, passes triumphantly through the shadowy portal of the grave—waits, shining and victorious, in a new and freer form to speak to us again WHEN AND IF WE HAVE THE COURAGE TO CALL.

Tri-Color Themes

Those who believe in the new fashion rule that every costume should display three bright shades are having some difficulty in deciding upon the three to ally and how to arrange them.

Flower tones seem the best choice, especially when they represent three different shades of the same flower family. The dahlia and the zinnia are two that serve as guides, introducing alliances of the reds and blues that are most effective.

Hat bands which display three different tones are appearing as a feature of the millinery mode. Some of these bands are quite tailored and others are more feminine. The latter type is illustrated best by chiffon that is most flattering whether it adorns straw or felt. Scarfs banded with three tones and belts that have contrasting sections also are indicative of this decorative trend in summer fashions.

THIRTY-THREE principals already have been engaged for the 1936 season of Municipal Opera in Forest Park and other widely known performers are being sought for the productions, the Municipal Theater Association stated last night in announcing it would continue the policy, begun last season, of obtaining principals only for specific roles.

Of those under contract, 19 will be new to Municipal Opera audiences. Among them are Vivienne Segal, stage, screen and radio star, and Helen Gleason, Metropolitan Opera soprano.

Other newcomers will be Billy House, comedian; Armida, Mexican singer and dancer; Eddie Garr, singing and dancing comedian; June O'Dea, singer and dancer, and in private life, wife of lefty Gomez, New York Yankee pitcher; Ray Middleton, stage and opera star; Billy Rayes, English comedian and nephew of the Queen of Italy; Janet Reade, stage and screen comedienne; Albert Mahler, American tenor; Noel Francis, screen and stage star; Bertram Peacock, baritone; Zama Cunningham, singer and actress; Nina Olivette and Helene Denizon, engaged for special dance features, and Rosie Moran, dancing comedienne; Inez Harvot, prima donna, and June Havoc, singer, engaged for the entire season. The dance team of Stuart and Lea also has been engaged.

Favorites of other seasons who will return this year include Guy Robertson, who will take the leading male roles in "The Three Musketeers" and "The Merry Widow"; Georgie Price, who will appear in "The Three Musketeers," "Kid Boots" and "The Red Mill"; and Gil Lamb, Joseph Macaulay, Ruby Mercer, Audrey Christie, Edward Nell Jr., Detmar Poppen, John Clarke, John Cherry and Earle McVeigh.

Miss Segal will appear in the first three productions—"Kid Boots," "The Three Musketeers," in which she created the role of Constance, and "No, No, Nanette."

—o-o—

OUTSTANDING both as a singer and an actress, she has starred in stage presentations of "The Blue Paradise," "My Lady's Gloves," "O, Lady, Lady," "Tangerine," "The Yankee Princess," "Ziegfeld's Follies of 1924," "Castles in the Air," "The Three Musketeers," "Music in the Air."

She was featured in the motion pictures, "Song of the West," "The Bride of the Regiment," "Golden Dawn," "Viennese Nights," and "The Cat and the Fiddle." For the last year she has been singing on a Sunday night radio program.

Miss Gleason will sing the roles of Arline in "The Bohemian Girl," and Zonia in "The Merry Widow." A native of New York, she made her debut at the Metropolitan Opera three years ago when she was in her early twenties. Her debut in grand opera had been in "Andrea Chenier" at the La Scala opera house in Italy.

The other newcomers, engaged for particular roles, will make their appearances as follows: House in "No, No, Nanette"; Armida, "Sons o'Guns" and "Oh Boy"; Eddie Garr, "Sons o'Guns," "Oh Boy" and "Connecticut Yankee"; Miss O'Dea and Middleton, "Kid Boots," "Three Musketeers" and "Sons o'Guns"; Rayes, "No, No, Nanette," "Sons o'Guns" and "Oh Boy"; Miss Reade, "Kid Boots" and "No, No Nanette"; Mahler, "Three Musketeers," "The Bohemian Girl," "The Merry Widow," "The New Moon" and "Glamorous Night"; Miss Francis, "Three Musketeers," "Oh, Boy," and "Sons o' Guns"; Peacock, "Oh Boy," "Merry Widow" and "Glamorous Night"; Miss Cunningham, "The Bohemian Girl," "The Red Mill" and "Oh Boy."

The chorus of 92 will be selected at tryouts beginning tomorrow at 10 a. m. at the American Theater. Tomorrow's tryouts will be for girls and the men will be chosen Tuesday. The tryouts will be in charge of Richard Berger, casting director; Zeke Colvan, general stage director; George Hirst, general musical director, and Marjery Fielding, dance director.

With season reservations totaling nearly $90,000, the Municipal Theater Association still is accepting reservations at its office, 1876 Arcade Building, where charts show seats available. Season subscribers who have received assignment of seats must pay for them by next Friday.

Piano Care

The piano is often the most neglected article in the house. All pianos should be tuned regularly—once a quarter if possible. Never stand a piano flat against a wall; it affects the tone. If it happens to be an outside wall, there is the added danger of dampness. On the other hand, the piano must not be too near a fire; overheating is just as injurious. Keep the keys carefully dusted and leave the lid open on warm days.

Black Suede

To remove shine from back suede shoes, dab with a muslin pad moistened with benzine to remove the greasinesr acquired in wear. When the spirit has evaporated and the shoes are perfectly dry, rub with fine sandpaper or a wire brush to restore the matt surface to the leather.

Rice as Base Of Palatable One-Dish Meal

May Be Combined to Good Advantage With Eggs, Fish, Meat or Cheese.

By Alice Lynn Barry

RICE combined with meat, fish, eggs or cheese forms a splendid one-dish meal. A famous dish of this type is the Creole jambalaya and is the pride of the culinary South.

Creole cooks like to use fresh shrimps and oysters with a bit of ham, but a very satisfactory dish can be made with the canned shrimps and oysters if properly flavored and served nice and hot. With Jambalaya rice, one could serve some relishes, celery, olives, some French bread, a pie and coffee and have a marvelous meal. And so, ladies, we give you Jambalaya.

First is Jambalaya rice. Make a roux of one tablespoon lard and same amount of flour. Chop one slice of ham, three-quarters of a pound to a pound in weight, also add one and a half cups canned tomatoes and one can shrimps and cook for a few minutes. Add one onion, thyme, one bud garlic one green pepper, parsley, salt, pepper, tobasco, Worcestershire sauce, red pepper and four cups of water. Let simmer for about 10 minutes. Add one cup rice and boil until rice is done—about 20 minutes. Care should be taken not to stir the mixture or the rice wil be gummy. However, it is necessary to lift the mixture with a fork from the bottom of the pot occasionally to keep the rice from burning. Keep the vessel covered while cooking.

For French Jambalaya, scald one pound shrimps and peel. Scald one dozen oysters. Place two tablespoons lard in large pot, preferably large black iron pot, and allow to melt and become hot. Fry the shrimps and oysters in lard. When fried, throw in one large onion cut fine and allow it to fry until yellow, being sure it does not burn. Add one cup highly seasoned tomato sauce and allow to fry very little. Wash two cups of rice and allow to fry until it becomes coated. Add one teaspoon salt, dash of pepper and one small piece of red pepper. Mix thoroughly and add three cups of water. Allow to cook over slow fire for half hour. Be sure to cover. Serve in large tureen or bowl.

For the third Jambalaya cut one pound of pork into one-inch squares Clean ad chop fine three onions. Brown the onions and the pork in two tablespoons lard for five minutes. Stir well. Add one pound ham and quarter pound Vienna sausage. Add one bay leaf, a sprig of parsley, two cloves and half teaspoon salt, and cook until the meat is well browned. Add two quarts of hot meat stock or water. Cook for 10 minutes. Wash well one pound of rice. Add slowly to the boiling meat mixture. Cook over moderate heat until meat and rice are cooked. Stir carefully to prevent burning. Add dash of cayenne quarter teaspoon tobasco sauce and a tablespoon of chili sauce. Serv very hot in bowls.

Another European Conflict Would Be a War Without Hope, Says Historian Ferrero

Torrents of Blood Would Be Shed to No Purpose, He Declares, Hence the Thing Is Still Incredible.

By GUGLIELMO FERRERO,
Noted Italian Historian.

GENEVA, May 2.

EVERYONE is afraid of war—France and England as well as Germany. That is the underlying reason for the present alarming crisis in Europe.

Hitler himself has done nothing but offer peace to France, England, Europe, the world, ever since he remilitarized the left bank of the Rhine.

The French newspapers declare that it is hypocrisy; but even if they were right, this hypocrisy would prove to what an extent the possibility of war alarms Germany.

The entire continent of Europe is in frantic terror of war. Why is this? Is it because it would be a war of universal destruction carried on with every means—against soldiers and civilians, men and women, old people and children, living beings and material objects?

Yes, certainly man today is reduced to trembling before the instruments of destruction he has invented. But there is another, deeper reason.

Everyone knows now that if war were to break out, it would be a useless war. Everyone knows that it would be a frightful waste of lives and property which would have only one result: To impoverish the world still more and render it more barbarous.

Europe's Tragedy.

This is the real tragedy of Europe: The most terrible tragedy of its whole history.

The war of 1914 was frightful. But both sides fought in the belief that it would resolve a situation which has become intolerable, and that afterward the world would be able to begin a new life. The sacrifices of the war were the price of liberation. The hope of such liberation sustained the peoples' courage for four years.

This hope was cruelly and completely disappointed. All the ills from which Europe suffered before 1914 have been aggravated: The enormous size of armies, the disorder of finances, the oppression of the individual by the State, the abuses of protection, nationalism with the hatred and mistrust it engenders, the rivalries between States and peoples over the international plan, the struggles between classes and races within the states.

To these aggravated ills new ills have been added; improvishment, unemployment, the general insecurity of international relations, the spiritual disorder in the heart of each state, the despotism which has reduced a large number of peoples to a condition of slavery.

"War Without Hope."

Such disillusion has been so great that it has even communicated itself to the new generation, born during the war.

If a general war were to occur in Europe tomorrow, the worst part of it would be that among all peoples, the young and the old, would be obliged to fight, knowing beforehand that their sacrifices would only serve to augment the general misery and disorder of the world. It would be a war without hope. To fight without hope is even more terrible than to fight with the help of poison gas.

One would say that we had returned to primitive times. To interest a people in a war, there must be the hope of conquering a vast, almost empty country, after the press has filled it with seductive chimeras. Space still attracts when imagination peoples it with dreams.

The Italian Government has succeeded in interesting a portion of the people in the Ethiopian war, because it has led them to believe that in Ethiopia immense riches are hidden.

It has been stated that the Nazi Government is planning a great war of expansion in Russia. I do not know if this is true; but it might be possible to interest the German people in such a war. There are still vast half-empty spaces in Eastern Europe.

Panic Over Europe.

But the general war of which Europe is in terror would be a political war, fought in Central and Western Europe, where the population is dense and the nations are impenetrable one to another.

In this part of Europe, the peoples can only dispute, at the price of torrents of blood, over small pieces of territory; a war there becomes atrocious and exhausting, just because its aims are of minimum importance.

That is why I believe that this terrible war, so dreaded by everyone, will not take place. I may be mistaken; but it seems to me that neither England, France nor Germany will dare to involve their peoples in a war whose only real reason would be reciprocal fear—a war without hope, without even a chimeric aim such as were those of the World War.

The entire world appears to have lost its head. In all the countries of Europe those who can are buying gold and preparing refuges to shelter them from the bombs and gas which would transform Europe into a desert. Panic reigns supreme.

Danger in Small Powers.

All the same, I still feel optimistic up to a certain point. No, the general war will not break out. Unless

I have already stated, in a previous article, that Japan is a mystery. But amid the uneasiness of these troubled and anxious months, a new danger seems to be arising. Urged by Italy, Austria has re-established conscription and has begun to rearm. It is said Hungary will follow her example, and the approaching restoration of the Hapsburgs is announced. This is probably an exaggeration or an anticipation.

But Yugoslavia, Rumania and Czechoslovakia are becoming agitated and beginning to protest. The newspapers are already repeating the old menace that the Hapsburgs mean war.

I do not wish to exaggerate the danger. But during these last weeks I have considered the strange part small powers have always played in the history of Europe.

The nineteenth century greatly reduced the importance held by the small states before the French Revolution, and placed them all in a wholly subordinate position.

But many of the great conflicts between the great powers of the nineteenth century were provoked by the small powers. The interplay of influences and interests in Europe is so arranged that small subordinate powers have at certain decisive moments held in their hands the fate of the great powers and of the whole continent. It must not be forgotten that the World War began in Serbia, a small Balkan power.

At this moment, as always, when casting one's eye over Europe, one must not only consider the more or less disabled giants who seem to dominate it, but also the small powers. They might once more play a decisive part, seeing the manifest incapacity of France and England to give a wise and coherent lead.

For that is the obscure point.

If They Violate Letter of Strict Statute Out They Go

NO LOOPHOLES in the LAW FOR ALIENS

Two Who Expounded Philosophical Anarchy to Be Deported

In Italy They Would Be Liable to 20 Years' Imprisonment Under One of Mussolini's Laws, So Are Ordered to "Country of Their Choice"—If They Can Get Passports.

One Has Been Resident of United States 30 Years, Other 14—Both They and German Under Similar Sentence, Free on $1000 Bond Pending Decision on Appeal.

"AS a tip, will state that I understand the Italian consul is very much interested in the deportation of these aliens, and would be only too glad to issue passports for their return to Italy."

By PAUL Y. ANDERSON,
A Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, May 2.

THE precarious status which aliens occupy under the statute governing them in this country finds a grim illustration in the present predicament of Vincenzo Ferrero and Dominic Sallitto, former keepers of an obscure spaghetti parlor in Oakland, Cal. The cases have aroused widespread interest throughout the country.

These men who are described by a high immigration official as "harmless philosophical windbags," made the mistake of toying, in their odd moments, with the doctrines of anarchy. As a result of riding this hobby publicly they are under sentence of deportation to Italy, where they will be subject to imprisonment of 20 years under one of the special laws enacted by Mussolini to safeguard his dictatorship. Ferrero has been in the United States more than 30 years, and Sallitto has been here 14. Neither had ever been arrested before. Sallitto has a three-year-old daughter by an American wife, now dead, and the prospective fate of the child is one of the human aspects of the case.

Government Not Menaced But the Law Is the Law.

Insofar as the writer has been able to ascertain by diligent inquiry in official circles, no one seriously contends or has contended that either of the men constitutes a threat to the peace of society or the stability of the government. They might bore anyone who heard them expound their ideas, but nobody has been compelled to listen.

Their plight is due, first, to the drastic clauses written into the immigration law in 1920, largely as a result of former Attorney-General Mitchell Palmer's notorious "Red Hunt;" and second, to a "Red-baiting" campaign which the Hearst newspapers were waging on the Pacific Coast early in 1934. Apparently the only power which can save them now is the United States Supreme Court, and that, considered in the light of the law and the precedents, is a slender hope.

The law provides explicitly for the exclusion from the United States of 'all aliens who are found to be anarchists." It also provides in the most sweeping terms for the exclusion of all aliens who believe in, or advocate, the overthrow of the Government by force or violence, or who are affiliated with any organization which advises or teaches opposition to organized government, or who publish, circulate, or distribute any written or printed matter advising, teaching or advocating opposition to organized government, or the overthrow by force or violence of the Government of the United States or of all forms of law.

The enforcement of this status is made an administrative function of the Department of Labor, with a very limited power of review being reserved to the Federal Courts.

Philosophical Anarchists Advertised Discussion.

In San Francisco a few philosophical anarchists had got together and organized what the called the International Group. On March 25, 1934, it advertised a discussion of the question, "Whether Marinus Van Der Lubbe was an outstanding revolutionist, or a spy and agent of the Nazis." Van Der Lubbe was the eccentric Dutchman who had been executed for alleged complicity in the firing of the German Reichstag building.

The anarchist viewpoint was to be presented by Marcus Graham, an alien from Canada, who published a paper called "Man" and who rented space for a writing table and mail box on the premises where Ferrero and Sallitto operated their restaurant. The Socialist and Communist parties were invited to send speakers, but ignored the invitation, and Graham had the discussion all to himself. Sallitto attended, and, in the absence of the regular presiding officer, substituted for him, and introduced Graham.

> "LET it be assumed . . . . that Jefferson and Lincoln advocated the use of force or violence in overthrowing the government of the United States; or . . . . that a citizen of the United States today advocates that course. That would not help the relator in the slightest. He is an alien. That makes the difference under our law . . . . he is within our gates on sufferance only . . . . in its wisdom, Congress has prohibited aliens from doing what (he) suggests was done by two great Americans.
> "The Congress prescribed that if an alien, while occupying a guest's status in this country, violates the prohibitions he shall be deported. On the other hand, it has not provided, and perhaps is without constitutional power to provide, that an American citizen who does the same thing shall be deported. It is because the law governing who shall be deported discriminates in this way between aliens and citizens that the attempt of an alien to justify his conduct by pointing to what a citizen is allowed to do is without force."—Statement from the bench by Federal Judge Francis G. Caffey.

News of the meeting in all likelihood would have remained a profound secret to the world outside this little circle, but for the fact that the Hearst papers were screaming for action against the "Reds." Some one in authority in the local immigration office deemed the time propitious, if not urgent, to "catch a radical," and, accordingly, Inspector Patrick J. Farrelly, was detailed to cover the advertised meeting of the International group.

He took no notes, and testified from memory five weeks later. He said that Sallitto addressed the gathering as "comrades," and used such phrases as "We anarchists," and "We members of the International Group." He also quoted Sallitto as remarking that "Individual action would do more good to redress the wrongs of the people, than mass action by any organized group like the Communists." Sallitto, he said, announced that copies of "Man" were on sale in the hall.

As an upshot of Inspector Farrelly's presence at the meeting, Inspector E. C. Benson a few days later raided the spaghetti parlor, where he found copies of "Man" and mail addressed to Graham at that address. The raid was made without a warrant, but Ferrerro and Sallitto, seeing a badge and knowing nothing about the law of search and seizure, did not protest. Benson also visited Ferrero's living quarters, where he made the discovery that Ferrero prior to 1932, had published a paper called "L' Emancipazione" (The Freedom) of which he found copies.

Quotations From Papers Seized During Raid.

The copies of "Man" found in the restaurant contained such characteristically bombastic statements as the following: "The wronged and exploited can only end their misery when they begin to realize that no power on earth except themselves is capable of bringing this about. To achieve this, the State must die, Anarchism is the only social school which will entirely disregard the State instead of reinforcing it, as the Socialists and Communists do, in order to destroy it, the anarchists aim their attack at the very foundation of the State."

The confiscated copies of "L' Emancipazione" disclosed that Ferrero, during his brief editorship, had aspired to flights of rhetoric even more lyrical, albeit at times not wholly clear in meaning. For example: "If there be an ideal which is fought against, persecuted, and vilely caluminated by all governments, churches, and by all our adversaries, Catholic to Communistic, it is the ideal of unvanquished and invincible anarchy, the people's redeemer."

The view that the only damage done by such publications would be that suffered by the King's English, would fail to take into account the line in the exclusion law—"all aliens who are found to be anarchists." Ferrero and Sallitto soon discovered that they were in real trouble.

On the basis of the inspector's reports, Ferrero was arrested on April 12: Ferrero was charged with being unlawfully in the United States "in that he writes, publishes, or causes to be written or published, or knowingly circulates, distributes, publishes or displays, or has in his possession for the purpose of circulation, distribution or display, written or printed matter advising, advocating or teaching the overthrow of the Government of the United States or all forms of law."

Sallitto was charged with having forfeited his right to remain in the country "in that he is a member of an organization, association, society or group that believes in, advises, advocates and teaches the overthrow by force and violence of the Government of the United States and all forms of law."

The cases were set down for hearing, and here is encountered a curious phase of procedure in deportation proceedings. Under previous administrations, it has been a common practice for an inspector who made an arrest and furnished the evidence, also to conduct the hearing. Thus, he was prosecuting witness, prosecutor and judge at the same time, with the qualification that his findings were always subject to review by the Secretary of Labor. As a matter of fact, they were almost invariably approved.

Same Man Prosecuting Witness as Well as Judge.

Soon after Col. Daniel W. MacCormack was made Commissioner of Immigration and Naturalization in 1933, he issued an order that "wherever practicable," the formal hearing be conducted by a different inspector than the one who made the original investigation. Apparently this was not "practicable" in Sallitto's case, however, for Inspector Benson who had ordered the raid assisted in conducting the formal hearing. He actually alternated between the witness stand and the presiding chair. He also signed the paper recommendation that Sallitto be deported.

Although defendants in such cases are permitted to have counsel, with the right to cross-examine Government witnesses, an official who has participated in many such cases told the writer that the defendants usually convict themselves, through their ineptness, sullenness, fright or unfamiliarity with the law. In other instances, because of fear or on the advice of counsel, they decline to testify, and that mitigates against them. The cases of Ferrero and Sallitto illustrate both types.

Excerpts From Testimony Given by Ferrero.

Ferrero elected to testify and the following is an excerpt from his testimony:

Q. Do you believe in anarchy? A. No. I don't want to answer yes or no that is my personal business. I will not answer the question yes or no.

Q. Did you ever publish a paper devoted to the teachings of the philosophy of anarchy? A. I did.

Q. What paper? A. L'Emancipazione.

Q. Was the philosophy of anarchy as taught in L'Emancipazione the same as is now being taught in the periodical "Man?" A. I can't say to that.

Q. Are you willing to affirm or deny the allegation that you are an anarchist? A. I don't want to talk.

Ferrero Apparently Technically Guilty.

Sallitto, on the other hand, elected not to take the stand, but presented a copy of his passport to show that he had entered this country legally. Attorneys for both men filed briefs in their behalf.

In addition to the testimony of Farrelly

Profits of Busses Make Up Losses Of Street Cars in Combination Transportation System of City

No Present Prospect of "Reorganization" of P. S. Co.—Alternatives Seem to Be Municipal Ownership or Indefinite Receivership.

FEDERAL JUDGE CHARLES B. DAVIS, whose court has jurisdiction in the present receivership of the St. Louis Public Service Co., said in answer to a query by a Post-Dispatch reporter a few days ago that there is no immediate prospect of termination of the bankruptcy proceeding, now in its fourth year.

Although a tentative reorganization plan for the company, operator of the street railway and bus system, has been broached among interested creditors, it has not been submitted to the court and there are numerous obstacles to be overcome before it could meet legal requirements for consideration. Seemingly the company's alternatives are municipal ownership and operation or indefinite receivership.

Incidentally, the present receivership is in fact a kind of public operation, since entire control of all of the facilities of the company is in the hands of the Federal Court, a public institution, and administration is by a trustee, Henry W. Kiel, who served 12 years as Mayor of St. Louis and has had years of experience in other forms of public service.

First Profit in 5 Years.

Significent aspects of the administration of Trustee Kiel are the decided shift toward bus service as a substitute for street cars, and the improvement in the financial status of the business. The profit earned by the busses in the first quarter of this year was sufficient to overcome the losses of the street cars and give the consolidated business a net profit for the first time in more than five years.

The net income, or profit, of the whole system for the first quarter was $47,745 after pro rata deductions were made for interest, taxes, depreciation and all operating expenses. The street car part of the business, however, had a net loss of $121,655, and the fact that the system as a whole enjoyed a profit was due to net income of $169,400 from the bus part of the business.

For the calendar year 1935, the whole system had a net loss of $546,209 despite a net profit of $263,771 earned by the People's Motor Bus Co., a wholly-owned subsidiary.

For the 12 months ending with March of this year the net loss from street car operation was $881,971, but the busses, those of the People's Co., and a smaller number owned by the Public Service Co., had a net profit of $474,189, which reduced the loss of the system to $407,782.

More Busses, Fewer Trolleys.

These and other facts show that the bus part of the transportation system is the profitable part, and seemingly justify the policy which Kiel inaugurated as trustee soon after he took charge of changing over as rapidly as possible to bus service.

Two years ago, soon after the People's Motor Bus Co. was taken over by the trustee and made a part of the unified system, the busses were hauling 17.2 per cent of the fare-paying passengers. In the first quarter of this year they were hauling 23.4 per cent. And this 23.4 per cent of the business was producing enough profit to more than offset a substantial loss by the street car part of the business.

The average number of busses operated daily, except Saturdays and Sundays, for the first quarter of this year was 361; two years ago it was 276. The average number of street cars was 766 for the latest quarter and two years ago it was 858.

Since the first of this year the trustee has purchased 46 new busses. With these the unified system will have 450 busses, compared with 298 when the trustee acquired the People's bus system in November, 1933.

The trustees's tentative plans for improvement of the service would require the addition of about 200 busses in the near future and other additions from time to time as earnings were sufficient to pay for them.

For the 12 months ending with March this year the total operating revenue of the transportation system was $13,442,348. The street cars produced $10,285,643 and the busses $3,156,705. The bus part was 23.4 per cent.

More Passengers Carried.

Since the first of the year the system has shown an appreciable increase in number of passengers carried, as compared with a year ago. For the first quarter of this year the fares collected were 30,470,887, an increase of 8 per cent over the number in the corresponding period a year earlier, which was 28,128,011. Bus fares, however, increased 18.2 per cent, being 9,321,019 in the latest quarter and 7,881,336 a year earlier. The average number of busses operated increased from 307 to 361 and the number of street cars was practically unchanged, being 766 this year and 761 a year ago.

Under the administration of Trustee Kiel a substantial reduction was made in the "per mile" operating cost of both busses and street cars. The operating cost of street cars for each "revenue mile" in 1932 was approximately 30.6 cents; in 1934 it was 27.3 cents. The largest savings were in cost of "injuries and damages," reduced two cents a mile, from 4.2 to 2.2 cents, and general overhead, reduced from 2.2 to 1.5 cents.

Operating costs of busses "per mile" was reduced from 21.2 cents in 1932 to 17.5 cents in 1934, the greater part of the reduction being in "injuries and damages," and general overhead, as in the case of street cars. The unification of operation of the People's busses with the street cars made possible a material reduction in managerial cost.

History of Receivership.

The present receivership of the Public Service Co. began April 15, 1933. It was technically changed on June 15, 1934, to a trusteeship, under the amended corporate bankruptcy law designed to facilitate reorganizations. The change was made on an application filed by the corporation seeking to reorganize. Receiver Kiel was appointed trustee. So far as administration was concerned the company remained practically in the status of receivership.

Several months ago Judge Davis suggested in a memorandum that efforts should be made to expedite reorganization. When interviewed by the Post-Dispatch he said no plan has been submitted to the court, but a tentative plan has been under discussion by groups of creditors. To effect reorganization under the amended bankruptcy act, the plan adopted must have the approval of two-thirds of the creditors, in amount, in each class, and as the interests of various classes of creditors conflict in many respects, the obtaining of this approval is the greatest difficulty in the way of reorganization.

Conflicting Interests.

The United Railways first mortgage bondholders are the class of creditors strategically most powerful. They are in a position to bring about foreclosure sale of the property, which would mean the wiping out of stockholders and other creditors. A small

The Federal Aid Disease.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

WHEN men become possessed of political power, though by democratic methods, the spirit of paternalism seems to possess them; they become obsessed with the desire to bestow favors upon their constituency, and though the bestowal of said favors be at the expense of the public revenues, the said constituency is ever ready and willing to accept the "gift," with no questions asked.

Simply defined, this is Uncle Sam, by various schemes of taxation taking our money out of one pocket and, by diverse means of distribution, putting a part of it back in the other pocket. Transferring our money from one pocket to the other might be regarded as innocent pastime except for the fact that the taxpayer bears the expense of exchange, "goin' and comin'." The state ofttimes, in order to play the delusive game of 50-50 with the parent Government, exacts more from its taxpayers than they may well afford. In wisdom, we are admonished that a gift perverts the judgment. Certainly for every dollar that the State receives in the way of Federal aid, it surrenders to the parent Government, consciously or unconsciously, its vested right in local self-government. How could any emergency of human needs exist to justify such jeopardy of our blood-bought liberties?

The Federal aid extended to isolated communities, victims of unexpected and unavoidable catastrophes, who locally are unable to cope with the calamity, is not concerned in this controversy. But the kind under discussion is the old-time kind that should not be allowed to cause the decay and death of this great popular Government.

For Those Who Would Walk.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

SINCE there are still quite a few of us who enjoy walking or bicycling occasionally in order to get some exercise, I think we should be shown as much consideration as those who are forever riding in automobiles. I can't understand why the Zoo should be the only spot where one can enjoy a walk free from the noise and danger of automobiles; it seems to me that on Sundays, at least, there could be certain sections of the parks where cars would be prohibited.

Every time I cross the street, I feel like a mouse dodging a number of cats. The installation of a few more stop-and-go signs would work miracles. The intersection at Delmar and Hamilton is a good example of what I am talking about, and there are others.

From my observation, people are gradually losing the use of their legs because walking is so unpleasant.

Resents Landon Indorsement.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

THE indorsement of Alf Landon by the politicians who controlled the Missouri Republican convention is a mark of disgrace. I am no longer in doubt that the Republican party is one of silk stockings, wealth and reaction.

We Republican voters will not stomach any Landon who is the recognized candidate of William Randolph Hearst. How can they who pretend to love the Republican party believe that this man, who balanced the Kansas budget by taking it out of the hides of the common people, can beat Franklin Roosevelt? As much a disappointment as is this Democrat, he is by far a better man than the Kansas Little Boy Blue of the reactionaries.

If the G. O. P. is to win, it must nominate a liberal like Borah or Vandenberg. It must convince the American people it is no longer the tool of Wall Street and special interests. If it does not do this, we can expect Roosevelt to plow it under, also.

Beat the reactionary Old Guard—nominate a liberal who has the respect of the American people and our party will return to power.

Nineteen Years After.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

AN event of unusual significance occurred on Monday, April 6, when Congressman Ernest Lundeen of Minnesota (one of the 50 Congressmen who with six Senators voted against our entry into the war) called upon Congress to honor their great leader, the immortal Robert M. La Follette, master statesman during 50 years of American politics.

Nineteen years after that memorable day, the world has not yet learned the lesson of co-operation in an effort to bring about better understanding among nations, and that of building up the only safeguards of peace by disarming.

Distrust among statesmen is used as a pretext for keeping nations on a war footing, when instead their attention should be directed to internal troubles and to devising means for the economic betterment of their constituents.

Peace with justice and a proper regard for the rights of others has done much to make America great. War rarely settles issues. It leaves nations poorer even when victorious.

RADIO AND DEMOCRACY.

The Founding Fathers knew history. They builded wisely against the mistakes of the past. Against the scientific wonders that were to come, they could not provide. Among the things they couldn't foresee was the radio. We of today cannot measure its possibilities. Since its appearance, we have all been speculating as to what it would develop into when it reached maturity. That it was bound to be a factor in politics, particularly in presidential campaigns, was, of course, obvious. Its influence, steadily and swiftly growing, has not been restricted to party battles for power. This Olympian means of communication has become a continuous force in public affairs. Science, we are told, "has provided the world with an appliance that is ideal for the purpose of destroying representative government."

Such is radio as seen by Thomas F. Woodlock, whose judgment necessarily commands respect. The country knows Mr. Woodlock as a publicist, widely experienced in financial affairs, also in the service of the Government as a member of the Interstate Commerce Commission, a profound student who has watched Wall Street for years from a ringside seat, an observer of the whole scene, whose conclusions are the product of information.

His article in Barron's Financial Weekly, which the Post-Dispatch reprinted Tuesday, discussed the danger to our institutions inherent in the radio and proposed a remedy. There was no trace of political or personal bias in it. No reader could tell from the context whether the author was a Republican or a Democrat. In its serene detachment from the rancorous party ferment of the hour, it could have been written by the man from Mars. The facts, about which there can be no debate, were stated in conversational tone, along with their unavoidable inferences. In that spirit, the phenomena of the times, at home and abroad, were reviewed. What can happen elsewhere can happen here, Mr. Woodlock submits. Indeed, it has happened here. That the late Huey Long had made himself dictator of Louisiana is a disconcerting fact which can neither be laughed off nor wept off. It were impossible without the radio.

Here is an instrumentality that invokes "mass emotion," that sets up a "direct democracy," in contrast with the design of our "representative democracy," to have the law express "public opinion."

> The constitutional provisions for election of President and Vice-President (Mr. Woodlock writes), together with the bicameral form of legislature, with the careful division of functions, were all machinery for filtering and refrigerating mass emotion, and out of it distilling the will of the people.

All these tempering, refining processes are swept away when a person of extraordinary force and persuasiveness can, in effect, buttonhole every citizen, play upon his grievances and cupidity, take him up on a high mountain and show him the kingdoms of the earth. Truly, it is something new under the sun. This condition, we are told, "inevitably tends to vast power in a leader—a single individual. No mass movement has ever for long worked through a group, or a committee, much less through a parliament; it always ends in a man."

Looking at Washington, the ascendancy of the executive over the legislative branch in the present administration is, Mr. Woodlock says, "without peacetime parallel in our history." With the motive or the wisdom of the enactments the discussion is not concerned. The point is that "the President did give the orders and that the legislators did obey them." We are reminded, too, that a President, after the brief "honeymoon" following his inaugural, is a candidate for re-election and that ambition colors practically all his first term. Further, the members of the House are almost continuously under the shadow of election necessities. Certainly the second year of their two-year incumbency is pointed directly at the November polls.

Mr. Woodlock would have the presidency a one-term office, extended, however, to six or seven years. That would deliver the executive personally from the political temptation of the present circumstances. The writer would have members of the House elected for four years, in the hope of attracting a better quality of aspirants. A constitutional amendment would, of course, be necessary, but, citing the repeal of the eighteenth amendment in nine months, the change, he argues, could quickly be made if public opinion wants it.

The suggestion as to the one-term presidency is not new. That commitment was written into the Democratic platform in 1912 on the insistence of Mr. Bryan. It was disavowed by Mr. Wilson, as was the canal toll pledge, with party leaders and public opinion concurring.

Would the public be seriously receptive to the suggested change today? The answer is to be found, we should think, in the new order of things brought about by the radio. If it is a fact that that agency imperils, actually or potentially, our form of government, the question of what action to take is peremptorily in order. The man on horseback galloping down the air may seem to many a mere goblin. Louisiana saw that specter in the flesh.

ON THE NAZI BLACKLIST.

The demotion of Dr. Hjalmar Schacht from his commanding position over German economic and financial policies is merely one more step in the process by which the Nazis are exiling or discrediting the citizens of highest talents in virtually every field. By foreign observers, Dr. Schacht was recognized as a genius for his resourcefulness in keeping the Nazi financial craft afloat in its turbulent sea. Another eminent German recently discredited by official order is Dr. Hugo Eckener, known the world over as the foremost authority on and pilot of airships. Because of political differences, his ostracism was ordered, but the Nazi high command now seems to have receded from its decision to punish him.

The roll of names acclaimed throughout the world and bringing honor to Germany, and now blacklisted by the Nazis, is a lengthy one. There comes to mind, for instance, Albert Einstein, acclaimed as a "modern immortal" by fellow scientists, now an exile from Germany, whose property has been confiscated by the Government.

A long roster of notables in many fields who have left Germany, voluntarily or by order, because of political belief or ancestry, was recently compiled by Dorothy Thompson, writing in Foreign Affairs. The German writers best known abroad are in this category: Lion Feuchtwanger, Arnold and Stefan Zweig, Erich Maria Remarque, Thomas and Heinrich Mann, the late Jacob Wassermann. Among the exiles in the field of music are Germany's renowned orchestra conductors, Bruno Walter and Otto Klemperer. Elisabeth Bergner, film and stage actress, and the late Alexander Moissi, celebrated Shakespearean actor, are on the list in the drama. Dr. Fritz Haber, who died in exile, worked for Germany by producing cheap fertilizer and gas for warfare. Max Liebermann, known as the dean of German painters, is another who died in exile. The list extends on and on, into medicine, architecture, commerce, all branches of science.

The world has learned to admire and respect these men and women. What can the Government that blacklists them expect to gain? Most of them were engaged in work of no possible political bearing. But in Germany today, everything must conform to Nazi ideology, no matter what the genius of those who are ostracised, no matter what the mediocrity of those who remain.

A PAGE FROM HISTORY.

In connection with the current discussion regarding economic sanctions and preservation of American neutrality in case of a European war, the following historical incident is of interest:

During the Napoleonic wars, both France and Great Britain threw overboard all the rules regarding freedom of the seas and the rights of neutrals and preyed ruthlessly upon American vessels. It is estimated that between 1803 and 1814, the British seized 917 American ships and the French 558. Provocation existed for a declaration of war against both countries and, as every schoolboy knows, Congress, in 1812, declared war against Great Britain.

Prior to this, however, Thomas Jefferson, who then occupied the White House, finding the situation had become intolerable, attempted to use economic pressure against the belligerents as a substitute for armed hostilities. At that time, we enjoyed a huge export business with Great Britain and also with the French possessions. Jefferson thought an embargo act, cutting off these supplies, would be effective in restoring our rights upon the seas. In December, 1807, Congress, at Jefferson's suggestion, prohibited all exportation of American products.

"The double purpose of the embargo," says the historian Muzzey, "was to starve Europe into showing a proper respect for our commerce and to prevent our ships from capture. The latter object the embargo certainly accomplished, for if the ships did not sail, they could hardly be taken. But the remedy was worse than the disease."

The domestic effects of the embargo are thus summed up by James Truslow Adams:

> Within a year, the exports from New England dropped 75 per cent, those from the Middle States 78 per cent, and those from the South 85 per cent. From various causes, the effect on British commerce and merchants was much less than anticipated, but the effect on America was severe. Prices of farm products declined on an average over 50 per cent. Ship building fell off by two-thirds in a year. In order to enforce the law, the number of public officials greatly increased, as did also the interference with the private life and liberties of the citizens. Clandestine shipments partly nullified the effects of the policy. Shipping merchants faced bankruptcy. New England, the center of the shipping trade, openly threatened resistance to the law by force of arms, and even secession from the Union. Ships had to patrol the coasts, and soldiers were placed on the Canadian frontiers.

In the end, Jefferson had to admit that the embargo policy had failed and a few days before he left office, he signed a repealer.

A modern analogy is the futile effort of the League of Nations to stop the war in Ethiopia by the use of financial and commercial sanctions. It might be urged that an embargo on oil might have done the work, but that is merely supposition. The fact is that economic pressure as a weapon against war has not proved its efficacy in 1936 any more than it did in Jefferson's time.

MISSOURI BECKONS.

The statement of Game and Fish Commissioner Buford about the work done on the 24 State parks in Missouri during the past year makes pleasant reading. Mr. Buford does not exaggerate when he says that the co-operation of the State of Missouri, the National Park Service and the United States Forest Service has gained at least a decade for Missouri in conservation and the establishment of outdoor recreational facilities. He might just as well have said a quarter-century. During the last year, 25,000 acres have been added to the State-owned land, making 75,000 acres now under State development. Meanwhile, the splendid work of the Forest and Park services, utilizing the CCC, has gone forward. Shelters, lodges, cabins, rest houses, bridle paths, hiking trails, field ovens, benches and picnic tables, placed so as to disturb nature as little as possible, now make it possible for vacationists to utilize the parks as never before.

From Roaring River to Round Spring, from Big Lake to Arrow Rock, from Montauk to Indian Trail, the playgrounds of Missouri beckon the residents of this State and other states to share their beauties and joys. It is an invitation which should and will be accepted by hundreds of thousands this summer.

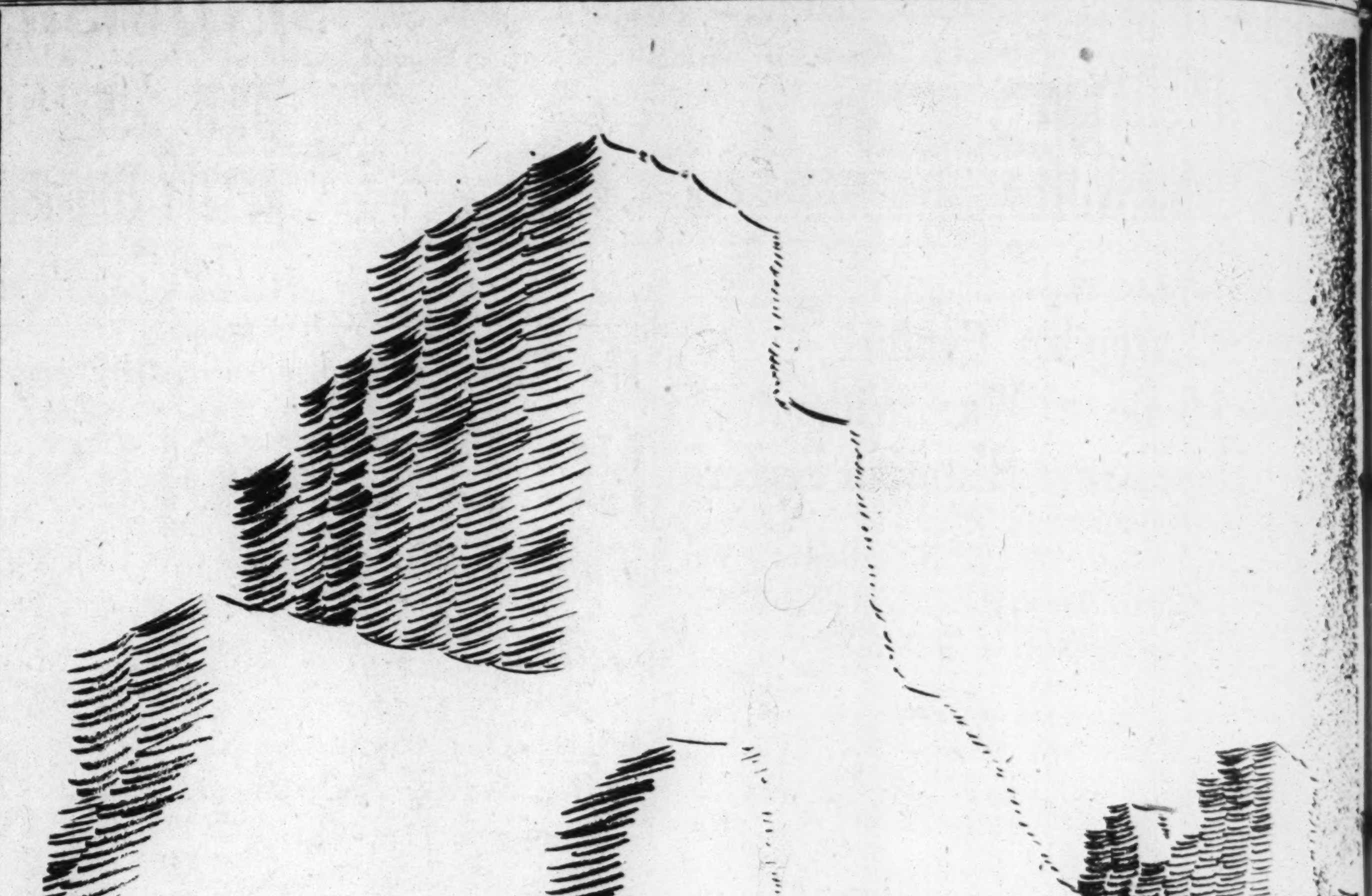
SEVEN STATES BEFORE THE COURT.

The constitutionality of the New York minimum-wage statute for women and children was argued before the United States Supreme Court last week. No more important state case has gone up to the highest bench in a long time. We discussed its significance a month ago, when the Attorney-General of New York appealed to the Supreme Court from a 4-to-3 rejection by the Court of Appeals in his State. This significance now stands out all the clearer since six other states have joined in the support of the law. When Dean Acheson, able former Under-Secretary of the Treasury, defended the legislation last Tuesday, he spoke not only for New York, but also for Illinois, New Jersey, Massachusetts, Connecticut, New Hampshire and Rhode Island, which have similar statutes. What the nine Judges have to say on this state question will rank among their most important recent decisions.



MORE BRIEFS IN THE MELLON TAX CASE.

Is the Flag a Fetish?

Epidemic of flag-salute laws seems to writer to indicate rise of a religion of nationalism, with nation's banner as its idol; points out that measures violate two guaranties of Constitution; praising patriotism, he adds: "Saluting under penalty does no good"; George Washington's view against compulsory oath of loyalty.

From the Christian Century.

HOW would it be to have a law requiring every child to kiss his mother good morning and good night, under penalty of a fine of $5, to be levied upon every parent failing for three successive days to exact the lawful salutation? Many observers have noted the regrettable weakening of family ties in our day, and many have commented unfavorably upon the decrease of filial piety. Perhaps it is time to try penal legislation and see whether compulsory osculation, enforced by the police power of the state, will stimulate the affection and obedience of children toward their parents.

Ridiculous? Not more so that the attempt to stimulate love of country by compulsory salute of the flag under penalty of expulsion from school for non-saluting children and fines for parents and teachers. Yet there has recently been what seems to be a concerted drive on the part of some of the so-called "patriotic societies" to secure enactment of laws for the compulsory salute of the flag in schools. Most of the recent efforts failed because of opposition from persons of unimpeachable patriotism, but the drive may be expected to continue. Eighteen states now have compulsory salute laws.

The Massachusetts law of 1935 has received the most publicity recently because of one or two striking cases of resistance to its enforcement. Resistance has so far come only from members of certain small sects, who have based their refusal on the ground that to salute the flag would be a violation of their religious beliefs. It is of no importance that these sects' arguments seem to most people to be fantastic and unintelligent. Religious liberty does not exist where a minority does not have the right to hold religious views that seem absurd to the majority.

Absurd or not, it would be still more absurd to consider these views dangerous to the public peace and security. The people who hold them are not enemies of society. They propose no action that is injurious or unlawful. It is not as though they were attempting, as some have, to inculcate some subversive social theory or practice (like polygamy) under guise of a religious tenet. If they were, constitutional guarantees of religious liberty would not protect them. That has been well and wisely established in the courts. But their case is nothing like that. They are a harmless and conscientious people who think of the flag as a kind of idol that they are being asked to worship, and, like the three Hebrew children, they refuse to do it.

Nothing could go so far toward convincing sensible people that flag-saluting is a cult and that the flag is being treated like an idol as such laws for compulsory saluting. Can it be true, after all, that there is a new religion of nationalism, and that the flag is its sacred symbol? Neither patriotism nor the flag means that for most loyal Americans, though some seem to be moving in that direction.

Because loyal Americans prize more highly the liberty for which the flag stands than any formula of lip service to the flag itself, there are a great many of them who, while smiling indulgently at the bizarre scruples of Jehovah's Witnesses, are sternly insistent that the preservation of their liberty to hold their curious religious opinions is as important to us as it is to them.

A legal analysis of the problem by two New York attorneys, W. G. Fennell and E. J. Friedlander, makes clear the points at which these compulsory flag-saluting laws are inconsistent with our system of government. First, they are contrary to the constitutional guaranties of religious liberty. The first amendment to the Constitution contains such a guaranty.

Obviously, one who is compelled under penalty to do that which is contrary to his religious convictions is not in the enjoyment of religious liberty. It should be noted, however, that the first amendment limits the power of Congress with respect to legislation abridging religious liberty; it does not limit the Legislatures of states. But most state constitutions, including that of Massachusetts, contain similar guarantees.

Second, these laws violate the fourteenth amendment, which forbids states to deprive any person of liberty without due process of law. There have been many successful appeals to this provision in regard to matters not wholly dissimilar to this. For example, a Nebraska law forbidding the teaching of a foreign language to any child in a school was invalidated by the United States Supreme Court on this ground. For patriotic purposes, there is probably better reason for requiring a child to learn English than for requiring him to salute the flag. But the Supreme Court held that the law was in violation of the fourteenth amendment. On that ground, the flag laws which are now putting peaceful citizens in many states in peril of imprisonment can and should be taken to the Supreme Court.

If some imminent danger threatened, and if the laws in question gave any reasonable promise of remedying the condition, the police power of the state might take precedence over the constitutional right of the citizen. But these conditions are not satisfied. It is undoubtedly true that children should be taught to love their country and that lack of devotion to the common welfare—which is another way of saying patriotism—is a danger to be averted. But it cannot be averted by compulsory salutes to the flag. Saluting under penalty does no good. Non-saluting for conscience sake does no harm.

The officers of a Virginia brigade in the Revolutionary War objected to taking an oath of allegiance to the United States. Their special point of sensitiveness was, to be sure, quite different from that of Jehovah's Witnesses, but the net result was the same. They would not declare their allegiance. The case was referred to Gen. Washington.

He wrote: "As every oath should be a free act of the mind, founded on the conviction of the party of its propriety, I would not wish, in any instance, that there should be the least degree of compulsion exercised, or to interpose my opinion in order to induce any to make it of whom it is required. The gentlemen, therefore, who signed the paper, will use their own discretion in the matter, and swear, or not swear, as their conscience and feelings dictate."

Washington was a wise as well as a great man.

War Casualties

From the Cincinnati Enquirer.

THE casualties of war begin before the first soldier is killed in battle, Prof. Maynard Kreuger of the University of Chicago pointed out at the University of Cincinnati peace demonstration recently. Civil liberties go by the board when the war spirit seizes the nation—even before a declaration of war. Freedom of thought cannot live in the climate of war.

Freedom of the press, one of the great pillars of human liberty, is too "dangerous" in time of war to be permitted. Most important of all, democratic self-government is likely to perish, here and in other countries, when another great war comes. The collapse of democracy in a dozen countries in the wake of the World War is ample proof that this "casualty of the next war" is not by any means imaginary.

Most of those who analyze the probable effects of furture wars are not as specific as Prof. Kreuger. They simply say that "civilization will perish." The more definite casualty list offered by the Chicagoan is perhaps more persuasive. But the broad generalization is not so far wrong.

Civilization will not perish in another world war, of course, in the sense that men will revert to barbarism like that of some historic period. But the values and the institutions that go to make up what we call civilization may be gravely impaired.

If this be doubted, one has but to examine objectively the position of Europe today. The central features of European civilization before the war were the dominance of that continent in world affairs and the regime of liberty and self-government which prevailed in nearly all countries. Europe has lost much of its strength as the civilizing force of the world in consequence of the war. And, quite evidently, it has lost that tolerance which was the foundation of liberty.

Perhaps we do not fully realize how near Europe came to seeing its civilization perish in the holocaust of 1914-18. Perhaps we are too close to the events to realize how much weaker European civilization is today, as a result of four years of war.

GOOD BUSINESS.

From the Philadelphia Record.

LEST any railroad stockholders get the idea they will be injured by the new low rates ordered for Eastern roads by the Interstate Commerce Commission, we call attention to the 1935 report of the Chicago, Milwaukee, St. Paul & Pacific.

For years, passenger revenue had been declining until the low rates went in, Dec. 1, 1934. Then the road began to make money on its passenger business. The road was able to buy new equipment and put on new streamlined trains. These new trains earned a net revenue of $2.18 a mile during the year.

Since running full trains is better business than running empty ones, the revenue from each passenger per mile carried increased from 1.71 cents to 1.8 cents. And this with a rate reduction AND wage increase to the company employes.

LANDON TO GET TEST TUESDAY IN CALIFORNIA VOTE

Governor's Forces Pitted Against Hoover's Unpledged Delegation in Preference Primary.

ROOSEVELT SEEMS MARYLAND WINNER

In South Dakota, Borah Has Help of Senator Norbeck, With Kansan the Only Opponent.

By RAYMOND P. BRANDT,
A Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, May 2. — Three presidential preference primaries in widely separated sections of the country Monday and Tuesday will be closely watched by Democratic and Republican politicians as samples of the sentiment for the leading candidates.

In Maryland on Monday, President Roosevelt will have the ultimately futile opposition of Col. Henry Breckenridge of New York, while Gov. Harry Nice will get the Republican presidential preference vote by the fault of those candidates who see no good reason to match strength with a "favorite son," although this "favorite son" has not even an outside chance for the nomination. Even Senator Borah of Idaho, who has challenged all the candiates, has refused to meet Nice on his home grounds.

In California on Tuesday, the supporters of Gov. Alf M. Landon are looking for a victory over former President Herbert Hoover's unpledged Republican delegation and are insisting that, if their candidate wins, all the Cleveland convention will have to do will be the writing of a running mate for the Kansas Governor.

On the same day in South Dakota, Senator Borah of Idaho, with the help of his friend, Senator Peter Norbeck, hopes for support from this Northwestern agricultural section. His only opponent is Gov. Landon.

Other Primaries Ahead.

Relying on the "bandwagon" theory—that is, that the voters want to be on the side of the winner—the Republican candidates hold that the votes in the three primaries this week will have their effect on the equally important primaries in Ohio and West Virginia May 12, in Oregon May 15 and in New Jersey May 19.

Anti-Roosevelt Democrats in Maryland are predicting that Col. Breckenridge will run better against President Roosevelt in the Free State than he did in Pennsylvania; where he received only 40,000 votes to the President's total of more than 700,000.

Breckenridge, however, has followed the same political tactics in Maryland as he did in Pennsylvania. He has taken himself seriously and has tried to stump the State. He would get just as many votes, probably more, if he and his supporters merely placarded city and country with the slogan: "A vote for Breckenridge is a vote against Roosevelt."

The New York lawyer, of course, hasn't a chance of getting a majority over the Roosevelt-Farley-Tydings machine in Maryland, but a sizeable vote might put Maryland in the doubtful column for the election.

Tangle in California.

The Californian Republican primary entanglements are too intricate to permit even a guess about the outcome Tuesday, although the Landon forces seem confident. Involved in this scrap are the Hearst and Chandler newspapers, Gov. Frank F. Merriam and clashing groups of "young" Republicans.

The Landon supporters are exerting every effort in California, hoping to match a far western victory with the successful Massachusetts "write-in" campaign engineered by former Gov. Alvan T. Fuller. A California triumph, however, would have its drawbacks in that the Hearst taint might become a stain. William Allen White's recent interviews have emphatically indicated that many of Landon's closest advisers resent the Hearst support and Tuesday's primary has them worried.

The South Dakota primary, according to former Representative Carl G. Bachman, Senator Borah's campaign manager, will be an out-and-out test of the strength of Borah and Landon, although the Landon crowd is supporting an allegedly "unpledged" delegation.

Borah, with the help of Senator Norbeck, has put an entire slate of delegates in the South Dakota race. Is is opposed to an entire "uninstructed" slate, which Bachmann contends is really for Landon.

"We have put up an entire slate in South Dakota, and we're willing to take it on the chin if it is defeated," Bachmann said today. "The Landon forces, however, have entered an 'uninstructed' slate, apparently in the hope that they can disavow it if it is defeated and claim it in event of victory. We welcome the contest, but we would rather fight in the open."

No other Republican candidates have filed for delegates in South Dakota.

Alcala Zamora Suffers Fate Of All Middle-of-the-Roaders

Father of Spanish Republic Ousted Because He Was Too Radical for the Right and Too Conservative for the Left.

By LELAND STOWE.
(Copyright, 1936, New York Tribune, Inc.)

NEW YORK, May 2.—On the afternoon of Feb. 20, 1931, a pleasant-faced man with strong brown eyes, a close-cropped white mustache and a short crown of white hair above his broad, high forehead stood at the window of a cell in Madrid's "model prison."

As one of the leading Republican conspirators against the rule of King Alfonso XIII he had been confined there three months, awaiting trial on charges of treason and a possible sentence of death. We were conversing through the one-inch bars of the cell window, yet the composure and dignity of the man behind these bars was as thoroughly Spanish as the tang of Manzanilla wine. We had asked him what he thought of His Majesty's latest government, the new Aznar Cabinet, on the success of which Alfonso staked his future and his throne.

'This is the final big parade of the Monarchists," he replied calmly, as if he was stating a historical fact rather than an opinion. Then, with quiet decision in his voice, he added, "There are no more reserves left for the King."

Two Months Later.

Less than two months later His Most Catholic Majesty Alfonso XIII had abdicated, and the prediction made that day in Moncloa prison had become a new and tremendously important fact in the history of the Spanish people. The man who had so confidently prophesied the dawn of the Spanish republic had become the hero of a new era. More than that, he had become exactly what he had been presented to us as being when we first shook hands with him through the bars—"the President of the Spanish Republic."

In the prison environment, and with King Alfonso exercising all the Bourbon prerogatives of centuries in the Royal Palace just across Madrid, the words sounded startlingly audacious, almost incongruous that day. But to Niceto Alcala Zamora, father of the Spanish Republic, they were not incongruous at all. For him the republic was already a reality, and for the next five years—until last April 7, in fact—he was called on to direct the destinies of that unruly, self-contradictory child of his faith.

Today he has been removed from office by the Cortes and deposed on a motion of the Socialist party, leaders of which were his cell-mates in Moncloa when we were smuggled in, as a supposed French lawyer, to interview them. On May 10, presidential electors will be chosen in Spain, and a week later the second President of the Spanish Republic will be elected. Presumably, Alcala Zamora's great role in the contemporary history of his country will be finished then.

True Father of the Republic.

In the truest sense, Alcala Zamora has been the father of the Spanish Republic. It was he, a late convert to the cause, who fanned the rising flames of Republicanism with the fiery sweep of his Andalusian eloquence only a year before the revolution. He had passed 50 years serving the monarchy as a Deputy and twice as a Minister. Six years of unconstitutional dictatorship ended his belief in the monarch and Alfonso.

At a mass meeting in the Madrid bull ring, he unleashed his oratory against the monarchy, and became the idol of republican hopes. Already his followers called him "President of the Spanish Republic," the republic which was not yet born. After five short years they have as swiftly renounced and rejected him. Alcala Zamora goes into retirement, amply qualified to refect on the gratitude of democracies.

What has brought about this sudden reversal of public sentiment? Perhaps only a Spaniard could answer that. Chiefly, however, it is the inevitable reward which awaits statesmen who try to steer a middle course in a period of tremendous social change and political conflict. It may be that Alcala Zamora one day will be known as the Kerensky of the Spanish 'revolution, for Spain's revolution is far from ended—it has just begun.

During his presidency he was besieged by bitterly opposing forces from the Left and Right. For the extremists among those who made the revolution, he was too moderate and too conciliatory; perhaps too stubbornly entrenched in his own convictions as well. Among the monarchists and clericals on the Right, the same qualities aroused their anger, and the President's prestige was subjected to constant attack from both sides.

In the elections of November, 1933, Gil Robles and his reactionary coalition won unexpected control of the Cortes, because of laxness and disunion among the republican parties, and began to liquidate the fundamental reforms on which the revolution had been based. As chief of State, Alcala Zamora was blamed in considerable measure for these developments and in part for the cruel repression of the serious revolt in October, 1934.

All this time cabinets rose and fell, and Spain was deprived of the benefits of stable government in the republic's most crucial early years. This continued instability made it imperative to hold new elections last Feb. 16. The anti-republican forces rightly feared these elections with the country rousing to the Left's cry "Restore the Republican of 1931!" But, to

ALCALA ZAMORA.

Alcala Zamora no other choice appeared possible—in a democracy the people must decide. He dissolved the Cortes, called the elections and reaped the enmity of the Right parties which clamored for his impeachment.

Insures Fair Balloting.

Alcala Zamora, with that imperturbable oneness of mind and quiet determination which characterizes him, went further than that. He called a non-parliamentarian, Manual Partela, to head the government which would control the elections—just to make certain that this critical election was conducted fairly, not in the Tammany style which has dominated most Spanish elections for years. All this may have been high statesmanship on the part of the president, but it helped to increase his foes on both sides.

Apparently the elections were held fairly. The Republican Left parties returned to power with an avalanche of votes. The Republic had been saved, thanks in no small degree, it would seem, to the courage of its president. Yet, for all that, a few weeks later he was deposed by a vote of 238 to 5, with the Right-wing opposition expressing approval by abstaining from the vote.

But there remains the man, the same man we met that February day in Moncloa prison, with his straight, proud bearing, his quick dark eyes and his friendly smile. He was ready to die for a principle then. We suspect he would be as ready to do so now. He spoke with directness and simplicity, yet there was an iron vein of firmness in the mobile features behind the bars. Above all there was the calm confidence of a man of unlimited faith. Standing in his cell, he proclaimed the Spanish republic much as a college professor might define the significance of the Bill of Rights. There was nothing of the conspirator or the fanatic about him—simply a man who knew that something must happen because it could not fail to happen.

That was what prompted us, as we prepared to take leave of this extraordinarily serene and courtly prisoner, to say: "I hope I shall see you next, Monsieur le President, in more happy surroundings."

Zamora's Reply.

Alcala Zamora's shoulders were square as ever. He shook hands firmly and—obvious to the fact that he stood there a prisoner of His Most Catholic Majesty Alfonso XIII of Spain—he replied with great earnestness:

"When next I see you, Monsieur, I shall receive you in the presidency of the council of ministers and I shall welcome you as the President of the Spanish Republic."

Only a few more weeks had passed when Alcala Zamora kept his word. In the light of that meeting in Moncloa prison it is somehow difficult to believe that the public role of the father of the Spanish Republic has reached its close. The first President of Spain's Republic possesses something which is elusive to name. Perhaps Alcala Zamora has no name for it, or is unconscious of it. We think of it as something of the grandeur which is Spain.

PSYCHIATRISTS OPEN CONVENTION IN CITY TOMORROW

Leaders in Study of Mental Disorders to Report Latest Developments at National Meeting.

PRE-SESSION ADDRESS TODAY

Dr. C. Macfie Campbell, President-Elect of Association, to Speak at Medical Society.

Latest developments in the study of disorders of the human mind, victims of which occupy half the hospital beds in this country, will be presented at the ninety-second annual meeting of the American Psychiatric Association, which opens tomorrow at Hotel Jefferson and continues through Friday.

As a preliminary, Dr. C. Macfie Campbell, president-elect of the association, professor of psychiatry at Harvard University and director of the Boston Psychopathic Hospital, will speak on "Mental Health—Its Social Significance," at a public meeting at the St. Louis Medical Society auditorium, 3839 Lindell boulevard, at 3 p. m. today under auspices of the medical society and the Missouri Society for Mental Hygiene.

Most of the leading American psychiatrists and psychoanalysts will attend, including Adolph Meyer, head of the Phipps Psychiatric Clinic of Johns Hopkins University since 1910, whose theory of psychobiology has been described as the guiding star for most American phychiatrists. Stated simply, the theory is that mental disorders are the result of an abnormal or unhealthy way of life rather than any specific or psychic difficulty, and that all sides of the patient—mental, moral, social, physical, emotional and spiritual—should be taken into account.

Other Notables.

Another is Dr. C. C. Burlingame, whose ideas, put into practice at his Hartford Retreat at Hartford, Conn., are revolutionizing sanitarium theory. He has found that giving educated and cultured patients such handiwork as basket-weaving tends to depress them further. He encourages them to express themselves, to write plays novels or compose music, to attend the theater and concerts at the retreat and to engage in competitive sports.

Dr. William Alanson White, head of the federal St. Elizabeth's Hospital for Mental Diseases in Washington since 1903, who gained fame for his defense of Freudian psychoanalysis and who testified for seven hours in the Loeb-Leopold case, probably will attend, as may Dr. Beatrice M. Hinkle, one of the earliest practicing psychoanalysts in the country.

Among the outstanding psychoanalysts who are expected to be present are Dr. A. A. Brill of New York, Dr. Franz Alexander of Chicago, author of "The Medical Value of Psychoanalysis," and Dr. Karl Menninger, author of "The Human Mind," and director of a psychiatric hospital at Topeka, Kan.

Dr. Brill and Dr. Alexander are disciples of Dr. Sigmund Freud of Vienna, whose contention is that a neurosis—popularly known as a "nervous breakdown," a term abhorred by psychiatrists—is the result of a conflict of the conscious part of the personality with unconscious forces, mostly primitive sex urges.

110 Papers to Be Read.

Of the 110 papers to be read at the meeting, most interest is attached by the psychiatrists to four on emotional and psychic factors in such ailments as heart disease, diabetes and arthritis, prepared by members of the staff of the Presbyterian Hospital, New York. They will be read Tuesday afternoon.

Among other subjects to be discussed is the effect of endocrine gland disturbances on behavior of children, aggressiveness in criminals, the difficulties of defining the "normal" person, the female sex hormone in involution melancholia, Freud, treatment of the psychotic ego, the relation of dreams to reality, hypnotism in the treatment of neuroses, use of music in mental hospitals, tattooing and its relation to psychosexual disturbances, psychoanalysis in late-life depressions, control of behavior, the value of early recollections as a guide to diagnosis of mental cases, alcoholism in women, drug addiction and progressive psychiatry in ancient Greece and Rome. Sections on convulsive disorders and legal psychiatry will be held tomorrow.

The problem which the psychiatrists face is a large one. There are 500,000 beds in mental hospitals throughout the country as compared to 525,000 beds for all other illnesses. That does not mean that anything like half of the persons who go to hospitals are mentally ill, however; so many beds are needed for psychiatric cases because their average stay is many times longer than that of those only physically ill. Most of those in the mental hospitals are insane—psythotics—as comparatively few neurotics enter hospitals.

Psychosis and Neurosis.

The difference between a psychosis and a neurosis, psychiatrists explain, is that the psychotic, the insane patient, is unaware of his affliction, while the neurotic is generally conscious of it. Dr. Meyer has described the neurosis as "actually a minor psychosis." The neurosis only affects part of the personality. It has been said, "the psychotic lives in a world of fantasy, the neurotic in a real world."

Psychiatrists treat patients with medicine, water, occupational and physical therapy and advice and suggestion. Psychoanalysts, by long and usually expensive studies of neurotic patients, try to learn what subconscious repressions have influenced them. Freud believes sexual frustration is the basic cause of neuroses; his former disciples, Jung and Adler, who broke away and founded schools of their own, believe the cause is frustrated ego.

Chief psychoses are: schizophrenia, called dementia praecox or split personality, a slow and steady deterioration of the personality usually occurring in late adolescence; manic-depressive insanity, a violent fluctuation between extremes of elation and depression; paranoia, delusions of persecution and personal grandeur; involutional melancholia, which occurs at the climacteric in women and in men between 55 and 65, and such physical psychoses are paresis and delirium tremens.

The principal neuroses are: hysteria, in which the patient may suffer from amnesia, paralysis of a limb, a tic, or loss of appetite, sight or hearing; neurasthenia or nervous prostration, in which the patient suffers from fatigue, worry, discouragement, insomnia, aches and pains, a sense of inferiority, and a fear of going insane; obsessional psychasthenia, which may express itself in a phobia, such as fear of enclosed or open spaces, or high places, or an obsession, such as washing the hands every few minutes; anxiety states, epilepsy, and migraine, or "nervous headaches."

Another War In Europe Would Be Without Hope

After 1870 Bismarck's Germany succeeded in directing the affairs of Europe in a manner which permitted it to transform the chaos provoked by the revolution of 1848 into an order tolerable for everybody.

In that order Europe was able to prosper marvelously. After 1919 and the end of the World War, disorder was far greater in Europe than after 1848.

But the two great Liberal powers, who, having won the war under the flag of liberty, held the responsibility for the future, did not succeed in doing anything to reestablish a tolerable order.

They detached themselves from the decisive problems at the moment when these should have been faced; they faced them always too late and with insufficient plans, which complicated instead of solving them.

And we now see the results of their actions.

No Loopholes in Law For Aliens in America

and Benson, the Government introduced copies of the two anarchist papers, containing, in addition to the passages heretofore cited, such declarations as: "The State must die;" "The best way to undermine an institution is by attacking its foundation;" and "The State can die at the very moment when the masses begin to stop heeding its laws or submitting to its imposed taxations."

So strong was the case against Ferrero that his counsel was perforce confined to the contention that he had ceased to be an anarchist, in support of which it was pointed out that he had discontinued the publication of "L'Emancipazione" in 1932—two years before his arrest. However, it will be noted that Ferrero himself, when testifying, declined to make such a claim. Concerning his technical guilt under the law there seems to be little doubt.

Contrary Testimony.

On the other hand, a strenuous fight was made in Sallitto's behalf. It was urged that, beyond Farrelly's testimony there was no evidence that he was affiliated with the International Group, or that the latter advocated the overthrow of the Government by force. Four American-born witnesses testified that Sallitto addressed the gathering as "Ladies and gentlemen," and "Friends," and did not use the terms "Comrades," or "We Anarchists," or "We members of the International Group."

Moreover, they denied that Sallitto advertised the sale of copies of "Man" in the hall, or that any copies were sold there, some were offered for sale outside, they said. Farrelly did not buy one. There was no discussion of anarchy at the meeting.

It was pointed out that "Man" was not published on the restaurant premises. As for renting space to Graham, it was shown that Ferraro and Sallitto also rented space to commercial enterprises. Profits from the sale of spaghetti and ravioli were not always sufficient to take care of the nub.

"Thus," concluded a memorandum submitted in Sallitto's behalf, "we have a record which is devoid of any real evidence against the alien."

Both Ordered Deported.

Nevertheless, the examining inspectors recommended to their superiors in Washington that both men be deported, and the recommendations were approved by the Board of Review, composed of three minor officials in the Department of Labor. In Sallitto's case the decision was reached after considerable hesitation and discussion. Ferrero never had a chance. Both were ordered deported to Italy.

On their plea that they would be subjected to imprisonment or worse, if returned to their native land, they were given permission to "depart to the country of their choice," providing only that it was not "contiguous territory or adjacent islands." But they found that obtaining passports to another country was difficult, if not impossible. It is possible that an explanation of this dilemma may be found in an unsigned memorandum which their attorneys discovered in the file of the cases at Ellis Island. Apparently written by an inspector, it said.

"As a tip, will state that I understand the Italian counsul is very much interested in the deportation of these aliens, and would be only too glad to issue passports for their return to Italy. The Italian consul wants to be notified of the deportation date."

Subsequent to its discovery by defense counsel, this ominous-sounding document was removed from the record.

Judge Coffey's Ruling.

There remained to Ferrero and Sallitto the recourse of an appeal to the Federal courts. Accordingly, application for writs of habeas corpus was made to District Judge Francis G. Caffey, of the Southern District of New York, on the grounds that the proceedings had been unfair, and that the evidence, especially in the case of Sallitto, was insufficient to sustain the finds.

It so happened that a similar case had come before Judge Caffey a few weeks earlier, in which he had laid down a rule defining the power of the court to interfere in deportation cases. The case was that of Alfred Fortmueller, a German alien who arrived in this country in 1929, and became an active Communist the following year. In an interesting and exhaustive opinion, Judge Caffey held that the Department of Labor and the courts had no choice but to execute the will of Congress, and that it was beyond the power of the courts to set aside the Department's findings if they rested on substantial evidence: He said:

> The alien (Fortmueller) declared that he favored and urged that the Soviet form of government, as it prevails in Russia, replace the existing form of government of the United States. He was asked whether "if it is absolutely necessary to use force or violence to substitute a Soviet form of government, would you be in favor of such form of violence?" his answer was: "Yes, I guess so". Without anything more, clearly this statement was enough to enable the Department to make a finding adverse to him."

Subsequently, Fortmueller asked for leave to qualify his statement "to accord with the teachings of Lincoln and Jefferson," and, when asked what he meant, replied by quoting Jefferson's dictum that, when a government becomes unjust or oppressive, the people have the right to alter, or, if necessary, overthrow it. Judge Caffey continued:

"Let it be assumed, for example, that Jefferson and Lincoln advocated the use of force or violence in overthrowing the government of the United States; or, what is the equivalent, assume that a citizen of the United States today advocates that course. This would not help the relator in the slightest. He is an alien. That makes the difference under our law. The relator is within our gates on sufferance only. He was permitted to enter on conditions. In its wisdom Congress has prohibited aliens from doing what the relator, by implication, suggests was done by two great Americans.

Congress has gone further. It prescribed that if an alien, while occupying a guest status in this country, violates the prohibitions, he shall be deported. On the other hand, it has not provided, and perhaps is without constitutional power to provide, that an American citizen who does the same thing shall be deported. It is because the law governing who shall be deported discriminates in this way between aliens and citizens that the attempt of an alien to justify his conduct by pointing to what a citizen is allowed to do is without force.

Obviously if an alien be found guilty of such a violation of law as is now under discussion, the Labor Department would be recreant to its duty if it failed to issue a warrant for his deportation. It could not escape from issuing the warrant except by itself disobeying the law. If any one deem the law as so written to be erroneous or unwise, his sole remedy under our system of government is by appeal to Congress for a change."

Carried Up to Circuit Court.

Rendering his judgment in the cases of Ferrero and Sallitto, Judge Caffey recalled that he had discussed the duty of the Department of Labor and the scope of judicial review in the Fortmueller case, and observed, "There is no occasion to repeat what was said there." He found that the proceedings against Ferrero and Sallitto had been regular and fair, and since the record contained some evidence on which the Department's findings could be based, he was without power to overturn it.

In all of these three cases, appeals have been taken to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals, and Fortmueller, Ferrero and Sallitto are at liberty on $1000 bond each, furnished by labor defense organizations and persons who have taken a sympathetic interest.

Concerning Ferrero and Sallitto, their lawyer says: "They are the gentlest, mildest, most polite clients that ever came into this office. It makes you want to weep."

Sallitto says: "Fifteen years ago I came to this country with $25, seeking freedom. Now they're sending me back to Italy and prison, and I haven't got 25 cents. I don't care much what happens to me, but—and I care what happens to the I do care what happens to my baby world."

Busses' Profits Make Up Losses On Street Cars

part of the street railway property, however, is security under a separate first mortgage for $3,263,000 of City & Suburban Public Service Co. bonds. The United Railways bonds, which aggregate $36,300,000, hold only a secondary lien on this part of the physical property, so there is a conflict between the two classes of bondholders.

Out of the total of $36,300,000 of United Railways bonds, $17,894,000 are in the hands of the public. The corporation holds title to $17,181,000, of which $16,626,000 are pledged as collateral for a bank loan of $9,259,653.

Other important groups of creditors are the holders of $2,448,875 of 6 per cent "gold notes" and a large number of individual holders of judgments for injuries and damages rendered but not paid before the receivership. The claims of the latter group aggregate approximately $2,500,000.

City Holds Whip Hand.

Stockholders are generally regarded as having no equity left in the property, and it happens that the City of St. Louis is a large holder of preferred stock, which it accepted in payment of a tax debt of more than $2,000,000.

The city is in position to hold the whip hand over any reorganization plan, due to the fact that a private transportation company may use the streets only with the consent of the city. Franchises for the operation of various street-car lines were granted years ago and many of them have expired. The most inclusive of the remaining street-car franchise of recognized validity runs only to March, 1939. The busses are operated under revocable permits and thus are subject to absolute control of the city. As the busses constitute an increasingly important part of the transportation system, the city is constantly increasing its effective control over the system. The city, by not granting franchises for busses, remains free to control the bus situation by any one of three methods: Revocation of existing permits, the grant of permits to competing operators, or the operation of its own bus system.

The absence of street railway franchises extending into the future was one of the obstacles Judge Davis saw in the way of early reorganization. He thought it unlikely that the city would ever grant any new franchises, and equally unlikely that new private capital would venture into a street railway reorganization without a new franchise.

In 1931 and 1932 aldermanic committees made studies of the transportation problem and prepared reports on various phases of city ownership and operation, but nothing came of them.

"Of Making Many Books"

JOHN G. NEIHARDT

Why Fret Another Planet?

ROCKETS THROUGH SPACE. By P. E. Cleator. (Simon & Schuster, New York.)

IT does seem to be true that the whole story of mankind, of individuals and of races, might be set forth revealingly as that of a continuous and generally futile effort to escape. On all levels of experience, from the lowest physical to the highest spiritual, the thesis seems equally defensible. The most selfish desire and the highest selfless aspiration may be viewed as manifestations of a common impulse—to flee from pain, from need, from a sense of incompleteness.

It is as though birth were somehow an isolating event, and all our years a groping for the lost way back. On the physical levels, so all great seers have tried to tell us, men strive vainly to escape through selfish satisfactions. There is a curious, if not impressive, rumor, persistent throughout the ages, that some have succeeded by a directly opposite method. There is another rumor, equally persistent, that most achieve escape only by dying. And some impatient ones, we know, make bold to hasten that releasing event.

There have been long periods of time in which men strove to escape by denying the world we deem we know and affirming another, built in keeping with the needful heart's desire. The twentieth century hardly favors that persuasion. Science has served to fix our attention on the exclusive materialistic aspect of our world; and our individualistic temper has no patience with the age-old rumors of the seers.

In our day, more than ever before perhaps, men are persuaded to seek escape by objective means. We will harness the "forces of Nature," and thereby, somehow, come at last to that which we vaguely desire in countless ways.

But it is hard to believe that men in general have often been more desperately eager for escape than now. During the late great pioneering period, men could flee to empty countries, there to build a dreamed-of better life; but those hopeful rivers of men no longer flow. Before the crash, who could not dream of "getting rich" some time, so to be made complete, somehow?

But for all the greatness of the human spirit, we now find ourselves, throughout the earth, in a sorry predicament.

And whither can we flee? The Pearly Gates no longer lure the many. The far frontiers have vanished. Shrewdly literal minded, so many are inclined to regard the "Kingdom of Heaven Within" as only sentimental patter.

So where do we go from here?

Why not to the moon—to Venus—to Mars?

According to P. E. Cleator, the question is no longer one for laughter. He is no less a personage than the director of research of the Scientific Research Syndicate of Great Britain, a Fellow of the Royal Society of Arts, and associate member of the Institute of Engineering Technology. He tells us that under present conditions a trip to the moon is "actually possible." Nor is he alone in holding this view. There are at present interplanetary travel societies in 17 countries, and with all of these, we are assured, scientists of high standing are actively associated.

Here in "Rockets Through Space," the whole subject is discussed in detail, and a thrilling discussion it is, making most novels seem, by comparison, even duller than they sometimes are.

We learn of the earlier experimentation with rockets, their development, the search for an adequate fuel, and of the possibilities in the use of oxygen and gasoline for propulsion; of the speed that would have to be obtained by a space ship in order to escape from the earth; of the necessity for gradual acceleration and the means of achieving control; of plans for the construction of such vessels, their size and weight and fueling; of the schemes that have been devised for maintaining the proper temperature during flight through the void; of the astronomical problems involved in space navigation (or rather, "astrogation"); of means to be employed in landing on planet or satellite, and in taking off again; of the probable dangers to be encountered in outer space.

Fantastic as all this may seem, every step of the argument is highly reasonable. It is made almost credible, as the author soberly contends, that nothing is lacking but a hundred million dollars to build and launch the first ship moonward. And even though the reader may feel no urgent desire to visit the moon, he is likely to admit that, as an expert job of reasoning at least, "Rockets Through Space" is a rare delight.

The book is worth reading, if only for diversion. And, in any case, it seems important for the thoughts it may arouse. Even if man should succeed in reaching the moon—or Venus or Mars—he would still be confronted with himself. Not even the unimaginable required speed of seven miles per second could lose that stubborn fellow and the ancient problem he presents.

Why wish to break the lunar peace with foolish discord, or fret another planet? J. G. N.

The Real Tommy

OLD SOLDIER SAHIB. By Private Frank Richards. (Harrison Smith and Robert Haas, New York.)

OLD SOLDIER SAHIB was a title of respect given to that irreligious, rough-and-ready, beer-swilling redcoat who served in India during the old empire-building days. Private Frank Richards, whose style is as incisive as that of the messages his heliograph flashed through the mists and fogs of the snow-covered mountains, is said to give a more convincing picture of the barrack life of Tommy Atkins at the turn of the century than did Kipling.

Robert Graves points out in the introduction that Kipling was a civilian who never lived a barrack-room life, and a journalist with a journalist's temptation to improve on a good story. Furthermore, many of the incidents and words that Richards uses were considered unprintable when "Soldiers Three" was published. Richards uses them, however, by way of characterization rather than with a desire to be shocking.

The book abounds in amusing (and sometimes appalling) characters and situations. There are accounts of jackal-baiting, cheetah-hunting, plagues, pests, earthquake, Pathan rifle thieves, Burmese Dacoits, snakes, cholera clouds and Oriental magic.

Private Richards has shown himself a gifted writer and has done an excellent piece of work in a charming style. R. R.

Icelandic Tale

SALKA VALKA. By Halldor Laxness. Translated by F. Lyon. (Houghton Mifflin Co., Boston.)

A MORE unlikely setting for a novel, it seems, could hardly be found than an Icelandic fiord, nor a more unlikely heroine than Salka Valka, a fish-cleaner from her earliest years; and yet with this meager material the author has written a detailed and convincing story. The village, squeezed between the mountains and the water's edge, offers an appalling picture of ignorance and poverty. It is a backwash of human life, far from the lanes of commerce and untouched by beneficial influence. The brutalizing effect of isolation and poverty and arctic weather is all the more notable because the author does not stress it.

Salka Valka's courage forms the thread of the story. When she is a little girl she takes her place with the older women at the cleaning sheds and demands to be given her wages in money instead of being put on the books of the company store. As a young woman she is still a rebel, but by then she has become a personage. She helps to organize the fishermen's union, and she is a leader in whatever attempts are made to better the miserable lives of these people. She possesses the Icelandic woman's badge of prosperity, a chest of drawers, and she even becomes part owner in a fishing boat. Her abiding love for the man who taught her to read and write, and her brief happiness with him, seem little enough reward for a lifetime of bitter toil in those desolate surroundings. But Salka Valka did not expect rewards, and by the time the reader has finished the story, neither does he expect them for her. Happiness and leisure, it seems, have no place on an Icelandic fiord. In Arctic Waters

REPORT OF THE COMPANY. By Dudley Vaill Talcott. (Harrison Smith and Robert Haas, New York.)

A young New England sculptor has written this yarn as a record of the performance of a Norwegian sealing vessel which he acquired, and in which he delighted to get away from the "confusion" of America to the "simplicity" of the ice fields.

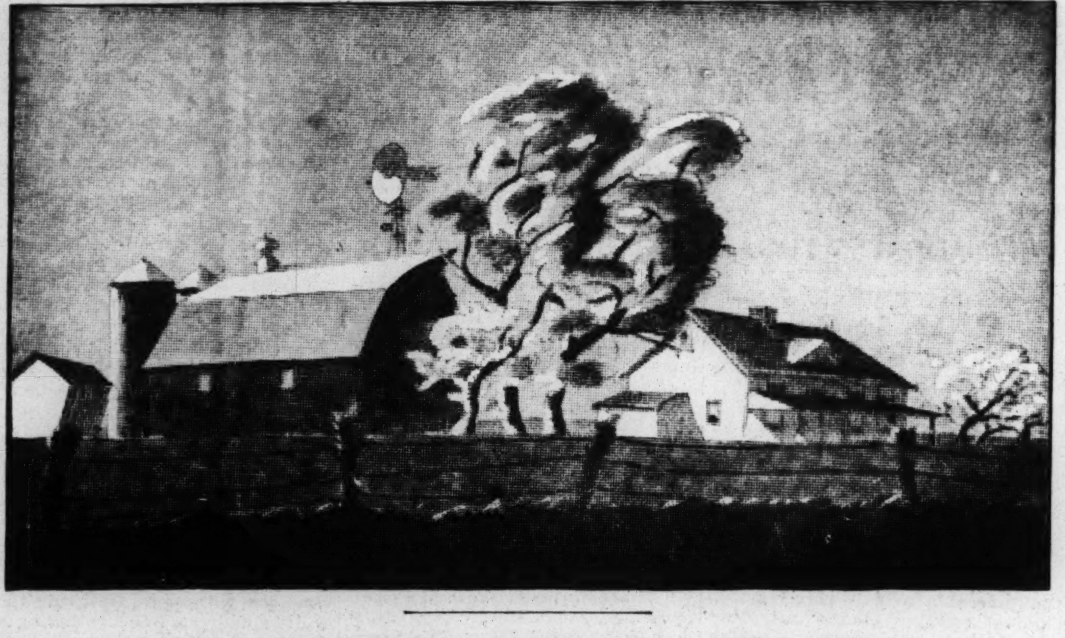
With the aid of a redoubtable Viking named Isak Isaksen, who eventually became his father-in-law, he managed to get the Norkap II into Arctic waters pretty regularly, fishing for salmon or herring, and organizing expeditions for sportsmen and scientists. But even in that region where at midnight "shadows which looked like a purple liquid rose slowly to the brims of the great valleys" and "the slopes which were in sunlight shone like polished copper," there must have been some complexities, what with temperamental passengers, uncertain fish, icebergs sliding under the vessel and green seas breaking over it.

As a story of adventure, "Report of the Company" is pleasing enough, although the narrative is sometimes disconnected, the style often schoolboyish.

The author ventures far afield when he interpolates his views on marital relations. It is one thing to adduce serious arguments on the point that marriage leaves some problems unsolved; but to base those arguments on the assumption that women have failed lamentably in living up to the role intended for them by their Creator, is dangerously to undermine the arguments.

The illustrations, from photographs and drawings by the author, are decidedly worth mentioning. Some attain a high level of beauty, and all are finely reproduced. M. B.

From Cover Drawing of "Spring Storm," Alvin Johnson's Story of Young Love



In No Autumnal Mood

SPRING STORM. By Alvin Johnson. (Alfred A. Knopf, New York.)

YOU never knew. Spring might be well along. The wheat might be almost tall enough to billow in the wind. The cornfields might be showing their checkerboards of yellow grain shoots. The apple trees might be "vast expanding bouquets of flowers." Then, without warning, a north wind bearing icy rain would sweep down. The mercury would fall to zero. Every growing blade would become an icicle "to flatten down pale as straw when the south wind regained its empire."

That was the sort of country it was. Julian Howard's amateur scientific farmer father did not know it when he left off school teaching and, with a modest inheritance, bought a thousand acres in northeastern Nebraska near the close of the last century. Little did that visionary, always hopeful man of books realize what a battle he would have with the elements and the choking weeds, ever ready to spring up after a late freeze had killed the starting crops, and how useless the best approved book methods of farming would be if the season was not right.

And little did the boy Julian, sensitive, eager, resourceful, moral lad that he was, realize as he began to love the vast expanse of the prairie country, the always changing river and the clouds which raced overhead, that something very much like one of those devastating spring storms would sweep down on his own new-world freedom to chill his early life and leave him at the threshold of manhood, groping for a way out of despair.

Although blue-eyed, slender Elizabeth, girl wife of the dirty, periodically drunken Henry Millsbaugh, "Pennsylvany Dutch" and nearest neighbor to the Howards, is not imported to Nebraska until more than half way through the novel, "Spring Storm" is essentially the story of Julian's love for her and her haughty, bitter love for him.

When Henry had gone off to squalid Dutchman's Bluff for liquor, Elizabeth would hang a white tablecloth on the line to let Julian know the coast was clear, and somehow he would escape his father to answer the fluttering signal. They met in the timber where he was cutting wood. Footprints in the frozen snow, deep violet in the sun the next day, told of his midnight visit to Elizabeth's Christmas party for two. Stolid Henry walked unthinkingly in the tracks when he came to borrow a cross cut saw, but the neighbors talked and in the end everyone knew.

But there is much more in "Spring Storm" than Julian's and Elizabeth's beautiful and desperate love. All the characters are vividly drawn—Dut Bates, a close kinsman of Huckleberry Finn, who saved Julian from a beating by the cowardly Dutchman's Bluff gang and thereafter was his devoted friend; the other fish-catching squatters who lived in the bend of the river, the rheumatic Fishworm and old Gramma and little Onie, who really didn't belong to the Fishworm, as Dut put it; the Shiverdeckers and the Walshes, including Cale, the Howards' Socialist hired hand; the buxom kitchen girl, Katy, about whom every young blood in the country knew, and Miss Tenney, the school teacher, whose brief and tragic part in the story makes one of its most poignant passages.

The author states explicitly that the characters and situations are wholly fictional. Yet like the boy of the story he, so we learn from an autobiographical note, took over the management of his father's farm to lay up money for a college education. But whether there is more of actual experience in "Spring Storm" than its writer would care to admit, there can be no denying that his love for the land and growing things is an old love and that the solution of Julian's staggering problem — a prompt and sure replanting after his spring storm—was learned first hand in boyhood.

"Spring Storm" is all the more notable because, like Santayana's widely read "The Last Puritan," it is a first novel. Alvin Johnson, now 61, is a distinguished economist of wide social interests. Director of the New School for Social Research in New York City and the editor who bore the brunt of producing the recently-completed, monumental Encyclopaedia of the Social Sciences, he has been one of the busiest of American scholars these past 30 years.

Only a part of the beauty of his book can be accounted for by the joy which may come with writing from long recollection. The author is at heart a poet, as attested by scenes such as that in which Julian and his father, their clothes blowing in the raw March wind, hew the frozen soil of the hill-fold cemetery.

Cannot Alvin Johnson retire to the comfort of his old house at Nyack on the Hudson until he completes the projected trilogy, which "Spring Storm" is planned to introduce? This reader hopes so, and he is confident that all who share in the experience of Julian Howard's haunting teen-aged love will feel as he does. I. D.

Civilizing Natives

THE RAPE OF AFRICA. By Lamar Middleton. (Harrison, Smith & Robert Haas, New York.)

HOW the political map of Africa took on its varicolored mosaic pattern is the subject of this book. The writer minces no words in describing how it happened; such expressions as horsetrading, fraud, theft, larceny, deceit, brigandage and murder are frequent throughout the volume. The softer terms, used by the conquerors themselves to this very day, are present as well; such expressions as civilizing the benighted natives, self-defense, protecting national interests, converting the heathen, putting down the slave trade.

It has been a grisly game, this partitioning of a continent. The writer, an American newspaper correspondent, begins his story with the year 1876, when only 10 per cent of Africa had been occupied by Europeans, and brings it down to 1936, when they had taken approximately 97 per cent. Little of this acquisition came by fair purchase. Most of it was by outright annexation or one-sided bargaining with native chiefs, who sold miles of rich regions for a few bottles of gin and a generous promise. When titles were called into question, there were always rifles to back them up. So Africa was conquered.

The book concludes with the latest episode in African conquest, Italy's adventure in Ethiopia. After reading the preceding chapters, the final one is an anticlimax. The Italian seizure, now so virtuously condemned by the other Powers, is after all only a belated addition to the history they themselves wrote when the getting in Africa was good.

There have been benefits in modern conveniences, education and sanitation for the African natives in some degree, it is true, as the result of European exploitation of their continent. But the story of how they were introduced to these blessings of civilization, as assembled in this volume, is a bloody and sordid one. The writer prefers irony to indignation in making his points, but the facts speak for themselves. F. G.

TALMUDIC TALES. By David Morantz. (The Kansas City Kansan, Kansas City, Kan.)

FROM the Talmud, the ancient repository of Jewish law and lore, this writer has collected 128 representative tales and 500 proverbs. The parable was a device favored by the scholarly rabbis in instructing their pupils in the laws of conduct and religion. Their tales remain as applicable today as when they were first uttered, some of them 3000 years ago. The proverbs, too, are ageless.

The book is an outgrowth of a daily column, published by numerous newspapers over the country. The writer, David Morantz, is a lawyer in Kansas City, Kan., who turned to Talmudic lore as an avocation. F. G.

MOST POPULAR BOOKS

ACCORDING to reports received from 75 leading booksellers in the principal cities of the country, the books most in demand during the past week stand as follows in the order of their popularity:

FICTION.

The Last Puritan, by George Santayana, reported by 70 booksellers; The Thinking Reed, by Rebecca West, 53; The Hurricane, by Nordhoff and Hall, 46; Sparkenbroke, by Charles Morgan, 42; It Can't Happen Here, by Sinclair Lewis, 27; The Rolling Years, by Agnes Sligh Turbull, 26.

NON-FICTION.

The Way of a Transgressor, by Negley Farson, reported by 62 booksellers; North to the Orient, by Anne Morrow Lindbergh, 46; Man the Unknown, by Alexis Carrel, 42; Inside Europe, by John Gunther, 41; Life With Father, by Clarence Day, 35; Wake Up and Live, by Dorothea Brande, 30.

Since the former report, it will be noted, "The Thinking Reed" has advanced, changing places with "The Hurricane." "Sparkenbroke," not previously mentioned among the six best sellers, now holds fourth place. "South Riding," sixth in the previous list, does not appear. The order of titles in the non-fiction list remains as before.

Merely Called?

PETER CALLED THE GREAT. By Maurice Bethell Jones. (Frederick A. Stokes Co., New York.)

WHATEVER reasons Mr. Jones may have for begrudging Peter I his usually accorded appellation do not make themselves clear to the reader of this ample biography.

True, the author does not spare Peter's vices and weaknesses, but he is no less conscientious in cataloguing the many political reforms he instituted. To the details of Peter's military campaigns he gives less attention, as Peter can hardly be regarded as a soldier of the first magnitude.

Peter, like more recent occupants of the Kremlin, was not gentle in enforcing his reforms. Instead of simply starving to death the reactionaries who revolted against his new ideas, he put them out of the way by as diversified a system of torture as his barbaric, half-oriental kingdom could provide. Although Peter's own son died at the hands of his torturers, Peter could never understand why the Western European rulers he emulated did not regard him as civilized.

The Czar cared little for personal aggrandizement. "The honor I wish is less crawling before me and more zeal and fidelity to the state," he said. When he was acclaimed Emperor of Russia, he appeared at the ceremony in his usual old clothes, and he stooped when he was with his subjects, so that his great frame would appear more like their own.

There is little room for dullness in the volume's 379 pages, packed as they are with bloodshed, intrigue, lust, warfare, torture and drunken revelry. C. R. H.

SONGS OF THE NEW DAY. By Kathleen Nicholson. (Avon House, New York.)

KATHLEEN NICHOLSON, a teacher of English at Roosevelt High School, St. Louis, in "Songs of the New Day" offers a collection of pleasing verse, her second published book. Opportunity for publication of the book was given when Miss Nicholson won a nation-wide poetry competition conducted by the publishers, in which some 2500 persons submitted manuscripts. D. K.

A World Apart

IT is not far to the Head o' W-Hollow, as travel is measured, 20-odd miles back from the Ohio River in the Kentucky hills, where the Little Sandy and Buffalo creeks flow. To reach it you can take the road you please, the way a crow flies or the way the wind blows, over the wagon road or a shorter mule path, but when you get there you are in a world apart. It might be called the Jesse Stuart world, for there he lives as the Stuarts have lived for generations, and tills, and teaches school and sings the songs that the hill-land puts into his heart. As he sang in the sonnets of "Man With a Bull Tongue Plow," in time past, and as he sings now in "Head o' W-Hollow."

W-Hollow is walled in by the wind and the hills, but it is a place under the sun; and if you go there in the spring you can hear the beetles and the whippoorwills and the birds a-singin' new songs, as Jesse Stuart tells, and the wind slushin' around in the leaves, and if you go there in the summer you can hear the wind and the corn blades parleying around, and if you go there in the fall you can see the brown leaves along the path and hear the beetles in the bean patch and down in the old cornfields.

You can see and hear all these without going there, for there are both sight and hearing in Jesse Stuart's telling. It is even possible that one may see more and hear more by harking to Jesse Stuart than by going there, for the man has a poet's eyes for seeing and a poet's ears for hearing—even a poet's license for telling what a poet sees and hears, things which another, passing along W-Hollow, might not discover.

So it is better, perhaps, to take W-Hollow as it is given.

The quaintly-named people of the hollow would almost certainly be disappointing, for they are an unlovely lot, even as Stuart, with a flair for "naturalism," affectionately limns them. There are, it may easily be believed, just such people in the hollow, but it may also be believed that there are some of a better breed—the Stuarts, for example, who have inhabited these hills for generations, and their good neighbors. Among them this writing Stuart might find something of essential nobility more worthy of his talent than the many he has selected to celebrate in his "honest" chronicle of the folk of W-Hollow. F. A. A Cook's Tour

MY GREAT, WIDE, BEAUTIFUL WORLD. By Juanita Harrison. (The Macmillan Co., New York.)

A UNIQUE travel book, if there ever was one, "My Great Wide Beautiful World" is the misspelled odyssey of a Mississippi colored cook who, at the age of 36, threw over sauce pans and skillets for steamships and far horizons. Any number of chronicles have been written by travelers who, for philosophical or sentimental reasons, have circumnavigated the globe third-class, conscientiously adopting the costumes of the countries in which they loitered; but there are few whose author's natural habitat was third-class, or no class at all, and who wore native garb for fun, not for literary purposes. In fact this free spirit had no idea of publishing an accounting of her tour until one of her white employers offered to arrange it for her, not omitting the mistakes, lest, as Juanita remarks, there might not be anything left to publish.

Romance fades for most of us when the beds are hard, the linen dirty or our compartment mates odorous, but not for Juanita who can sleep on a park bench, look on stewed cat unnauseated and travel fourth-class on a Chinese steamer. When her suit case grows heavy she gives her clothes away; when she runs out of money she gets a job as maid. Everywhere she specializes in funerals, weddings and family life; and the things she loves best in the world are bullfights and good food. As utterly unconscious of color, creed and class as she is, this debonair soul is no ingenuous child of nature. A crude sophistication colors her philosophy.

In spite of unintelligible sentences, irrelevant periods and missing commas, the book holds the reader and is, at times, genuinely poetic. "It was like something pleasant," she writes, "but not sweet. It was like mint—our afternoon on the Nile."

Her addiction to such misspelling as "pheasants" for peasants and "creator" for equator imbues the style with an odd charm.

Although not on the Mikado's list for being "a fool who loves every country but his own and every century but this," Juanita Harrison has chosen Hawaii, with its superior opportunities for loafing, rather than America to abide in until she may feel again a Mercurial fluttering at her dark heels. Author of "Salzburg Tales" Writes Distinguished Novel

Christina Stead

Cold Brilliance

THE BEAUTIES AND FURIES. By Christina Stead. (D. Appleton-Century Co., New York.)

IT is paradoxical to speak of the fantasy of realism, but that is what the creator of "The Salzburg Tales" has achieved in her latest book. Her power of suggestion is strong enough to hold together a loosely constructed plot involving a dozen widely diverse but equally important characters who move against the Parisian background.

When Elvira Western left her husband and middle-class existence in London to take up life with Oliver Fenton, a young student of economics, she had hoped to find fulfillment because she believed him to be a man of ideas. Instead, Oliver was a parlor radical with immature theories who ran after parades and pretty girls alike. The dreary, late-winter skies of Paris and the clever meddling of Annibale Marpurgo, a lace buyer whom Elvira met on the train coming over, played their parts in destroying the frail romance. Elvira, apathetically resigned, returned to London to take up her life with her husband once more.

Marpurgo is the evil genius of the book, placing his darts with fiendish accuracy and distilling his poisons carefully. Ridden by his own furies, with a body wracked by illness and a mind preternaturally alert, he is everyone's confidant and no one's friend. He fails to dominate only one group: Coromandel, a lovely, conscienceless designer; her father who spends most of his time contemplating his antiques, and the mad mother who plays the great lady with quiet dignity. It is in the portrayal of this group that some of the finest writing in the book occurs—a fantasy that is touched with terror.

Miss Stead's approach is a masculine one. She sees men and women clearly and marks them with a sophistication that is more than mere patter. There is a gemlike brillance about her intellect, a quality as of cold fire in the illumination she throws upon her characters, which makes her unique among her contemporaries. F. D.

Outstanding War Dramas

BURY THE DEAD. By Irwin Shaw. (Random House, New York.)

IDIOT'S DELIGHT. By Robert Emmet Sherwood. (Charles Scribner's Sons, New York.)

IF CYCLES were not identified so closely with motion pictures, it might be concluded that the current New York stage is witnessing a cycle of war plays—a special type of war play which finds dramatic horror in the crises in Europe. For two of Broadway's outstanding pieces today are Irwin Shaw's powerful debut effort, "Bury the Dead," and Robert E. Sherwood's fantastic setting for the talents of Alfred Lunt and Lynn Fontanne, called "Idiot's Delight."

Shaw, who is only 23 years old and has a radio adventure serial as his principal writing effort heretofore, has knocked the props from under theatrical critics by his 70-minute work. For after the Critics' Circle had shut up shop for the season and awarded their prize to "Winterset," Shaw's play came into town and had them saying that here was a dramatist who may easily grow into one of the most mighty in the land.

Using a technique derived from the motion pictures, for whom he is currently working, he starts with the perfunctory burial of six soldiers who have been killed in conflict. He has the six corpses get up in their graves and refuse to be buried, and for the length of his play, makes humanity's appeal to them for the normal order of interment. Military authority, their relatives, the church are all arrayed against them without convincing them that they should be parties to the bargain in which, the corpses say, they were "sold for 25 yards of bloody mud."

Shaw's literary approach is hardly unique. It seems to have been derived in fact from all the brutal things that have been written about an international collision gone now nearly two decades. Shaw offers no insight into what the next war will be, and he probably does not say a thing that has not been said somewhere before. But the excellent economy with which he has developed his argument has created a work of such impact that it leaves the reader shocked and shaken, if not a panic-stricken pacifist.

Sherwood's play is built on the next war, one which he imagines will set France and England against Germany and Italy. In keeping with the style of "The Petrified Forest" and others of his plays, he groups widely differing individuals in an Alpine hotel, threatened with destruction by French bombing planes, in reprisal for the activities of an Italian air base nearby.

Sherwood, who says in a postscript that war is inevitable if we do not keep our heads in the presence of Fascism, takes very little time to present any thesis in his play. His attitude is still more mature than Shaw's, and his concept of the present dangers more keen. He says, with some profanity, that the new war is the result of blankety-blank bad management. C. Changing World Thought

THE WORLD'S GREAT AGE. By Philo M. Buck, Jr. (The Macmillan Co., New York.)

IN a previous volume, "The Golden Thread," Philo M. Buck dealt with social and moral philosophies from Homer to Goethe. In the present volume, his purpose is to trace the changes in world thought from the beginning of the nineteenth century, which saw a great war end with a statue erected to Lord Nelson, to the time just after the World War, when all nations were building monuments to the Unknown Soldier.

Obviously, a remarkable shift in thought is to be discovered in a period that, beginning with a great war and ending with one, finds the sympathy of peoples accorded at the beginning to commanders, at the end to the men in the ranks.

In an early chapter on Rousseau, Prof. Buck portrays the rise of democratic thought as finally set forth in the Social Contract, whereby Liberty, Equality and Brotherhood were to be achieved "because Man is by nature good"—and therefore certain to respond to opportunity to be good, if Government provides that opportunity.

Shelley, the author argues, was obsessed with the same ideal; he hoped to free a Prometheus of human goodness, chained by greed and lust for power. In America, Walt Whitman took up the idea and preached it lustily.

In two contemporaries, Chateaubriand and Manzoni, existed an even stronger faith in the essential goodness of Man, but they argued for a flight to primitive or humble conditions where, somehow, real Truths were to be found.

Then, the claims of science began to affect popular thought. Religious faith wavered in Western Europe. Greed and lust for power used the new discoveries of science further to enchain Prometheus. But faith survived in Russia, where Tolstoi and Dostoevsky seemed not to dare to question God's power, and could only record life in the human anthills that presumably operated under His surveillance.

Zola, Matthew Arnold, Hardy and Ibsen recorded a waning of faith. In a word, toward the close of last century, man's faith in God was decreasing, his faith in his own resources increasing.

We emerge at today with this tendency probably gaining, although science is losing its positive attitudes, its certainty that it can shortly write the formula for everything.

From such a volume of delicately weighed and evaluated judgments—such a succession of carefully interpreted philosophies—each reader will draw conclusions as to the present strength of religious faith and the power of reason. But one may still trace the Golden Thread, that began with man's earliest reflections, through the woof of the modern fabric.

How Disease Makes History

DISEASE AND DESTINY. By Ralph H. Major, M. D. (D. Appleton-Century Co., New York.)

"CAESAR had his Brutus, Charles the First his Cromwell," and, according to Dr. Major's very interesting account, mankind has its diseases which will get us if we don't watch out, and which have shunted history about far more than isolated individual fanatics. The fall of old Athens, of Napoleon, the Russian Czar; the motivation of the Renaissance and the Reformation; the deaths of numerous powerful rulers and of geniuses, various conquests, and other epochal events in the life of mankind are laid to the ravages of disease.

Sometimes the good medico becomes a bit too inclusive. As for instance, when he passes lightly over the entire Muscovite history from beyond the Tartar invasions to blame the Russian Revolution and the "horrors" of Bolshevism on Lenin's having been a paresis victim. But as such instances are not numerous, they are easily forgiven—and lost—in so informative and well-written a work.

To begin with, it is a history of the most virulent diseases written for the layman, simple enough in its terms to be comprehensible even to a reviewer. The style is direct, while retaining enough of humanness to counterbalance some of the rather unpleasant—but essential—descriptions. The doctor is not ponderous. There is something about his style that is attractively conversational. He also has much to offer in the way of sidelights not considered important in cut and dried history books that ignore the human element.

There are 10 outstanding plagues of mankind, each with its separate chapter. Ancient and medieval efforts to combat these diseases are a part of history, which is carried down to the time when a definite remedy was discovered, or if none has been, the reader is told what modern medicine is doing about it.

While the author's obvious purpose, indicated in the title, is to show how history has been affected, that idea seems to become secondary in the reading; there is too much that is interesting just about diseases. The 47 well-selected illustrations are not a minor part of the work. And there is an index

BROOME STAGES. By Clemence Dane. (Doubleday Doran & Co., Garden City, N. Y.)

THE Broomes are a family of English actor folk, and Miss Dane's novel deals with "all the Broomes and their wars," through seven generations, from 1715 to Hollywood. It is an exciting, often melodramatic, story of the Broomes' rages and romances, their feuds and fixations. The book received wide acclaim when first published, in 1931. It is now issued in the excellent Doubleday Doran series of low-priced reprints.

Sophisticated

FLY AWAY BLACKBIRD. By Jerrard Tickell. (William Morrow & Co., New York.)

NO, Romance is not dead. Sometimes it adopts an entirely new convention and comes in the guise of a sophisticated novel, with a quite modern and realistc setting. Its characters may "face life," and even get entangled in the mechanisms of politics, and still all the while they may be living a pure idyl, as in "Fly Away Blackbird."

Cinderella, a little girl with long blonde plaits, arrives in England at the home of her godmother, by way of a famine train from Austria. There she meets Nicola, her Aunt Kathleen's nephew, who falls in love with her, eventually deciding first to become an M. P., and after that, perhaps, to marry.

Meanwhile, Cinderella goes home to her father in Vienna. Finally the godmother sends the young M. P. to Saint Anton in Switzerland. But it is really Nicola whom Cinderella meets at the station.

Even though Romance in its modern garb of "Fly Away Blackbird" beguiles the reader, the impression of vivid actuality remains. One closes the book, grateful for the artistry that has made it possible to enjoy wholeheartedly the troubles and love idyl of two wholesome, modern young people.

CONSUMER CO-OPERATION IN AMERICA. Democracy's Way Out. By Bertram B. Fowler. Introduction by Marquis W. Childs. (The Vanguard Press, New York.)

BERTRAM B. FOWLER is not adding another to the numerous panaceas for the depression, but rather "a philosophy of economics leading to a co-operative commonwealth."

Consumer co-operation, according to Fowler, is consumer ownership. For example, one gathers from his exposition, if one eats bread, one co-operates with other bread eaters to control bread distribution; then bread baking; then the preparation of the wheat and other ingredients of bread; then the production of those ingredients, until the fundamental concept is in practical application.

"Consumer co-operation," the author insists, "takes sharp issue with any system which would replace private ownership of use-property with collective ownership." He asserts that consumer co-operation is an essentially democratic economic system, cites its practical application here and in other lands, and claims for the movement 40 countries and one hundred million members. It is an evolutionary movement, he says, made necessary by the increasingly difficult condition of the mass of consumers.

Mr. Fowler presents a well organized argument, with much information for those interested in the movement. Marquis W. Childs, who wrote the introduction, is on the Washington staff of the St. Louis Post-Dispatch, and author of "Sweden: The Middle Way," which is meeting with notable success.

THE REAL BILLY THE KID. By Miguel Antonio Otero. (Rufus R. Wilson, Inc., New York.)

THE story of this early-day Dillinger has been told many times already, but Mr. Otero, a former Governor of New Mexico who knew Billy the Kid, says his aim is to "write a story, without embellishment, based entirely on fact."

The Kid, one William H. Bonney, born in New York City, migrated to New Mexico at the age of 3, knifed a man at the age of 12 or 14 (accounts differ) and became an outlaw, dying at 21 with 21 notches on his six-shooter. He didn't bother with notches for Indians, whom he killed frequently and most nonchalantly.

Mr. Otero relates impartially all he could pick up from survivors and witnesses of the Lincoln County War, but through the book there runs a current of ardent admiration for the cold-blooded killer and one of dislike for Pat Garrett, the Sheriff who trapped and killed his former friend in a slightly questionable manner.

LIFE IS FOR LIVING. By Kay Lipke. (Frederick A. Stokes Co., New York.)

IT is no wonder that Gail Kincaid, the heroine of this tale, found life interesting, for at the tender age of 18 she had four men in love with her, and managed to divert her wasted affections from her aunt's husband to the right man.

The story moves rapidly from an orange grove in California to a penthouse in New York, concluding satisfactorily back in the orange grove. Gail is an enthusiastic and likable girl, not too beautiful, not too brilliant, to seem real. There are plenty of incidents and enough variety of character to make the story enjoyable, and its spirit is fresh and breezy. The love of the young girl for the older married man is not handled morbidly, but with a deft and winning tenderness.

THE CRITTER AND OTHER DOGS. Albert Payson Terhune, Harper & Bros., New York.)

DOG lovers, especially those who share with Albert Payson Terhune a partiality for the collie, will find enjoyment in this volume of seventeen stories in which canines play the principal parts.

Most of the stories—they are really sketches—have appeared in periodicals. All of them are based on occurrences vouched for by the author.

Terhune's dogs possess personalities, traits which redeem plots that otherwise would hardly merit publication. They linger in the memory.

BAPTIST CONVENTION IN CITY MAY 12 TO 18

Denomination Claims First Place Numerically Among Protestant Groups.

Substantial gains in membership during 1935 have elevteed the Southern Baptist denomination to first place numerically among Protestant groups in the nation, according to statistical information released from the Nashville (Tenn.) headquarters of the church in advance of annual reports to be delivered at the national convention in the Municipal Auditorium here from May 12 to 18.

Churches in the Southern Baptist Convention now number 24,537 with an aggregate membership of 4,389,417, a net gain for 1935 of 112,365, the annual report of Dr. E. P. Alldredge, statistical secretary, will inform the convention.

District gains along many lines of denominational activity were made during the last year, Dr. Alldredge has found. Gain in Sunday school attendance reached 52,000, increasing the total attendance in the 22,883 church schools of the denomination to 3,157,458. Substantial increases were made in Baptist Training Union membership, which now numbers 33,276 units with a membership of 669,230 young people. The Woman's Missionary Union now has 34,699 separate organizations with 593,766.

The total contribution of the church showed a net gain of $2,235,291 over the previous year, the largest increase since 1932. A total of $26,888,567 was contributed for all purposes. Of this amount $4,624,515 went to missions, education and benevolences ,a net increase of $372,847 over 1934.

There was a decline of 7317 baptisms in 1935. The total was 202,047 for the year. During the past 16 years there have been 3,270,317 baptisms throughout the church, an annual average of 204,269. Total membership gains over the same period have been 1,497,150.

The Northern Baptist Convention will be held here at the same time.

Estimates are that 15,000 delegates and visitors from every section of the country and some foreign countries will come here. Local arrangements are being handled by a large group representing St. Louis Baptist churches, headed by Dr. C. Oscar Johnson, pastor of Third Baptist Church and president of the St. Louis Church Federation.

Toy Shop Guild Benefit.

Mrs. James Brady will open her home, 45 Ridgemoor, Thursday afternoon at 2 o'clock, for a silver tea and book review for the benefit of the Toy Shop Guild, which repairs old toys for needy children. Mrs. Dorothy Godwin will review "The Influence of Women and Its Cure," by John Erskine.

Better to Be Trained Seal Than Extra

Movies Pay Bigger Salaries Also to Elephants, Camels and Cats, of Right Variety.

HOLLYWOOD, May 2.
By H. H. NIEMEYER.

EVERY now and then the Los Angeles Chamber of Commerce or Jesse Lasky or somebody pops up with advice to girls and boys who are thinking of coming to Hollywood to get in the movies. The advice is always the same, "Don't." But if you are a boy or a girl and happen to be a trained seal, or an elephant, or a camel or a cat—especially a cat—come right along. The chances are good and the pay is high. Higher than the salaries handed out to the "dress" extras.

Maybe you remember the trained cat who used to appear in a lot of silent shorts. Went fishing in fish bowls and caught gold fish with his tail. Well he made a lot of money for his owner and was headed for stardom when he inconsiderately died. There hasn't been a trained cat produced for the films since.

Right now camels are having their innings. They have to be trained only to the point of not having a cough in a carload. A camel's cough comes out pretty blatantly on sound film. The makers of "Under Two Flags" used up all of the coughless variety, paying $35 a day apiece for the animals and a keeper for each and the minute that picture was in the can, the camels were rushed over to do their stuff for "The Garden of Allah."

Horses are reported steady on the Hollywood market at $4 a day. "Under Two Flags" had most of the supply tied up in that line, too, which caused "The Charge of the Light Brigade" some inconvenience for several weeks. Trick horses, that can roll over and play dead when the guns go off, run up to $50 a day. The alligators in "A Message to Garcia" turned in $20 a day to the alligator farm every day they worked.

About the only thing the Hollywood pet shops can't supply is a cobra. Pythons are on hand and can be had for a beggarly $100 a day but when a cobra is needed it is up to the studio prop man to get a common garden snake and tie a false head around his neck—or where his neck ought to be if he had one. This not only makes a pretty good cobra but it makes a decidedly active one.

IF you've been sitting around holding your head in your hands about buffalo and their extinction, you will rejoice to learn that there are approximately 22,000 of them left, according to the latest census.

Taker of the census is Roy Burns, business manager of the Cecil B. De Mille production, "This Breed of Men." When De Mille wants buffalo he wants all the buffalo there are to be had. It would be going a little too far to say that he is going to give every buffalo in the world a screen test, but he at least wants to know where to lay hands on all those available.

Burns, being of a thrifty turn, like all good business managers, suggested just a few buffalo and some mirrors, but De Mille wouldn't hear of it.

"Find out where there is a herd of at least 5000 head," he instructed, "and no fair sneaking in any of those water buffalo, or bubalus-bubalus. They must be all bison."

Burns went to work. He got in touch with the American Bison Society and asked them how things stood in regard to buffalo, exclusive of bubalus-bubalus. The figures the society returned were amazing.

At the present time, however, it appears that De Mille will film his buffalo sequences at Wainwright National Park in Alberta, Canada, where exactly 6981 bison will be at his disposal.

All of which ought to be enough about animal life in Hollywood. Maybe it's too much so we will jump, more or less hurriedly to the human side of "This Breed of Men." This DeMille opus is to be all about Buffalo Bill, General Custer and the Indians with the buffalo thrown in for atmosphere. DeMille originally intended to just call it "Buffalo Bill" but the R-K-O studios beat him to the punch. Buffalo Bill, however, will be glorified in the usual DeMille manner.

And speaking of glorifying, the success of "The Great Ziegfeld" will not only launch M-G-M upon a career of producing, on the screen, an annual "Ziegfeld Follies" but will see Hollywood rushing to glorify most of the famous showmen, living and dead. There are to be scenarios written around the lives of Abe Erlanger, Charles Frohman, Daniel Frohman, Lester Wallack, George Edwards and one or two others. P. T. Barnum has already been properly glorified in the films you know but in the rush to register these titles with the Hays office, Jake Shubert and Sam Goldwyn seem to have been overlooked.

HEARD ALONG THE BOULEVARD—If you ever wonder how the studios can spend any where from $250,000 to $2,000,000 working a single picture it might be well to glance at Paramount's annual report for last year, which shows $93,000,000 worth of films sold to the picture theaters. . . . The new Pickford-Lasky combination announces that it will produce at least one road-show film every season. . . . Report that Kay Francis would go on a trip to the Orient as soon as "The White Angel" was finished was slightly exaggerated. The picture is done and Kay is hurrying into two more productions before she sails. Then she plans to be gone six months. . . . Warners failed to take up their option on Paula Stone and she drops out of that studio shortly. . . . The latest Hollywood arrival is Sonja Heine, who got her pictures printed in the newspapers because she was the Olympic ice skating champion. She is blonde, Scandinavian and very pretty and her screen tests are reported as excellent. Maybe she'll be another Garbo. Or, maybe, just another Eleanor Holm, who got nowhere fast in the films after being the Olympic swimming champ.

Highlands Opens Its Fortieth Season

Harry Lange will be master of ceremonies for the fifth year at Forest Park Highlands, which opens its fortieth season today. Lange has assembled a new organization of musicians, singers and comedians, and calls his first show "Happy Days Are Here Again." Three performances will be given nightly and two every Sunday afternoon. Shirley Day, vocal soloist, will be featured with Floyd Locke's orchestra in the ballroom.

Philadelphia Symphony to Opera House

THE Philadelphia Symphony Orchestra, last heard in St. Louis in February, 1927, will return next Saturday evening for a concert at 8:30 o'clock in the Municipal Auditorium Opera House. Leopold Stokowski will conduct.

The orchestra's present nationwide tour, with which Stokowski celebrates 25 years as a concert conductor and 23 years in charge of the Philadelphia ensemble, marks also his retirement. He will go into acoustical research, in which he became interested through radio concerts in recent years.

Offering a program of the music of Bach and Wagner, Stokowski has chosen his own transcriptions of works of both. Having started his career as a church organist and choir director, he has long been famous as a Bach authority.

The conductor, born in London of Polish and Irish parentage, came to the United States when he was 18 years old, as organist and choir director at St. Bartholomew's Church in New York. Four years later, after appearing as a guest conductor in London, he took over the baton with the Cincinnati Symphony Orchestra. St. Louis first saw him with the Cincinnati Symphony, at the Odeon, in 1912. It was in that year that he went to Philadelphia.

In building the Philadelphia Symphony to a position of international prestige, he became famous for his showmanship, for his eccentricities and the constant surprises he offered his audiences. It has long been his ambition to undertake a tour of the proportions of the present one, which has already extended through New England, the South, the West and will end soon in New York. The jaunt, incidentally, is underwritten by the phonograph company for which the orchestra makes records.

The complete program is:

Toccata and Fugue in D minor — — — — — Bach-Stokowski
Air from D major Suite No. 3
Fugue in G minor (the Shorter Fugue)
Chorale: "Komm susser Tod" ("Come Sweet Death")
Passacaglia in C minor.
Overture to "Die Meistersinger von Nurnberg" — — — — — — Wagner
Introduction to "Lohengrin."
"Love Music" from Tristan and Isolde" (freely transcribed by Leopold Stokowski).

"Under Two Flags" Makes Worthy Use of Desert

By COLVIN McPHERSON.

FEW opportunities are so well met by California's diverse gentlemen as when they pack up camels and canteens and go forth into the desert dunes to make something like "Beau Geste," "The Lost Patrol," or "Under Two Flags," the latest of which happens to be showing at Loew's Theater this week. Having long expressed a preference for the real thing in film photography, which it seems to me Hollywood can always well afford, I am able to report a great deal of delight in the panoramas with which Darryl F. Zanuck has seen fit to ornament "Under Two Flags." Compared to the penny arcade backgrounds in front of which the actors of "The Petrified Forest" spoke their impressive philosophies, the rolling sands of "Under Two Flags" illustrate a pertinent difference. They have an audience sitting up looking bright to begin with, and the fact that the story that comes along seems hardly big enough to go with the outlay carries little weight. Enough scenery, costumes and action make a good picture. The setting of "Under Two Flags," according to Ouida's novel, is Abeshe, French headquarters in Southern Algeria, at the turn of the century. The iron-handed Major Doyle of the Foreign Legion (Victor McLaglen) is holding things in check, the meanwhile giving attention to Cigarette, a cafe proprietor and sweetheart of the regiment, battalion or whatever. That's Claudette Colbert. In with re-enforcements comes Ronald Colman, an Englishman with something to forget. He and Claudette find a growing sympathy for each other until, unhappily, Rosalind Russell arrives to visit the high-ups, and her store clothes and aromas of old England turn Ronald into her personal recruit. War with the tribes has been smoldering for a long time, and it is in the expansive manner of battle that the romantic difficulties of four people are smoothed out. It means in this case that Claudette, after a certain amount of heroism, is shot down and dies in Ronald's arms. Her reward, aside from that, is to have her garments decorated with military award, in the manner in which Gary Cooper received mention for his terrific efforts in "The Lives of a Bengal Lancer." The scrapping at the finish is the really meritorious part of "Under Two Flags." It seemed to me long in coming. With the audience itching for a fight, Ronald and Rosalind dilly-dally around in the moonlight and orders are given for this and that. When the clash does come and hundreds of Arabs and trick riders bite the silica, the average gathering has no cause for complaint. The Academy prize winners—Colman, McLaglen and Colbert—all turn in fine performances. After so many "It Happened One Night" roles for Miss Colbert, her gamin Cigarette comes as something of a shock. Yet with her r's appropriately frogged up, she is every bit the fiery little French girl, and a dramatic actress of very great ability. Nigel Bruce's doddering nonsense and Gregory Ratoff's lusty legionnaire manners add refreshing bits to the show. Direction of Frank Lloyd, who did "Mutiny on the Bounty," has created an atmosphere of barbarism and civilization coming to grips. Some of the cruelties with which "Under Two Flags" is sprinkled recall Lloyd's handling of similar matters in his previous epic.

Florida Special.

FOLLOWING a familiar track as surely as if it were set on rails, "Florida Special," at the Orpheum, sends a highly social group South from Pennsylvania Station, New York, to the sunny peninsula. In drawing room, compartment and berth are a millionaire, his niece, her jilted boy friend, a Manhattan police official, various comedians and small fry, and enough jewel thieves alone to give the railroad some return on its investment. The millionaire, Claude Gillingwater, is one of those mistrustful souls who has been unable to discover a way to keep his fortune, now that the gold standard is no longer what it was. He has a sackful of unset gems of various sorts, and that is what the thieves are after. Jack Oakie, a New York reporter who has no better business than to be hustling his sodden friend, Kent Taylor, aboard the "Florida Special," gets left aboard by mistake and having once grasped the journalistic possibilities of the set-up, sticks with it. Hence the story. To the major portion of the public, "Florida Special" will be just a case of Hollywood rubbing the old lamp again and getting more money thereby. The dialogue writers, however, have given Sedalia's Mr. Oakie the snappy sentences which he needs, and the Missouri boy has rarely been as entertaining.

The second section of the bill is an unclassified effort inscribed "The Law on Her Hands." Margaret Lindsay and Glenda Farrell set out on a career in the courts and sooner or later are defending the henchmen of Lyle Talbot, a genteel racketeer. Complications arise from the presence of Warren Hull, Miss Lindsay's sincere admirer, on the side of the prosecution. Eventually Miss Lindsay does enough unethical things to guarantee her disbarment, the law wins, and she and Hull arrange a settlement out of court. It's pretty much garbled all the way through. Of note among the short subjects is an appearance of Molly Picon, famous Jewish actress of New York's East Side.

The Country Beyond.

MORE location scenes of interest are to be viewed in "The Country Beyond" at the Fox, with the high Sierras doubling for the remote parts of Canada, where the Royal Canadian Mounted goes looking for men. Murder, mushing and a certain amount of romantics are woven together after the manner that has been handed down from silents to talkies and from road show to quickie. Paul Kelly and Robert Kent, whom you may not know, are the redcoats; Rochelle Hudson the girl, and Alan Hale her father, a hangdog-looking gentleman who didn't know he was doing wrong by smuggling stolen furs. Buck, the huge canine that figured so largely in "Call of the Wild," skulks around the set and eventually saves the actors, which is worth an extra bone, even if not a very large one.

Following on the trail at the Fox is "The Dark Hour," in which Berton Churchill and Ray Walker, as oldster and young detective, get together after every reel and say, "Well, what do you make of it?" And the murder is finally blamed on a poor Chinese servant.

Big Brown Eyes.

TWO more fables are run together at the Shubert. The first, "Big Brown Eyes," a Walter Wanger production, tells how Joan Bennett, as manicure in a big barber shop, helps Cary Grant, a policeman, track down some of the public's most wicked enemies, and gets life support as a reward. "The Sky Parade" idles along for 18 years—or seems to—until Jimmie Allen comes in and foils the villains. Anyone who hears Mr. Allen on the radio will be prepared for "The Sky Parade."

The Ambassador continues with Shirley Temple's film, "Captain January," and "Roaming Lady," until next Wednesday, when "Things to Come" will open. The new film pictures the world in the future, with Wells' predictions on what life will be with the progress of invention.

Katharine Cornell To Tour "St. Joan"

Katharine Cornell, now appearing in George Bernard Shaw's "Saint Joan" in New York, will take the play on a coast-to-coast tour next fall which almost certainly will include an engagement in St. Louis.

Returning to New York, she will begin rehearsals next December of a new play by Maxwell Anderson entitled "A Wingless Victory." It affords the actress the role of a Malay princess married to a New England sea captain, in the year 1800.

Fanchon & Marco Work On New First-Run Policy

Fox, Ambassador and Missouri Theaters Expected to Remain Open During Summer, With St. Louis Coming Into Lineup Later.

SETTLEMENT of the long-standing difficulties between Fanchon & Marco and the Warner Brothers, R-K-O and Paramount picture producing interests in New York last Thursday leaves a great many details to be cleared up, despite considerable detail in the settlement itself, but the next few weeks is expected to see the working out of a basic plan by which Fanchon & Marco will operate the entire first-run field in St. Louis, with the exception of Loew's Theater.

In the new alignment, Fanchon & Marco will have the Fox, Ambassador, Missouri, St. Louis, New Grand Central, Orpheum and Shubert theaters in the first-run field, plus a big interest in the St. Louis Amusement Co. neighborhood houses, and will have Warner Bros.-First National, Paramount, R-K-O, Columbia, Universal, at least a part of 20th Century-Fox and various independent pictures at their disposal.

Loew's, which has been able to remain placid while the storm has been raging, continues with Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer and the United Artists pictures, two of the biggest and best sections of Hollywood output, and may get the 20th Century part of 20th Century-Fox pictures as it does now.

The logical course of operation by Fanchon & Marco during the summer would seem to be to keep the Fox, Ambassador and Missouri open as first-run houses, and to bring in the St. Louis next fall. The first three theaters have cooling systems already in running order to fend off summer heat. The St. Louis, closed for two years, could be fitted out, then, with new season product, which arrives about Aug. 1.

Jack Oakie and Sally Eilers in "Florida Special," at the Orpheum.

A good guess would be that the Orpheum and Shubert, not built to be picture houses or to be operated in hot weather, will be closed. Cooling devices were installed in both during the Warner Bros. tenure, so they could be kept open as second-run houses. The New Grand Central seems definitely out of the picture for the present, although a use for it will be thought of by next fall.

Fanchon & Marco can expect even with the unparalleled local resources they have, to do some juggling of pictures and houses. With the four big de luxe houses—Fox, Ambassador, Missouri and St. Louis—they have 15,730 seats to fill, and the New Grand Central, Orpheum and Shubert add between 5000 and 6000 more. Loew's offers some 3162 seats to St. Louis movie patrons, so the wonder will be, as it has been for a good many years, where all the patrons are to come from.

Few occasions have arisen, from 1934 to 1936, for the operators of the Fox, Missouri and Ambassador to use more than the lower floors of those houses, and while the type of flickers offered had the most to do with it, the rival Warner Bros. houses—Orpheum and Shubert—found a great many disappointments as well, and presumably should not have, with the holdings just surrendered to Fanchon & Marco.

NEIGHBORHOOD theaters, too, have been cutting in on first-run business. The last year has seen construction of several fancy houses as close as the corner grocery and several others are going up right now.

Fanchon & Marco are used to problems of big operation, however. The organization which started as a brother and sister dance team (Miss Fanchon and Mr. Marco Wolff) some 20 years ago, then became producers of stage shows for theaters covering the entire country, has been operating theaters only since 1932 but now has the Paramount in Los Angeles, the Roxy in New York, one house in San Francisco, two in Salt Lake City and two in Massachusetts. St. Louis will become headquarters tomorrow when Harry C. Arthur Jr., executive vice-president and general manager, gets into town to conduct affairs personally.

The organization is still producing stage shows and has such units as Olsen and Johnson and Al Pearce and his gang under contract. Although it has been demonstrated again and again, in recent years, that stage shows are not necessary attractions if picture bills are good, and although the experience of Fanchon & Marco with stage shows locally in the last two years has been all but disastrous, some improved plan seems likely for fall, with at least one stage show house.

Picture patrons are likely to find many advantages arising from more stable conditions in local theater operations. Definite policies for certain houses, proper booking of films and proper presentation in comfortable surroundings all will be welcome, after the experiences of 1934-36.

In desperate need of films, from day to day and almost from hour to hour, Fanchon & Marco have had to try anything and everything—playing a money picture in two houses at once, continuing a picture from one house to another, second-run films, revivals, bank night and automobile contests to get customers.

One of the terms of the agreement is that films of the current season for the Orpheum and Shubert shall be turned over to take care of immediate necessity. The Fox already has the new "Show Boat" and a Grace Moore picture, "The King Steps Out," for this month, with minor product to fill in, so many transfers would go to the Ambassador or Missouri. One temporary arrangement was made last Friday when the British fantasy built on H. G. Wells' "Things to Come" was obtained from United Artists. The film was originally intended for Loew's Theater, which has chosen another booking.

With 10-year contracts, both for theaters and films, the organization can now do some long range planning. Whether the withdrawal of Warner Bros. as operators forecasts a separation of production and exhibition sides of the movie industry waits on the future. Fanchon & Marco themselves have got the picture-making bug, and have four shows set for production on the West Coast.

Minera Abass when she entered prison.

The Mohammedan Mosque at Highland Park, Michigan.

FREEDOM AT LAST for the 'Mail Order Bride' Who Was Imprisoned Falsely for 12 YEARS

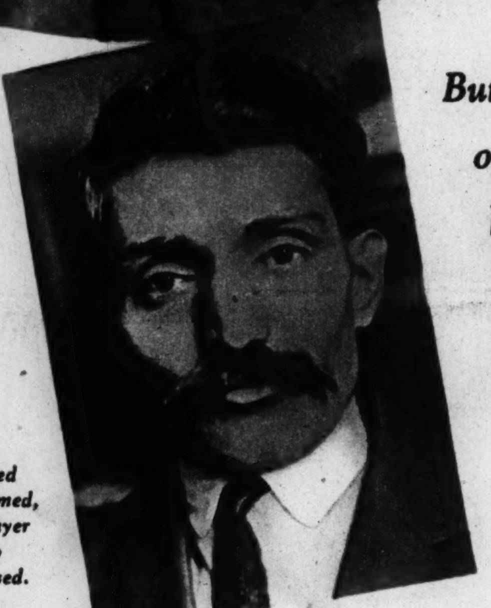
But Minera Abass—Who Was Convicted of Killing Her Husband and Whose Whole Life Was Lived in Subjection of One Kind or Another—Has Only One Desire, to Live Quietly.

She planned to escape to America to avoid the status of a Moslem wife.

She discovered that her husband already had six other wives in Syria.

Though innocent she was convicted of murdering her husband and sentenced to life imprisonment.

Free at last, after 12 years of penal servitude, when the murderer confessed a frame-up.



Ahmed Mohammed, the slayer who confessed.

By KEITH KERMAN

Of the Post-Dispatch Sunday Magazine Staff

DETROIT.

IT HAS taken Minera Abass a long time to find the vaunted freedom of America. When she fled from the bondage common to women in pre-war Turkey it was to become the "mail order" bride of a Mohammedan in a Detroit suburb and enter a bondage merely of a different sort. The death of her husband failed to liberate her; he was murdered, she was convicted of complicity in the crime, and became a prisoner of the State. When she left prison the other day, released as a result of the actual murderer's confession that she was innocent, it was really the first time in her 47 years that she had been free.

And it is an ironic circumstance that now that she has freedom she hasn't a great deal of use for it. She is extremely happy to be at liberty—throughout the 12 years the State kept her in confinement she constantly sought release—but a lifetime of fetters on thought and action has built walls within herself. She asks now only to live placidly, to work at household tasks, practice her religion and be among friendly people. People are trying—so far vainly—to persuade her to go to a movie theater for the first time.

Mild-mannered, matronly, neatly dressed, with a wide, easy smile, Mrs. Abass would hardly be picked as a person to whom startling things happen. Yet fortune has handled this quiet, dark woman with strange and flagrant fickleness.

Minera was born near Constantinople, daughter of a farmer, and reared as a Catholic of the Greek Orthodox Church. Although her parents were Christians, she grew up under restrictions resulting from the inferior position of women in the old Turkish order. She learned to work, but not to read or write; she was expected to be entirely subservient to her father.

The time came when she found out her father was planning a marriage for her. She suspected she was to become the bride of a man who already had wives, and she dreaded that. Casting about for a way to escape, she learned of a man in America whom she might marry. He was a Mohammedan, but she would be the only wife. Through friends the match was made. She got together enough money for the trip, ran away from home and took ship for New York, uplifted by the thought that she was going to a country, where, she had heard, men had but one wife and women were independent beings, not vassals. She wore a veil on the boat, but removed it on entering New York harbor. A few hours after landing she was put on a train for Detroit, and from there taken to the suburb of Highland Park, where the man she was to marry was a resident of the Mohammedan colony.

Hussein Abass was the man. His devoutness was celebrated in the colony; it was said he prayed five times a day. He was a Syrian, some years older than Minera, but a fine-looking fellow. They were married, she recalls, in an office in some big building. That was in 1913.

Then the girl from Turkey discovered that even in free America there was domestic vassalage. As the wife of a Moslem she was required to submerge her individuality in the life of her husband.

She did as required because the tradition of submission still held her, despite her brief revolt. Besides, she liked her husband. She conformed to the Mohammedan standard; became, outwardly at least, a Mohammedan woman. He thought she should not go to movies, or dance or play cards, so she did none of these things. Her place was in his establishment, in his service. Occasionally, after he had become prosperous enough to buy a Ford, the routine was broken by an automobile ride, sometimes even a picnic together. The degree of her isolation from the main current of American life may be judged from the fact that in the 11 years she lived with her husband she learned no English.

SOON after her marriage she made another discovery that upset her badly. She found out, she says, that her husband had six other wives, in Syria. She had fled from Turkey to escape polygamy, only to find herself involved in it in America. So concerned was she that she might have left Hussein but for religious scruples against divorce. He assured her that her position was not affected by his entanglements abroad. She finally accepted that situation, too.

Minera worked hard. She took in boarders and she helped in the coffee shop and grocery that they established. She saw her husband's prosperity grow, and with it his influence in the community and in the religious group.

Another religious leader was Mohammed Karoub. He built a mosque in Highland Park, said to have been the first in this country, and presented it to the colony. Some financing still remained to be done, however, and in connection with this, according to information later made public, there was dissension between Karoub and Abass, each being backed by a faction in the church.

While Hussein was engaged with religious matters and expanding business interests—he was making some real estate investments, in addition to operating his stores—Minera was busy with her duties and small affairs, uninterested in who was President of the United States or Mayor of Detroit, in disarmament or Teapot Dome, in the Charleston or what was happening in the Union of Socialist Soviet Republics. She hadn't found freedom, but she was rather content in her little world.

That world was shattered suddenly and shockingly. On the night of March 13, 1924, Hussein Abass was shot to death as he slept. The police found him dying in his bed. Minera was locked in the bathroom, bound and gagged. She told police, through an interpreter, that a stranger had come in the house, overpowered her and stifled her screams; that shortly after he had left her helpless she heard a shot. But a policeman who took Abyss to the hospital said the dying man told him the slayer was Ahmed Mohammed, a Turkish resident of the colony.

Mohammed was arrested and presently the police announced that he had confessed—and had implicated Minera. She was arrested. Then Karoub was taken into custody as a result of another reported confession by Mohammed.

The trials that followed brought into the prosaic Middle Western courtroom touches of the exotic flavor of the East. Witnesses testified through interpreters. In swearing in Mohammedans the clerk concluded the oath with the words: "So help you Allah." There was unfolded a story of intrigue that might have come out of the Arabian Nights; one of its romantic elements was a love charm.

The love charm was an amulet bearing a prayer written in Arabic. Mohammed, a bony-faced man with a handle-bar mustache, was said to have worn it on his arm and to have gone frequently to the vicinity of Minera's house so that she might be exposed to its influence. Eliminating the many repetitious paragraphs, the translation of the prayer, as offered in court, was about as follows:

"O, God, open the heart of Minera, daughter of Hanaam, to the love of Ahmed, son of Adyalia. . . .

"Witness Morayel, you and your staff, in the name of the highest God, place the love of Mohammed, son of Adyalia, in the heart of Minera, daughter of Hanaam. . . .

"O, God, for the world and all its contents let not these hearts come apart."

Mohammed denied he had worn or even had the amulet. The State introduced evidence concerning it to support the theory, based on Mohammed's confession, that he killed Abass because of a secret liaison with Minera, and with her connivance. The confession was substantially as follows: Mohammed and Minera had been lovers for several years. She feared her husband was going to leave her and return to Syria. She persuaded Mohammed to kill Abass, promising that when she got possession of her husband's estate she would pay her accomplice a sizeable amount of money and marry him. On the night of the murder she kept her husband up late so he would sleep soundly, met Mohammed when he entered the house and gave him a pistol, then had him tie her up and lock her in the bathroom. Mohammed stood for 15 minutes beside the bed where his victim was sleeping before he could gather the resolution to shoot, he said in this most detailed account.

Minera Abass, from a recent photograph made with Captain Edward Deniston, superintendent of the Detroit House of Correction, and Mrs. Deniston.

Mohammed repudiated this confession at his trial, which was the first of the series. But it was admitted in evidence and there was a good deal of other testimony against him. The jury required less than an hour to find him guilty, and he was sentenced to life imprisonment.

Minera next was tried and Mohammed

HEART BALM SUITS OUT—But the GIRLS CONTINUE to SUE

But When Thekla Reardon Wanted $196,000 for Her Services as "Nurse" to Rich Mr. Stymus She Was Met With a Blunt Answer.

NEW YORK.

THE ban on breach of promise suits here is definitely—but curiously—in effect.

When the State law was signed by Governor Herbert H. Lehman in May, 1935, broken hearts quivered with indignation. Deprived of the right to seek balm in dollars, the girls sought solace by charging their erstwhile best beloved with fraud, conspiracy, false imprisonment, assault, libel and slander—sued for payments on services rendered, money loaned, promissory notes at hand.

Thekla Reardon, a retired movie actress of 28, met William Pierre Stymus Jr. in Havana in 1933. Stymus was 74 years old, lonely and ill—and the very sight of Thelma's blonde loveliness made him feel better. His biography made her feel pretty good, too.

An interior decorator, he had done the homes of most of the Rockefellers, of Andrew Carnegie, the Westinghouse and Flagler families, and the Metropolitan Opera House. He was, apparently, rolling in wealth. He asked her to be his nurse.

"But I've never had nursing training," she said.

"You'll learn," he answered.

But there was some misunderstanding, for Thekla thought her patient promised to pay her $200 a month for life and to leave her $100,000 in his will.

The job continued for 33 months. On January 1, 1936, Stymus fired Thekla. He added insult to injury by telling her that in his new will she was to be cut off without a cent. Thekla was terribly, terribly hurt.

Although she had been maintained and supported by him during their 33 months of extensive traveling she received no specific salary from him.

So Thekla might have looked around to see what other girls were accomplishing in the courts. . . .

WHEN the McNaboe-Byrnes bill became law, she would have observed, there were approximately 150 old cases yet to be tried. It was only natural to expect that a fringe of these litigations over love—breach of promise, alienation, seduction—would trail through the courts for months before the final chapter could be written to New York's annual $10,000,000 heart balm business.

What was not anticipated was the ingenuity which would be exercised in devising new sorts of suits to get around a law which expressly provides fines of $1000 to $5000 or imprisonment up to five years, or both, for attorney as well as plaintiff in violations of the ban.

For two months not a single such suit raised its head. Then the first pebble was thrown by Emil K. Ellis, attorney for Mme. Henriette Hautefille Wise, French war nurse. Ellis thought he had a case outside the forbidden classification. Henriette thought she had a good balm suit.

In April, 1934, she said, she had met Lieutenant Robert Miault, trans-Atlantic navigator and a citizen of France.

Each time his ship docked, she related, Miault called on Henriette. When he was at sea he wrote her letters. She kept those missives tenderly tied with ribbon. Then Robert ceased his calls. Henriette thought her heart-break was worth $100,000.

Ellis figured that the case could avoid the New York law by being tried in Federal Court inasmuch as Miault was French.

The navigator's attorneys contended that in this instance Federal law must follow State law. They were right. Federal Judge John C. Knox promptly dismissed the suit.

No matter how she had studied this case,. Thekla Reardon couldn't have drawn any parallels from it. So she might have looked at the suit of 36,-year-old Catherine Fearon, a graduate nurse, against 65-year-old Charles Treanor, insurance man and widower.

The nurse's attorney, Joseph S. Robinson, took the bull by the horns. He denounced the balm ban as unconstitutional, saying: "Certainly the provision in the law which states that an attorney has no right to challenge its constitutionality is in itself a violation of the Constitution."

Miss Fearon's suit was his test case. She said she met Treanor in March, 1935, he proposed several days after the meeting, and she accepted. Miss Fearon went to St. Patrick's Cathedral to make arrangements for the wedding on September 19.

Happy in the promise of marriage, she gave up her job, but, she related, on September 9—only 10 days before the wedding date—Treanor told her he had changed his mind.

Treanor told the Court later that his reversal of marriage plans came after he discovered Miss Fearon "had a reputation for insobriety." Miss Fearon sued for $25,000, but last January Supreme Court Justice Wasservogel gave his opinion of the constitutionality of the State law by dismissing the suit. Robinson appealed. His action is soon to be heard by the Appellate Division.

This suit wouldn't have given Miss Reardon any help, either. . . .

So Miss Reardon put in a bill for services rendered—$196,000 worth!

"Just a heart balm suit in disguise," said Thomas Crimmins Burke, lawyer to the elderly Stymus, who became sicker than ever over the turn his convalescence had taken.

"The alleged agreement entered into was contrary to the public policy and laws of New York State, and was therefore illegal. It should have been in writing"—which was a new angle.

It's a fact unknown to many working girls that, under a little-publicized law passed by the Legislature in 1933, all contracts which take more than one year to fulfill must be in writing.

Burke acidly remarked that her complaint that Stymus had revoked a clause in his will leaving her $100,000 was "a trifle premature."

Burke pointed out that his client was still alive and there was no reason to suppose that he might not make another will and perhaps restore the clause leaving his former companion the $100,000 she sought.

"There is no telling," the lawyer commended dryly. "But it is still too early for a court to adjudicate."

A few days after she filed suit, the charges that Thekla was just a heart balm grabber in disguise were stricken out, as not proved, in a decision handed down by Supreme Court Justice William T. Collins. Likewise he slashed the three other arguments interposed by Stymus and it looked as though the white-bearded decorator would have to tell a jury of his travels.

But Stymus was in no mood to let Thekla win. From his residence in Palm Springs, California, he said very bluntly that he had elected, late in life, to take a mistress and that his health had absolutely nothing to do with the alleged business relationship.

HIS forthright declaration, in an amended answer to her suit, precipitated a fine uproar before Justice John F. Carew. The blonde complainant's attorney, Meyer Levy, dragged out nine definitions of "mistress" from the dictionary. Therefore, he said, the term was ambiguous, and had no place in the answer.

The lawyer had less to say about Stymus' second defense: He discharged Thekla, Stymus said, because the blonde conducted herself in a "disorderly and scandalous" manner that belittled him in the eyes of his friends and his servants.

Furthermore she kept a separate apartment and saw him only irregularly and infrequently, he added. And the alleged contract was contrary to New York laws and therefore, if there was such a contract, he contended, it must be void.

Justice Carew ruled that as long as Stymus set up such a defense that Thekla had better be ready to prove before a jury that she was in fact a nurse to the old man.

Thekla isn't the only girl in New York who is suing for services rendered. At least one other such suit is awaiting trial by jury.

Back in January, 1933, Peggy Dolan, a Scandals girl, met Carl George Preis, a well-to-do manufacturer.

She says she agreed to give up her profession as a theatrical performer, retire to private life, and hold herself available at all times to render whatever assistance Preis might require of her in her new capacity as secretary and companion. In consideration for that service, he declares, he promised to pay her $100 a week for the balance of her life.

But Peg's job was ended in July, 1935. Consequently in November she sued for $166,400, charging breach of contract.

Preis' defense is a little like Stymus,' but not as direct. It is, in effect: "If there was any such contract it should have been in writing."

First Aid Highway Stations for the Victims of Auto Accidents

By a Member of the Post-Dispatch Sunday Magazine Staff

THAT inveterate, calmly expert trouble shooter, the American Red Cross, isn't given to seeing emergencies where none exist. The always impressive spectacle of a Red Cross mobilization isn't likely to be set in motion by a false alarm. When some deadly and destructive force of great magnitude is suddenly turned loose on the country the methodical precise way this huge institution swings into action is always reassuring and terrific to watch. But the Red Cross doesn't go in for setting-up exercises. Its activities are invariably in response to a call for help.

In the case of the latest demonstration of this sort the call came in the form of a statistical report. When fact finders pointed out that 36,400 persons were killed, more than 107,000 permanently crippled and more than 170,000 less seriously injured in automobile accidents in the past year, the Red Cross decided to treat the situation as a national emergency. It was pointed out that the accident rate was a catastrophe just as frightful—however much more diffused—as it would be should every inhabitant of Pennsylvania be suddenly disabled by injury and an entire city the size of Allentown completely exterminated. No one takes these figures lightly, but few realize that while every other kind of accident has been decreasing steadily for more than 10 years, automobile accidents have been bringing the total of death and destruction higher year by year.

RED DOTS ACCIDENTS
BLUE DOTS 5 ACCIDENTS
GREEN DOTS FATALITIES

THE Red Cross program is simple and double-edged. It calls for the establishment of highway first aid stations in every state, up and down every major highway. Two or three years' experience in half a dozen states and the example of several European countries provide a running start for this program, but to most drivers the idea will come as a novelty; the mere fact that the Red Cross has been forced to undertake such an elaborate job and the mere existence of conspicuously marked first aid stations along the roads will have a sobering influence on citizens who have failed to be frightened by imposing figures like those cited above. Aside from that the stations will certainly reduce the incidental perils of highway injuries.

More than two-thirds of the accidents brought about by the indiscretions of motorists happen in small towns and on rural highways — less than a third in the cities. A graphic realization of what this means is not hard to come at: When an accident occurs in a city the most efficient and readily available forces are almost instantly at work to provide medical care for the victims. A highway accident is a different matter.

One is driving down a strip of smooth concrete, sitting in a cozy, well-upholstered cabin. However barren the landscape there is always something genial and easy-going about travel on the highways. Every danger is softened and concealed. . . . Then suddenly someone takes a curve too fast and wide, an unseen peril rears up out of nowhere. . . . The sense of security goes out. . . . A moment's electric tension. . . . Paralytic fear surges up. . . . The driver ducks, jerks his wheel with one desperate spasm of self-defense. The crash. Victims lying torn and cut and hysterically shocked, heaped on the roadside or hidden alone in the wreckage. The nearest doctor may be 20 miles off. A well-meaning passerby picks up the wounded, bundles them indiscriminately into his car, sets off at break-neck speed for what he thinks is the nearest town. Frequently their death on the way would have been readily avoidable.

Highway first aid is nothing new. The good Samaritan wasn't the first to practice it and caring for the victims of highway accidents has been considered virtuous in every country for so many centuries that it is almost taken for granted. The St. John's Ambulance Society was founded in England at the time of the Crusades. Religious orders like that of St. Bernard have become proverbial. In the '90s the French Red Cross and Belgian touring clubs organized to provide roadside facilities for cyclists who got into trouble. Thirteen European countries have been setting up emergency dressing stations similar to those now being planted beside American highways. For more than 30 years there have been first aid stations between Paris and Madrid. Spain, which already has more than 300 dispensaries and detachments of stretcher bearers on the roadsides, plans to place stations at intervals of 15 miles along every highway. Holland already has stations, marked on all highway maps, at intervals of five kilometers. France, Poland, Sweden, Denmark, Norway, all have systems of stations. Even the East Indies, Czecho-Slovakia, Latvia and more remote, less mechanized countries have undertaken to set up systems of this sort.

A great many countries have more accidents than the United States for the number of automobiles they have on their roads, but this country has more than seven times as many fatal accidents as its nearest rival in this respect — England. And the United States has 23.3 deaths per 100,000 people, compared with Germany's 4.8 and Italy's 4.2. In the United States auto fatalities make a generous contribution to the death rate; there are only three diseases which do as much damage—heart trouble, cancer and cerebral hemorrhage.

Red Cross Goes Into Action on Missouri Roads and Will Have, Nationally, a Thousand Stations Where Trained Persons Will Be Ready for Emergencies.

What will the first aid stations change in this situation?—It has already been remarked that they will have a definite psychological effect. So far as their declared functions are concerned, the Red Cross official is well prepared to prophesy, since over 985,000 people have been given first aid instruction in the last 25 years for general purposes.

The volunteers who man first aid highway stations will in no sense supplant or encroach on the work of a physician. So far as their medical function is concerned, they will have the following duties: When they are called to the scene of an accident, they will know where the nearest doctor and hospital are and see to it that the victim gets professional services immediately. They will examine the injured and treat them for shock—which always follows an accident and is sometimes dangerous.

They will staunch arterial bleeding and bandage wounds to minimize the danger of infection. Above all they will recognize the symptoms of a fracture and treat anything that might be one as if it had already been diagnosed by X-ray. When an accident occurs, the passerby's first impulse is to bundle the injured into an automobile, pick them up and prop them in a sitting position. The result is that simple fractures frequently become compound, the victim is laid up for months, when he might have been well in a few weeks; a large part of the 107,000 who were permanently maimed in last year's accidents might have recovered by this time had they been properly handled. No one knows how many deaths and cases of paralysis were avoidable.

Highway patrolmen, trained in Red Cross First Aid, direct the saving of a life through proper handling of the victim on an improvised stretcher, following a serious automobile accident.

The first stage in the Red Cross highway first aid program involves the setting up of about 1000 stations throughout the country by next autumn. About 50 will be placed in Missouri by then and the first was just certified and installed at St. Joseph. The various chapters—there are 307 involved—will have direct charge of setting up the stations, establishing their locations and staffing them with trained volunteers. The St. Louis chapter is now laying plans for establishing stations in St. Louis County and the preliminary work here is probably typical of what is taking place all over the country, though each chapter is always at liberty to vary its methods to suit the peculiarities of local conditions.

When P. H. Byrns, executive secretary of the chapter here, was asked to consider the problem of installing a system of stations in the county his first reaction was skepticism; the large number of hospitals and ambulance services in the vicinity seemed to make any additional set-up superfluous. In order to find out whether the general situation is applicable here, he commissioned Dr. Dean Sauer, former house surgeon at City Hospital, to make an exhaustive investigation of the field.

Dr. Sauer's first job was to find out where accidents were occurring, what facilities are available in sections where the peril is especially high. With the assistance of Constables', Coroner's and Sheriff's offices and the police, he tabulated 528 accidents in the county last year and marked their locations on a map with pins.

NO SUCH survey had ever been done before in the county. It showed that about half of the fatalities were accidents in which pedestrians were struck down and that most of these happen in the new suburban sections just outside city limits. Most collisions occur at the intersections of major highways and lanes or secondary rural roads. Such junctions as Lemay Ferry road and Mattis School road account for a larger number of accidents than any other kind, although the Lindbergh belt highway is marked with blue pins (symbolizing five accidents) at its intersections with Olive Street, Clayton, Ladue, Big Bend and Gravois road. St. Charles Rock road is the most menacing of all and Natural Bridge becomes a death trap as it passes through Pine Lawn.

Byrns wants the deaths analyzed to see whether some might have been prevented, though the relatively small number makes it unlikely that this analysis will be of great value. The next step in the procedure will be to decide on the number of stations to be set up and their approximate location. Finally the volunteers must be found, trained by a physician or qualified instructor, tested and equipped—and there are 400 qualified instructors in Missouri, some with war-time experience.

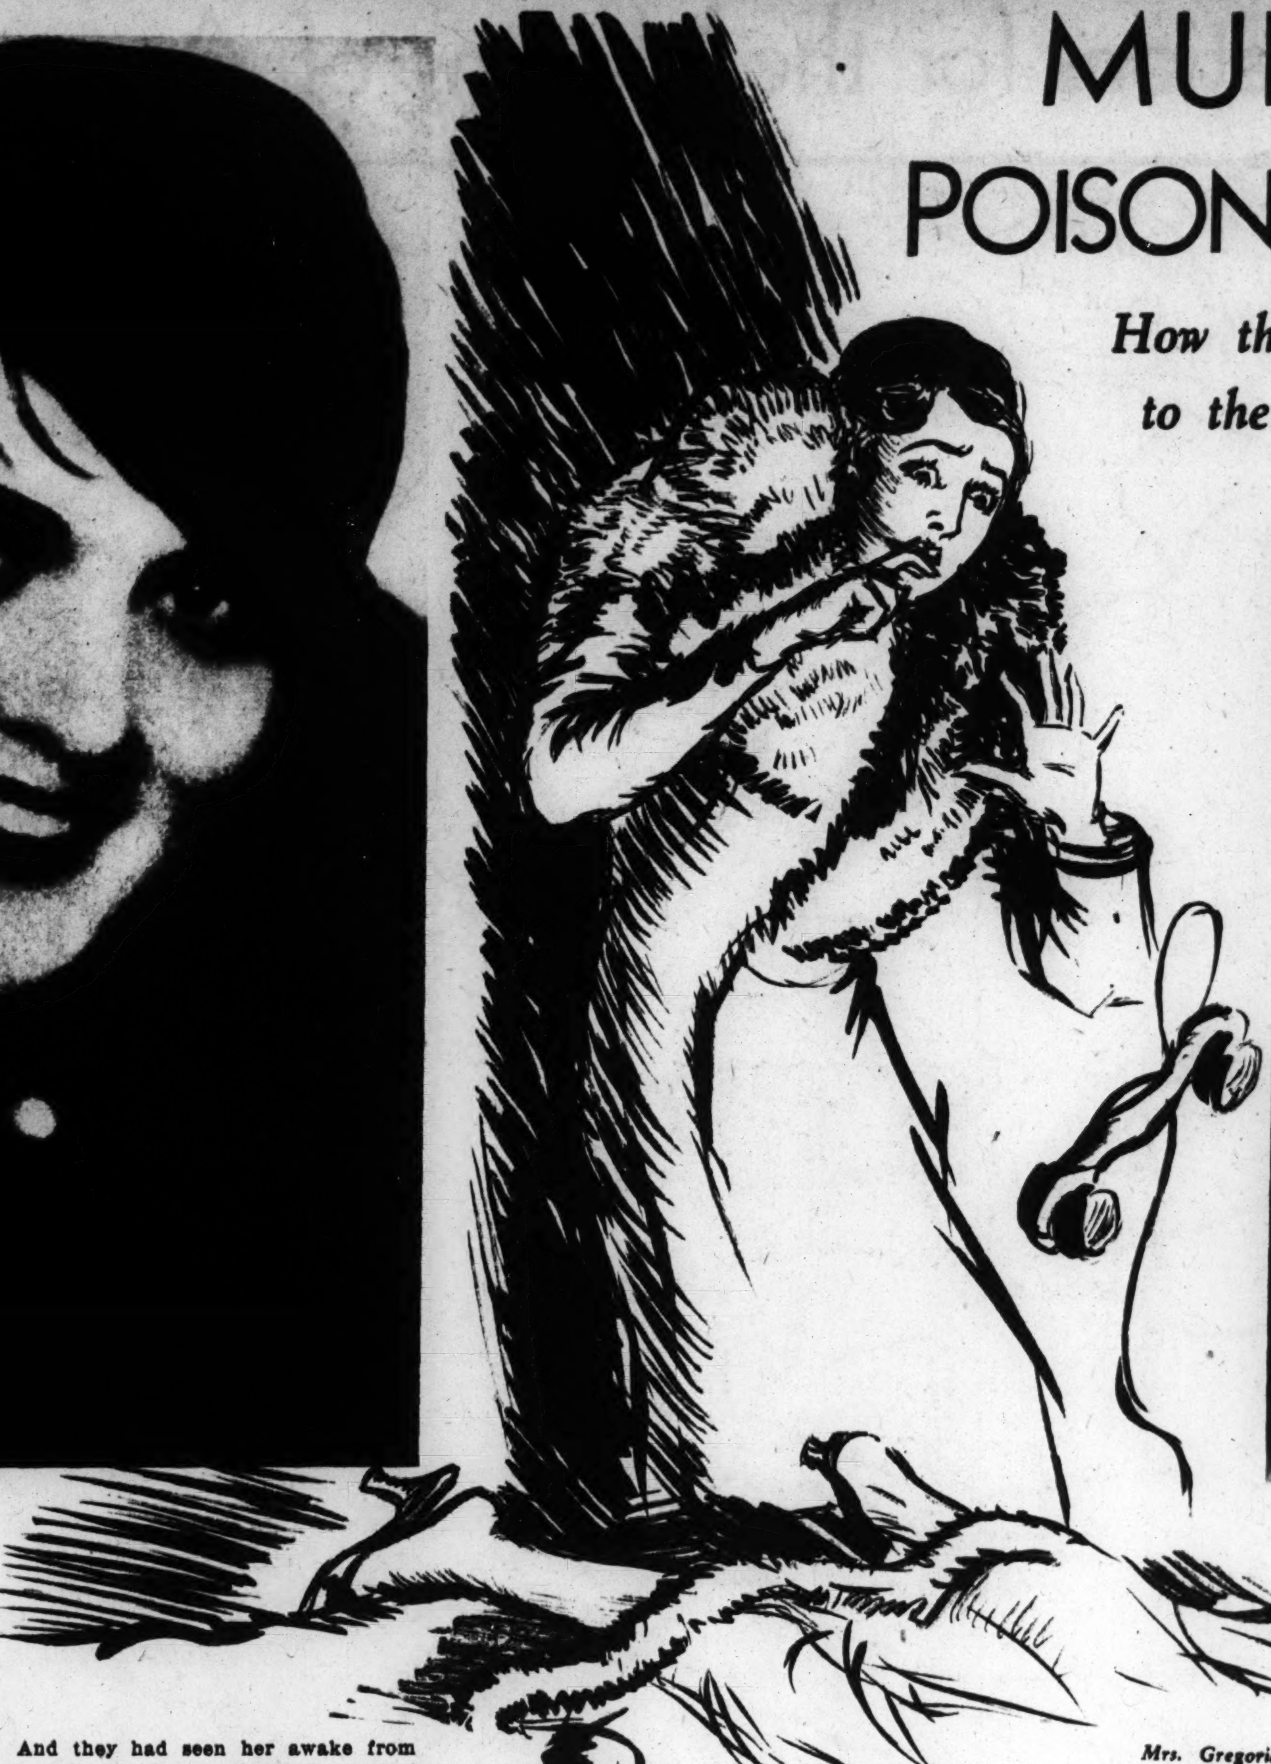
When it is completed throughout the United States, the system of first aid stations prepared to dispense methodized mercy to the victims of highway mishaps will have harnessed the humanitarianism of at least 30,000 active volunteers in the stations alone. These will be kept up to snuff by a large corps of inspectors and instructors. They will be aided by road menders, weight officers, patrolmen and other mobile units, chief among them the truck drivers — those ever-present Samaritans who almost invariably supply the common sense and good will necessary at the scene of an accident or a breakdown. Truck drivers will be given the training and equipment as soon as the stationary units are nearly completed. In the Red Cross project of reaching highway services of all sorts, 14 of the 16 Highway Patrol details in Missouri, for example, have already been trained and equipped for first aid.

Meanwhile, one out of every 20 citizens who read this account is going to be injured by an automobile during the next five years. And the accident death rate is rising seven times as fast as the national birth rate. . . . So far as the Red Cross is concerned, this is war.

MURDERED by a POISONED TOOTHBRUSH

How the Rich Architect Was Forced to Confess to the Slaying of Rumania's Loveliest Actress After He Had Publicly Laughed at the Police.

Tita Christescu.



Mrs. Gregorian answered, heard a man's voice which sounded muffled and distant ask quietly, "Is she still alive?"

BUCHAREST.

HAGGARD and on edge from sleepless tension, Captain Antoniu Marcu, detective in command of the homicide squad of this little capital, paced the floor of his spacious office at police headquarters. He was plainly on the spot. The man he suspected of having committed the most celebrated and heinous murder that had come within his province in years had publicly suggested that he call in a foreign expert to help him solve the mystery. Such assurance on the part of a suspect was trying enough in itself. In this case the suggestion had been taken up by the press and echoed by the public until Captain Marcu began to feel that he himself was the quarry of the man hunt he was supposed to be leading. Obviously he was up against a shrewd and implacable opponent. He began to feel that everybody was on the latter's side.

Decidedly uncomfortable and nearly at his wit's end the good detective tried to reconstruct the crime and review the meager evidence as if it were new and fresh in his mind—a futile task since he knew every detail backwards and could have recited the whole story in his sleep. . . . It was on Christmas eve that he had begun his work; and already the new year of 1936 was wearing off its shiny promise and settling into a hopeless dogged meaningless routine.

It was a sensational case because the victim was Tita Christescu, the loveliest and best loved actress on the Roumanian stage, the prima donna of the Regina Maria Theater. Called to her sumptuous apartment on the night of the murder, Captain Marcu had found the voluptuous form of the actress thrown across the rich counterpane of her four-poster. Her magnificent features were twisted with fear and pain. She was clearly dead. And only 24. Even the matter-of-fact, competent detective-captain must have been moved.

Tita Christescu had spoken of death by poisoning that very night, for she was playing Juliet at the royal theater. It had been a moving and successful performance. The audience had heard her recite the moving and portentous farewell—

> Good night, good night: Parting > is such sweet sorrow,
> That I shall say good night till it > be morrow.

They had suffered vicariously as she lay cold and white in the tomb and heard the passionate words—

> Eyes, look your last:
> Arms, take your last embrace;
> and lips, O! you,
> The doors of breath, seal with a > righteous kiss
> A dateless bargain to engrossing > death.

And they had seen her awake from her sleep to face the lonely horrors of the tomb and the spectacle of her lover dead. They had seen her suck the poison from his lips and die. And then they had been jolted back to reality by the curtain and had gone away reassured and elevated by the magnificence of the tragedy.

The great Christescu had left the theater with her maid and gone home to her quiet apartment in the Boulevard Elizabetu, weary after the exertions of the performance. It had been one of her most successful. Her parents awaited her there to congratulate her and to wish her a merry Christmas. They left and she undressed and made ready to go to bed. It wasn't late, only a little after 11, but she was unusually tired. At 11:30 she had completed her evening toilet and was just ready to retire when her sister, Mrs. Mikai Gregorian, dropped in to say good night. Passing the apartment in a taxi, she had noticed that the lights were still burning and had the driver wait for her as she went upstairs on the same errand her parents had completed 15 minutes earlier.

MADAME CHRISTESCU greeted her affectionately and led her into the sitting room to chat for a few minutes before a final good night. They talked for a moment about the party Mrs. Gregorian had just left. Suddenly, in the midst of the conversation, the actress blanched, clutched at her night gown with one hand, gripped her sister's arm with the other.

"I feel terribly ill," she gasped in an agonized voice. "The tooth paste. . . . Such an odd taste. . . ." The maid flew to her side at Mrs. Gregorian's outcry. A physician arrived a few minutes later. When he examined her, Mme. Christescu was already dead.

But even as the doctor was trying to revive her the telephone rang. Mrs. Gregorian answered, heard a man's voice which sounded muffled and distant ask quietly. "Is she still alive?" She dropped the receiver, then picked it up again and called for the police. When Captain Marcu appeared the victim's body was still warm.

He had had no trouble eliciting these facts and even in locating the telephone from which the mysterious grim question had been spoken. His men worked rapidly and efficiently, tracing down clues. They were unable to get any information about the man who had made the phone call a few minutes before. It had come from a suburban railway station. Both booths there were right across from the ticket seller's window. The agent on duty was unable to recall seeing anyone enter either booth around 11:30.

Dr. Liviu Ciulley, who confessed the murder.

Mrs. Mikai Gregorian, Mme. Christescu's sister.

Captain Marcu questioned Mrs. Gregorian in detail. Her story was convincing. It was corroborated by the maid. The physician had another contribution to make.

He told Captain Marcu that the actress had suffered from a very early stage of cancer of the stomach. He had promised her to keep this secret. She didn't want her family to know about it and she refused flatly to undergo an operation, in spite of the doctor's urgent advice and belief that the cancer could readily be cured. "I should rather kill myself," she told him, "than die under the knife." She had made that statement only last November. To Captain Marcu it looked very much like suicide. But only momentarily.

The police surgeon found evidence of the incipient cancer. He also found positive proof of poisoning. The drug was potassium cyanide. The tearful story supplied by Mrs. Gregorian was supported by the discovery that Mme. Christescu's tooth paste was saturated with enough cyanide to kill off a dozen people. The only finger prints found on the tube were her own. The container was of the conventional kind. There was no obvious indications that it had been tampered with. The metal seal which closed its posterior end was tightly clamped on. The amount of poison found inside the tube made it difficult to tell how the thing had been done. Captain Marcu reverted to the suicide theory, puzzled by the mysterious telephone call, but not entirely convinced that a murder had been committed. Someone who knew of a suicide plan and had resigned himself to it might conceivably have phoned in a moment of anguish or remorse, hoping to hear that the actress had changed her mind. . . . The temperament and dramatic tendencies of Tito Christescu had to be taken into consideration; a Christmas eve suicide after a calm good night to her family might reasonably have been her intention.

The actress' father refused to accept this reasoning and was ready to provide the motivation for a murder and name the likely suspect. Gheorgiu Christescu is a deputy in the Roumanian House of Representatives and leader of the small and truculent Socialist Party. Dealing with him was distasteful to the honest policeman, who despises Socialists. There have been occasional outbursts of violence in Roumania and Deputy Christescu has had occasion to accuse the police of gratuitous violence and even of murder. In spite of which the Detective-Captain was forced to lend credence to the tale, broken by fitful sobbing, recited by the bereaved father.

For five years, it seems, Tita Christescu had been on intimate terms with a prominent architect and industrialist, Dr. Liviu Ciulley. They had met for the first time when the girl was only 19 and for some time she had believed him a bachelor. They were seen together frequently and a gossip writer in one of the newspapers remarked the fact on the occasion of Miss Christescu's winning a national beauty contest in 1933. The writer went on to add that Dr. Ciulley was a husband and the father of two children. He is 41, her senior by 17 years. Because of the deception he had practiced she had avoided him as much as possible thereafter, not altogether successfully, for he was apparently infatuated with her.

LAST May she was introduced at court to a young man in the diplomatic corps, Coza Hutta. They fell in love almost immediately and planned to marry. Hutta was attached to the Roumanian legation in Paris, which kept them apart a great deal, but the wedding was to have taken place last March on the occasion of his appointment as counselor to the legation. Deputy Christescu remarked that he had frequently noticed that his daughter seemed worried about something. He had known nothing of the cancer diagnosis, of course, and had reason to believe that she was troubled by Dr. Ciulley's attentions. He frankly believed that the architect was guilty of the murder.

Captain Marcu wasn't convinced, but this story supplied him at least with a motive for a murder and he felt it necessary to conduct an investigation into the lives of both of Mme. Christescu's suitors. He gave orders that the investigation should be conducted with utmost secrecy. Both men were socially prominent and patently above suspicion. Any aspersions on their characters might have been highly dangerous, and Captain Marcu was nothing if not discreet — especially where the wealthy and the aristocratic were concerned. Dr. Ciulley was not only a prominent architect, but also chairman of the board of a large chemical concern. He was a leading power in the financial life of Bucharest. Hotta came of a good family and seemed destined to be prominent as a diplomatist.

The necessity for caution became even more apparent when it was learned that both technical suspects were able to produce what, in Roumania, are called iron-clad alibis. Hotta was in Paris and wasn't expected back until January. Ciulley had left Bucharest on December 10 for an annual fortnight of skiing at Sinaia—90 miles north of the capital. That would not have brought him back until January 2.

No amount of discretion on Captain Marcu's part could, however, keep the triangle from the notice of the press. Central Europe clamored (if that is the accurate way to say it) for the apprehension of a suspect and a speedy trial. The more sensational branch of the newspaper industry was irrepressible, openly publishing the triangular implications in the case and even asking for an examination of the two suitors.

When Dr. Ciulley, dapper and moustached and glowing with sunburn, arrived home he was magnificent. He gave an exclusive interview to one of the papers which had loudly aspersed him, offered to put himself at the disposal of the police and even suggested that they accept his assistance in solving the case. Captain Marcu studied the interview exhaustively and gave even closer attention to a statement published on the following day.

IF THE first had seemed to carry a supercilious sneer between the lines, the second was larded with that quality. Since the mystery "obviously taxed the usual facilities" of the police, Dr. Ciulley was quoted as saying, would it not be advisable to call in Sir Bernard Spilsbury, England's Home Office medical expert, who is frequently requested to assist Scotland Yard in unraveling its most imponderable cases?

Such brazen impudence was too much for the poor detective to stomach. Casting policy to the winds he descended on Dr. Ciulley's apartment with three aides armed with a search warrant and impressive frowns. Pretending to be as stupid as Dr. Ciulley implied, they burst into his immaculate and well-appointed diggings to rummage. Captain Marcu didn't have a single tangible thing to hunt; he hoped the suave man of affairs would betray himself by his over-confidence and let some hint slip out. . . . He didn't.

The posse didn't stop to brood over this disappointment. From Dr. Ciulley's apartment they went directly to the house of Dr. Alesander Ciulley, the architect's brother, who is known here as one of the most able and successful physicians. He was at home and not too evidently unwilling to talk to the police. As they made a cursory examination of his office he betrayed no anxiety or resentment. Not until Captain Marcu began a methodical and deliberate examination of the contents of his desk did the physician show any signs of impatience. But the detectives who were watching him immediately noticed a change as this examination proceeded. Suddenly beads of sweat stood out on his forehead and he trembled noticeably. When the Captain extracted from under a pile of papers in a bottom drawer a glittering brand new syringe and turned to the doctor for an explanation, the latter was ready to talk.

About the beginning of December, he explained, his brother had asked him to innoculate his two children. Having no syringe handy, he had bought this one for the purpose. He had forgotten to take it with him when he left the apartment—it was on December 2 he recalled—and had thought nothing of it, neglecting to ask for its return, until his brother's name was mentioned in connection with the Christescu murder. An unwilling suspicion impelled him to stop in and call for the syringe, which he himself discovered lying in a bathroom medicine chest. He even admitted that he had thought of throwing it away, finally deciding instead to hide it in his desk. . . . This recital was the most important tangible clue Captain Marcu had been able to unearth.

The fact that Dr. Alesander Ciulley entertained a suspicion that his own

SKETCHES FROM LIFE

High Lights on Unusual Personalities

DESMOND X. HOLDRIDGE
CAROLINE RISQUE

From the Encyclopedia to a Career of Adventure in Far Places

BALTIMORE, Maryland.

THE letter "X," most interesting of the alphabet with its popular and esoteric connotations, never appeared more appropriately than in the name of the latest searcher for Paul Redfern, Desmond X. Holdridge,—the initial standing for Xavier. Indeed, there are few such familiars of the unknown as this still young explorer, navigator, author, ethnologist, cartographer and rarest of companions.

A family tradition indicates that no male Holdridge ever died in bed and certainly the 29 years of life so far enjoyed by Desmond give promise that his end will mark him a true member of his clan.

The career of this already veteran explorer, at present out of touch with civilization while seeking the American aviator lost nine years ago in South American jungles, began prosaically in Albany where his parents were friends and neighbors of the Franklin Roosevelts.

A feature of his career which has mystified many of his close friends, namely, his ability to converse on terms of easy give and take with specialists in many fields of learning and his literary output which is welcomed alike by scientific periodicals and "high brows" among the magazine fraternity, although he stopped school at the age of 15, was explained recently, at least in part, by his father.

Captain Gerald O. Holdridge, whose career is no less colorful than that of his son, pointed out that when Desmond was 10 years old, he "made life miserable" for his parents until they bought him the Encylopaedia Britannica and that for the next two years he virtually "lived with it." His ability, even at that age, to read with great rapidity coupled with his phenomenal memory more than made up for college training.

LEST anyone even for a moment imagine that this boy, known then as now to his intimates as "Bud," was merely bookwormish, let it be revealed at once that at the age of 19, when heading his first expedition into the far north, Donald MacMillan, then in Labrador, gave a widely used statement to the Associated Press in which he included the following paragraph:

"Desmond Holdridge, though scarcely out of his 'teens, is no foolhardy bravado, but a skilled, intrepid navigator with the adventurous spirit of the old sea kings."

This praise of one of the youngest from one of the greatest Arctic explorers followed the wreck of Holdridge's first boat, a little 30-foot Nova Scotia fishing craft named Dolphin, during the summer of 1925 in a hurricane off Labrador.

After Holdridge and his three companions were picked up and put ashore by a French Canadian fisherman, McMillan became interested and insisted on advancing funds which he assumed would be used by the boy to transport himself and his ex-shipmates to their respective homes. What was his amazement to learn some time later that the money had gone for the purchase of a 38-foot Nova Scotia schooner in which Holdridge was continuing his course into the Arctic, after rechristening it Mona Marie, for the craft to which he owed his recent rescue from the icy sea.

A notable circumstance in connection with "Bud's" earlier voyages of discovery is the complete absence of a financial "angel" to aid in making his dreams come true. Despite his youth, scarcely more than adolescence, he, by his own efforts, earned practically all the funds expended on his first three trips to the blank spaces on the map.

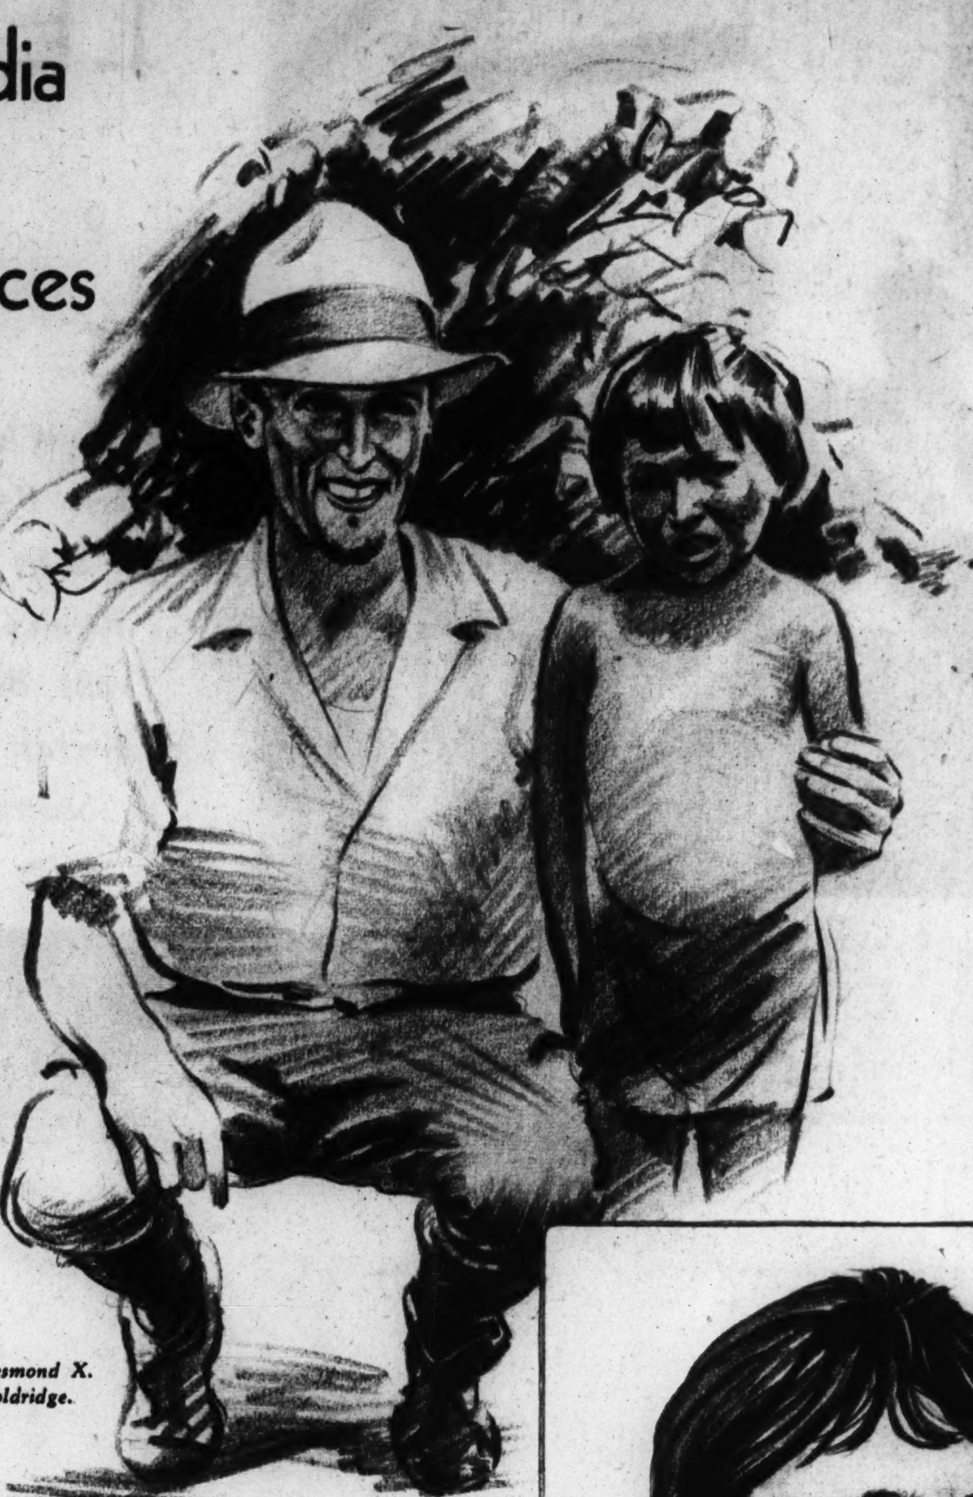
This was done by going to sea and obtaining, at the earliest age permitted by law, a third and then a second mate's ticket, and by judicious saving of his pay. His trips have been carried out with economy which strikes professional explorers as incredible.

In connection with his early "jobs," it is interesting to note that his first one, undertaken at the age of 15, was with a newspaper, the Knickerbocker Press, of Albany, and that he won a raise in pay the first week by repairing a linotype machine which was idle pending the arrival of a repair man from the factory. He explained at the time, quite casually: "I have been reading about these machines."

The first voyage into the unknown which began in the Dolphin in Labrador ended in Baltimore when the young skipper sailed his Mona Marie down Chesapeake Bay and up to the Maryland Yacht Club where he received a royal welcome. A few weeks later he was off again, this time bound for the Far East aboard a freighter.

Then, in 1926 he resumed the life he loved, this time visiting almost totally unknown sections of British Guiana, Venezuela and Brazil.

On this trip Holdridge became one of approximately half a dozen white men who have climbed Mount Roraima, the scene chosen by Sir Arthur Conan Doyle for "The Lost World." He reached the top, an almost inaccessible plateau, only to be forced by fire to descend before he was able to explore the summit which has had no connection with the life of the rest of the world since the mountain was formed and which Indian lore describes as the home of malign spirits.



Desmond X. Holdridge.

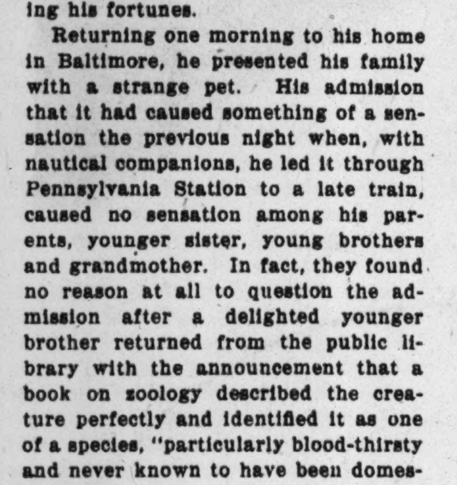
The sole approach to mysterious mountain was surrounded by forest fires which, from his point of vantage on the summit, Holdridge could see spreading rapidly. In making their escape, he and his sole white companion, George Robinson, and their Indian retainers, had their feet terribly burned.

Holdridge was obliged to leave his English friend with Indians outside the fire area and push on alone to Ciudad Bolivar for aid. When he arrived there he discovered he was an object of search by three governments.

Another brief visit to his home and he was off once again on a merchantman bound for the West Coast of South America in the hope of recouping his fortunes.

Returning one morning to his home in Baltimore, he presented his family with a strange pet. His admission that it had caused something of a sensation the previous night when, with nautical companions, he led it through Pennsylvania Station to a late train, caused no sensation among his parents, younger sister, young brothers and grandmother. In fact, they found no reason at all to question the admission after a delighted younger brother returned from the public library with the announcement that a book on zoology described the creature perfectly and identified it as one of a species, "particularly blood-thirsty and never known to have been domesticated."

It was, in short, a jaguar.



The question of what to do with Chamoco split the family for a time into two factions, but gradually the beautiful little jaguar won a warm place in the affections of the entire household, including a dog and cat already in residence, and found a favorite resting place on the bed with Bud's invalid grandmother. His end, however, was tragic.

He died of pneumonia in the kid brother's arms.

The Mona Marie was retrieved from an Annapolis ship yard early in 1928 and again headed for Labrador. Later the same year, alternating arctics and tropics, a visit was made to the Amazon where little known islands of the delta of that stream yielded results of such worth to archaeologists that Holdridge on his return to the United States found himself with a solid reputation.

What has been referred to since as the Holdridge-Putnam Labrador-Greenland expedition followed when David B. Putnam joined with Holdridge and three others aboard the little Jahalla, the story of whose voyage in the far north has been told in a volume by Putnam.

The Brooklyn Museum and Rowe Metcalfe of New York now financed an expedition headed by Holdridge and conducted on a far more elaborate scale than any in which he had taken part in previously. He remained in the wilds for two years and when he reached New York it was with information which caused the American Geographical Society to destroy plates for new maps of South America and redraw an area as large as Pennsylvania on the basis of the Holdridge discoveries.

The geographical results of this trip were later published by the society under title, "Exploration Between the Rio Branco and the Sierra Purima by Desmond Holdridge."

He also brought with him a large quantity of Indian implements and utensils now in the Brooklyn Museum, while the story of his trip has been told in the popular book, "Pindorama—Jungle to You," published in 1933.

While working in the Brooklyn Museum classifying his finds, Holdridge met Miss Elizabeth Hamlin, its art director. Her tastes and his were equally varied and ran along similar lines and soon after he left the museum and retired to a mountain fastness on St. John's, one of the Virgin Islands, she gave up her position to join him and become Mrs. Holdridge. She is a grandddaughter of the Vice-President of the United States during the first Lincoln administration.

After two years of blissful married life in this retreat, "without a single radio or automobile," a letter from Mrs. Holdridge recently informed Bud's parents that she and her husband had taken ship for Georgetown, British Guiana. He had gone in search of Redfern and she was awaiting his return from the jungle.

He went from Georgetown to Paramaribo, Dutch Guiana, where he organized his own party of Indians and set off with them about February 20. No word has come from them since to indicate whether they have had any success in locating the man concerning whom for years there have been persistent rumors indicating that he was still alive.

Holdridge has been in touch with another American flyer, Art Williams, who recently concluded an unsuccessful search for the lost aviator. It was understood that should Holdridge find Redfern and he were unable to travel, Holdridge would come out alone to Paramaribo, get Williams and bring Redfern out by plane.

Perhaps the chief reason for hope that Holdridge may succeed where so many have failed lies in the qualities of the man which have made his career unique. In addition to unusual abilities and the luck which is a necessary ingredient of success, Holdridge's phenomenal record is perhaps due more than to any other cause to his obvious freedom from self-seeking. Money making never seemed important enough to make him abandon an interesting quest.

Modesty also is characteristic of him and is indicated by his refusal to pose for any studio pictures. His answer to requests for such photographs is to the point:

"I'd rather have people ask why I don't have a picture taken than why I do."

IN ADDITION to sailing "faerie seas forlorn" which has been his chief interest, Holdridge is known to many as the navigator of racing graft in New York-Bermuda and New York-Gibson Island races in which the most famous yachts participate. He also had the rare experience of cruising aboard a Soviet merchantman to write of conditions aboard.

But that special guardianship which the geddess of good fortune maintains over her favorites and which has so often shown itself in the life of this beloved son of hers, can be well illustrated by a single incident:

On returning from his trip to the Orient, Holdridge and a fellow Baltimorean were discharged in San Francisco and finished their trip driving night and day across the continent. It was hours after he reached home that his family discovered that the automobile in which he had made his 3000-mile trip had been demolished by a street car and abandoned by its uninjured occupants just three blocks away, and their first report of the accident was an account of it in the newspapers.

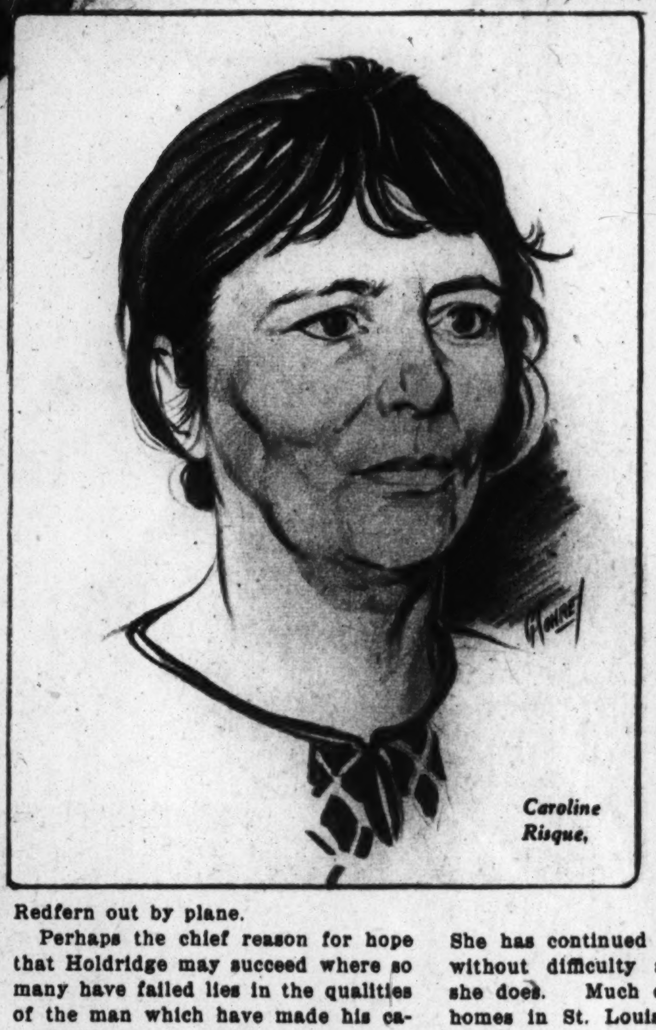
A TEACHER Who DISTRUSTS 'INSTRUCTION'

ASKED if she accomplished so much by systematic budgeting of her time, Caroline Risque Janis looked startled. A friend standing by smiled. "Me systematic?" There seemed to be something amazing in that notion. Presently she recovered sufficiently to laugh. "I'm afraid not. I just rush about and things seem to get done."

These days, Miss Risque teaches sculpture at the John Burroughs School in the forenoon, then, without taking time for lunch, hurries to the Washington University School of Fine Arts, where she now conducts the classes of the late Victor Holm, head of the Department of Sculpture, for the rest of this academic year. The time left from these duties she uses in working on her own sculpture, managing her home in Clayton and maintaining social contacts with a lot of people who are attracted by her active, exploring mind and stimulating personality. Fortunately she doesn't require much sleep. Probably she would be unhappy if she didn't have an appalling number of things to do.



Caroline Risque.

A small, erect, green-eyed woman with black, graying hair, Caroline Risque has been a bouyant element in the cultural life of her native St. Louis since she was a girl. Even then her intellectual energy was sending off sparks in several directions. She sculptured, painted, played the violin, composed musical pieces, wrote verse and children's stories. When still a student in the Art School of Washington University, which she attended after high school and Hosmer Hall—she was selling her statuary, small, graceful studies of children or designs for fountains for the most part. She has continued ever since to sell without difficulty almost everything she does. Much of her work is in homes in St. Louis and the county, but for years there has been a steady demand for it in the East.

A few years before the war, Miss Risque went to Paris, where she studied for a time with Paul Bartlett. In Paris she had to choose between sculpture and the violin as a career. A French musician thought her playing so promising that he offered to take her as a pupil without pay. But she wanted to create rather than interpret, so she stuck to her statue-making and did well enough at it to exhibit at the Paris Salon—a fountain design called "The Little Nymph."

Back in the United States, the young sculptor spoke disparagingly of the current artistic fads, cubism and futurism, and enthusiastically of woman suffrage, also a burning question of the day. At a summer resort in Maine she was rescued from drowning by a St. Louisan named Julian Janis. In 1915 she married her rescuer, who is now manager of the safe deposit department of a bank.

Unlike many women engaged in practice of the arts, Miss Risque has found it practicable to have both a lasting marriage and a career. For 20 years she has kept her husband, her maiden name (for professional use) and her individuality. The couple has a daughter, Aline, now 15 years old, who seems to be headed for distinction as a painter; she began winning prizes with her pictures when she was 13 years old.

The Janis home is a sort of labyrinthine museum of things that Caroline Risque saw and liked and bought, of unusual gifts, heirlooms and bits of her own work—pictures, pottery, sculpture, tapestry, books and what not. A good many people who like to talk about art and music and books and the like make a practice of dropping in there casually and informally. They try not to stumble over a large French poodle or an eccentric Welsh terrier. Somewhere about the place there is usually a duck or some other unusual pet that Aline is harboring.

In the garden at her home Miss Risque exercises a hobby that is characteristic of her. She raises plants that are difficult to grow in this climate. It's just an outcrop of the temperament which considers "Don't do this" or "That can't be done" a personal challenge.

The sculptor doesn't burden herself much with facts. Things accomplished she doesn't dwell on. She doesn't remember the prizes she has won, and recalls with difficulty some of her most ambitious sculptures. There is a fountain of hers somewhere in the medical school group at the University of Chicago, another fountain is at the Community School on Clayton road, and a figure of a boy is in a museum in New Orleans. Bertrand Russell, the philosopher-mathematician-etc., has a sample of her work—a bronze figure of a child. Last summer she completed a Madonna and Child group in stone for St. Mary's Church at Helena, Arkansas.

Children used to be Miss Risque's favorite sculptural subjects—particularly small boys. Now she finds herself most interested in architectural sculpture. There has been a corresponding change in her style. The intimate charm and graceful mannerisms of her earlier work have gradually given way to a severer, more impersonal and more abstract treatment better suited to her broadened range of interest.

IT REQUIRES some discipline for her to complete her pieces of sculpture because by the time she is ready to put on the finishing touches she is impatient to start something new. She's never satisfied with the job she has done; it never seems as good as she wanted it to be. Sometimes, when she happens to see a piece of her work months after it is finished and can view it quite objectively, she is surprised to find something in it that she didn't know she had succeeded in putting there—something, probably, which the intelligence in her fingers accomplished without the knowledge of her conscious mind.

About five years ago she began teaching sculpture at the John Burroughs School. It was not her aim to turn hordes of new sculptors loose on the world, but to give her pupils an interest that would serve them throughout life both for artistic expression and appreciation. The measure of her success, as she views it, is not the fact that several of these pupils have developed such skill as to win scholarships for advanced work in art schools, but that many youngsters at John Burroughs have learned to model well enough to get a great deal of satisfaction out of doing it and gained ability to enjoy understandingly the work of master sculptors.

These classes are informal and friendly. Miss Risque encourages and stimulates; there is no adverse criticism until pupils are far enough advanced to take it without discouragement. The boys and girls select their own subjects—they must be original—and, beyond certain fundamentals, work out their ideas just about as they please, without restriction as to style. It is the instructor's policy to instruct as little as possible—to let the clay figures wrought by the children's hands be their own creations, representing the free play of their creative talent. In a display cabinet at the school is evidence of what remarkable work juveniles can do under such conditions. The art department won a national award two years ago.

Miss Risque spends some time almost every year in New Mexico, at Sante Fe and Taos. She was nearly killed out there in an automobile accident a year or so ago. She doesn't play bridge—carefully refrained from learning. She would like to work on a statue in utter seclusion, without any interruption, for 48 hours at a stretch, but hasn't much hope she can ever manage it.

The NEW LEVIATHAN of the AIR

And Why Its Backers Believe It Will Start a New Rivalry for Trade Between Aircraft and Seacraft.

BERLIN.

THE new leviathan of the air — Germany's "Hindenburg"—is now carrying out its trans-Atlantic schedule. Its first round trip to South America was recently completed and it is ready to embark upon the career that its designers and backers had planned for it, that of offering the first definite challenge from the air to the luxury steamers that ply between Europe and the Americas. The Hindenburg in tonnage, volume and lifting power surpasses all previous airships. Does it have enough advantages to take passengers away from such surface ships as the Queen Mary and the Normandie? Many experts believe that it has —and that in any case its operation marks the beginning of a rivalry between air and surface craft which will grow greater as time goes on..

The Hindenburg—also known as the LZ-129—is on a par with the ocean greyhound in many respects. If her propellers stop, the LZ-129 "floats" in air just as a disabled steamship floats in water. In other respects, too, the airship contends with much the same contions that one finds on an ocean vessel.

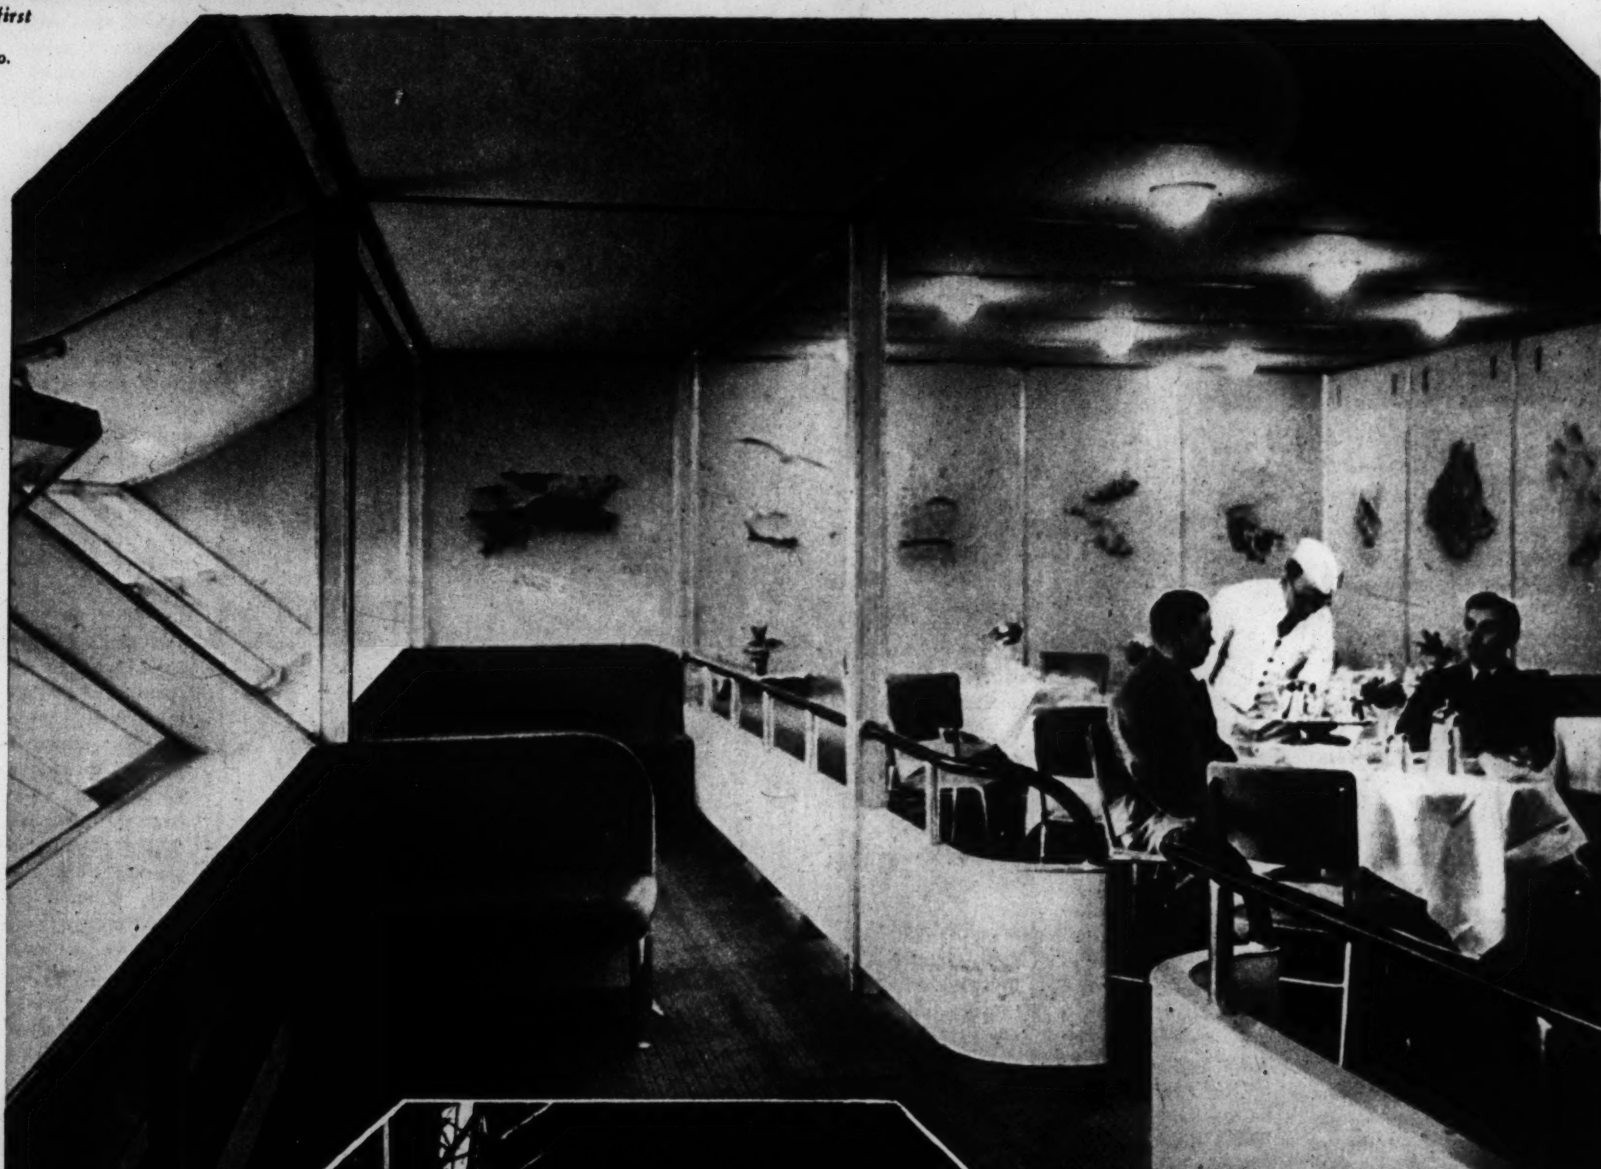
Nothing larger than the Hindenburg has ever been launched into the atmosphere. She outclasses the British R-100, the R-101, the Akron, and the Macon. She contains about twice the gas volume of the famous Graf Zeppelin.

The Hindenburg's gas volume, 7,063,000 cubic feet, equals the capacity of 14 stratosphere ballons such as the one used by Piccard on his first flight.

The Hindenburg can accomplish the greatest hoisting feat in aeronautical history. The ship has a total lift of 472,940 pounds. Raising this 236-ton load against the pull of gravity constitutes one of the most formidable achievements of modern aviation. Her lift capacity equals the weight of a full-size steam locomotive, or five loaded freight cars, or 50 automobile trucks.

Such impressive power makes one wonder, "What next?"

If the Hindenburg performs according to expectations, she will give ship operators cause for serious thinking. It it now evident that the airship's backers are seriously interested in skimming the cream off the first-class traffic in mail and passengers.



Dining room and promenade.

THE huge airship will have completed its third crossing when it ties up at Lakehurst, New Jersey, early this month. American passengers for the return voyage—its fourth crossing of the Atlantic—pay $400 to Frankfort, $720 round trip, for a single room, and $680 one way for a double room. Bookings are made through the Hamburg-American line.

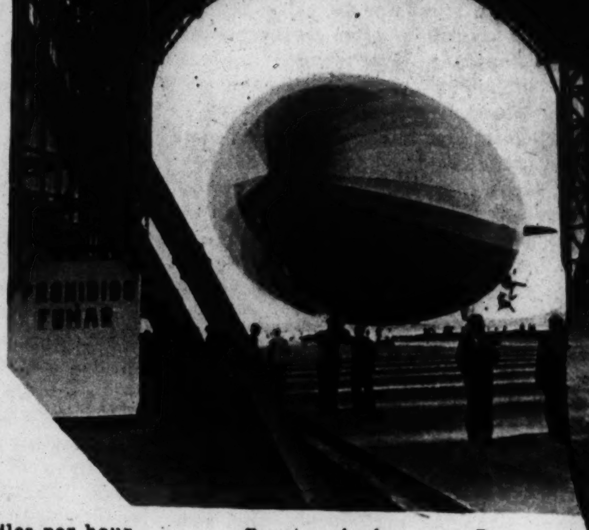
Through heavy subsidies to both builder and operator, the German Government is part owner of the Hindenburg. It was built by the Luftschiffbau Zeppelin Corporation, which controls the operating concern, Deutsche Zeppelin Reederei.

Even now, the Hindenburg's operators are well-advanced in the construction of a sister airship, and under full-speed orders, it will not be long before these flying leviathans will have established a high-speed service across the North Atlantic that will take the wind out of many a mariner's sails.

Within the memory of living men, crack sea-going vessels carried no more pay load nor a greater passenger list than the Hindenburg carries today.

The LZ-129's 50 passengers and 40 members of the crew are far more comfortably settled than was Charles Dickens when he came to America "first-class" in 1842.

With 71 tons of fuel in her tanks, the Hindenburg can cruise for 8750 miles. In other words, she can travel around the globe at the equator with only two fuel stops. At 80 miles per hour, such a trip would require about 13 days of flying time.



Entering the hangar at Rio.

Her buoyancy enables the Hindenburg to remain aloft without engine power. And to drive this giant forward at a top speed of 84.3 miles per hour requires only 4400 horsepower, divided equally among four outboard Diesels. These engines, each rated at 1100 horsepower, are probably the most powerful aircraft units developed to date.

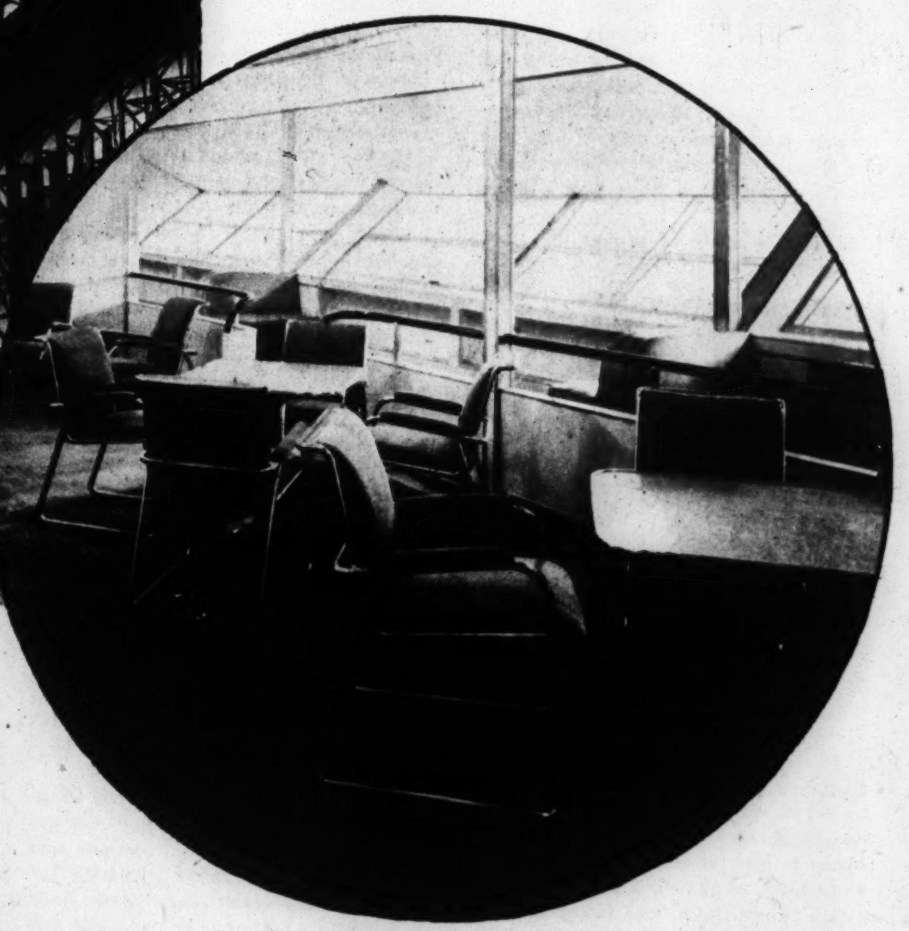
Speed and power are not all that make a flying leviathan. She caters to passengers who are accustomed to traveling in comfort and luxury.

It is, for instance, a luxury to ride an airship on which one is permitted to smoke. The LZ-129's smoking room is made possible by an ingenious use of fireproof materials and a one-way door. Similar to the lock of a canal, this door can be opened only from the outside. It guarantees absolute insulation of the smokers from the rest of the ship. If a cigar or cigarette is thrown into one of the ash receivers, the lighted stump is automatically extinguished.

Fastidious passengers may have hot and cold showers and baths. They may play deck sports, or they may walk around a promenade deck that is flanked on one side by an observation window 92 feet long.

On the culinary side, the LZ-129 provides all the necessary equipment for satisfying sharp appetites. An all-electrical kitchen, including a four-cooker range, warming cabinets and refrigerators, is the domain of the chef. Communication with the dining room is by means of a dumb waiter.

The furniture is unique and practical and embodies various improvements over previous airship furniture. The chairs give the appearance of substantial weight and comfort, but they are surprisingly light. "Swiss cheese" is the best way to describe their construction. In order to save weight, holes were punched into the metal ribs and braces, making them porous, but still strong enough to carry the heaviest person.



The passenger lounge.

Sixteen inflated gas cells support the huge structure of the Hindenburg. They are ordinarily inflated with both hydrogen and helium, the main lifting gas being helium, surrounding the auxiliary cells of hydrogen. The cheaper hydrogen is useful for carrying extra fuel and equipment; it can be released at will from the control cabin.

The airship is run from the control car, near the bow. Here are also located the skipper's living quarters and the navigation room. Above the control room is the radio station, with facilities for carrying on radio-direction finding, long and short wave communication, as well as radio telephony over a long range.

The airship's "brain" is the control room. From this station, the crew takes order and the elevators, rudders, and engines are operated according to instructions from the commander. Here also are master switchboards for controlling the ballast and gas cells.

While the Hindenburg's length is only slightly greater than the Graf's, her volume is about twice as great. The interior construction is similar to that of the Graf's, that is, aluminum alloy "rings" tied and braced with steel wires. The Hindenburg's outer skin is a cotton fabric made watertight with successive applications of "dope."

Electric power for the various hotel services, illumination, etc., is generated in a central power plant located in a fireproof room built along the lower corridor. The power units are two 50 horsepower Diesels, each driving a 33-kilowatt generator The voltage is 220 volts direct current.

COMMUNICATION within the body of the LZ-129 is by means of both telephone and telegraph. The control car is connected with the four outboard motors by means of a mechanical telegraph system, similar to that used on steamships. Commands are rung up on an indicator in the control cabin, and through a system of cables the command is indicated on a similar drum in each power car.

Instead of the conventional airship "bumper" or "buffer" bag commonly seen protruding from the control car and lower fin, the LZ-129 has two large pneumatic tires four feet in diameter, mounted on turntables so that they may swing in any direction. They are retractable during flight.

As she goes into service, the Hindenburg has the Graf's extraordinary record to shoot at. This veteran has actually flown more than 17,000 hours. And she has covered more than 1,000,000 miles, equivalent to two round trips to the moon. More than 37,000 people have ridden in the Graf at various times.

From the United States come indications that the challenge of the new Hindenburg is realized not only by the commercial transport concerns, but also by those interested in military aviation. Both are taken into account in proposed legislation now pending in Congress. House bill No. 2744 would call for construction of two airships of 7,000,000 cubic feet capacity for trans-Atlantic service, and other bills introduced in the House of Representatives—respectively Nos. 10,186 and 12,030—are for the building of a 300-ton airship for the Army and another for the Navy.

GLASGOW, Scotland.

A MODEL ship in a bottle, several times too large to pass through the neck of its glass prison, automatically raises the question: "How did it get there?" The Queen Mary, Great Britain's rival of the French Normandie for title of the world's largest ship, presented the question in reverse.

Most visitors at the fitting-out basin of John Brown's Yard above Greenock, Scotland, who saw the great bow of the cathedral-like structure towering into the sky immediately asked, "How will it get out?" Since the Queen Mary is 1004 feet long, 118 feet in the beam, 200 feet from keel to funnel top, and has an estimated tonnage of 80,000, while the Clyde River at John Brown's Yard is only 300 feet wide and in spots only 36 feet deep while the Queen Mary draws 32 feet, the quiet answers of assurance weren't always convincing. The imagination of man reaches a point where the overpowering impression of immensity defeats it.

But from the Right Honorable Lord Aberconway, chairman of John Brown & Co., Limited, down to the lowliest Lowland rivet tosser there wasn't any doubt. Many of the shipyard force had helped build the ill-fated Lusitania and had seen her fool another generation of doubting Thomases in 1907 when she got her 790 feet and 30,000 tons displacement down the same gray-green waters of the Clyde's tortuous course to open water at the Tail of the Bank, 15 miles away.

The Clyde being a tidal river, the day for the journey downstream was chosen after careful study of meteorological statistics which showed the highest tides of this year would come March 24. The ship was lightened, all but four of her 24 motor-driven lifeboats, each capable of carrying 145 persons, being taken off, and no more oil was loaded than was necessary for the 15-mile run.

More than 500,000 persons, many of them coming on the 53 special trains that ran from all parts of the island that day, turned out to see England's bid for the blue ribbon of the Atlantic (lost by the Mauretania in 1930 to the Europa and now held by the Normandie) leave for her specially built dock at Southampton, 550 miles away. They swarmed over vantage points on both sides of the Clyde. They packed Greenock esplanade and the slopes of Lyle and Tower Hills. Farmers with land bordering the river reaped a goodly crop of shillings and half-crowns.

The tide rose a little earlier than expected. The first executive order was given at 10 o'clock, an hours earlier than scheduled. Two tugs made fast at the stern, one at the bow, three waited at the quay for orders, and another, the most powerful, lay downstream midway along the liner's flank, ready to butt as she swung out.

The three great typhon sirens of the Queen Mary, each seven feet long and toned to two octaves below middle A, sent out a mournful blast that seemed to tell the Old Kilpatrick Hills "I shall not pass this way again." Slowly the stern of the liner slid into the mouth of the Cart River, making use of the mouth where six acres of bank had been dredged away 18 months ago to make the launching possible.

The cheers of the workmen in the yard rang out as the propellers turned over slowly and the Queen Mary headed down river, two tugs attached forward and two aft to help with the steering. The other three trailed along. Whistle signals controlled the tugs. The captain and chief pilot stood on the navigating bridge, the chief officer on the forecastle head and the assistant pilot and senior first officer on the after, or docking, bridge.

Five minutes after leaving came the first of three delays. The rising tide swung the Queen Mary's bow toward one bank at the same time that a fresh southeasterly breeze, putting its force on the high quarter, pushed the stern toward the other bank. As the bow swung, it gathered speed and appeared certain to ram the bank. The rudder was ineffective, since the ship had so little way. The tugs couldn't hold her, but they did check the force somewhat as the bow and stern grounded.

There were anxious moments aboard the Queen Mary as she swung so far athwart the river as to block it almost entirely. The decks tilted to port and then slowly became level. There were only 15 or 20 yards between the stern and shore. The tugs, two ahead, two astern facing upstream, and the other three amidships, snorted and puffed away till it seemed their boilers would burst. Ten minutes later and the Queen Mary was free again.

But she wasn't around the first bend yet. Within five minutes, at another point in the same bend, the same accident occurred, only the bow grounding, however. A hemp tow rope parted and had to be replaced. Then the tugs went through their same maneuvers and in a few minutes the liner was off once more. She swung dangerously at the next bend, but did not go aground although her bow was not far from the south bank and her stern slewed to the north bank.

The liner stood motionless for 10 minutes. Then, with three tugs pulling on the starboard bow, she moved into the middle of the channel.

A few minutes later and the worst bend of all, that at Bowling, was rounded with ease and there was no more excitement as the ship swung into the buoyed channel of the Clyde Navigation Trust. Nevertheless, the two pilots had their hands full, for the 300-foot channel is lined with mud flats, shoals and sand bars.

A few miles more and the Queen Mary passed the desolate anchored hulk of L'Atlantique, the 41,000-ton French liner that caught fire during its trial runs in the English channel in 1933, now waiting to be towed to the shipbreaker's yards.

Just below Port Glasgow, the Queen Mary let her 16-ton port anchor go for the first time. Fuel was taken on and the 20 life boats picked up and swung into place with the other four. The Queen Mary was ready "to shear the sea with majesty of power," as John Masefield, the sailor-poet laureate of England, wrote iu his poem commemorating the launching of the liner.

FREEDOM at LAST for the 'MAIL ORDER BRIDE' Who Was FALSELY IMPRISONED for 12 YEARS took the stand against her. He testified she induced him to murder her husband. Telling practically the same story he had told in his repudiated confession, he declared she agreed to give him $7000 and her hand in marriage for committing the crime. There was some circumstantial evidence, such as that Minera and Abass had quarreled a good deal, but Mohammed's testimony was the mainstay of the State's case.

Minera went on the witness stand and vehemently denied Mohammed's story, incidentally explaining why she had not identified him when first questioned instead of saying the slayer was a stranger. She said Mohammed had boarded at her home for a time, but had been forced to leave because he had stolen a watch from her husband. She said he had made amorous advances to her, but she had rejected them.

"ON THE night of the killing," she testified (through an interpreter, of course), "I was just going to the bathroom when he (Mohammed) grabbed me and tied me up. Then I heard a shot. When he went out he told me he would kill me too if I ever said anything. So I didn't." As to some of the other testimony against her, she said many of the Syrians hated her because the was a Turk.

It took the jury four hours to decide that she was guilty of murder in the first degree. When the verdict was announced in the courtroom the interpreter was absent and Minera didn't know what fate had been decreed for her. She found out soon enough. Her sentence was life impisonment. She was committed to the Detroit House of Correction, which, although a municipal institution, receives some State prisoners for whose maintenance the State pays. Mohammed had been sent to the Michigan State Prison at Jackson.

There was a third trial, that of Karoub, the mosque-builder. And again Mohammed was the State's star witness. This time he had a different story to tell. He said Karoub coveted Minera and hired him to kill her husband. He said Karoub paid him $1000 and promised to pay him $6000 more. The prosecution also tried to show that there had been enmity over religious matters between Karoub and Abass. The jury was not convinced. It acquitted Karoub.

Meanwhile, there had been much interest in the Mohammedan colony of Highland Park in the disposition of the estate of Hussein Abass. He had been regarded as a well-to-do man, worth from $25,000 to $50,000. His will, dated September 20, 1922, written in Arabic and beginning, "Best Merciful God," provided that most of his property go to his father and two young sons in Syria, and that Minera be given $2100.

But when administrators took charge of the property it was soon discovered that Abass' affairs were not in as flourishing condition as they had seemed to be. Real estate values had declined, there were encumbrances of a mortgage and taxes, and there were many claims against the estate. None of the heirs named in the will received anything. When the final settlement was made in 1932, the entire cash residue was $74.26—which was paid to one Hebeeb Abodeeb to apply on his undertaker's bill.

So Minera, by her husband's death, became not only a prisoner but penniless. The change in her fortunes did give her something, however, which perhaps she had never had before — real friends. In the House of Correction the lonely, sad-eyed Turkish woman, cut off by an alien tongue even from her fellow-prisoners, aroused the sympathy and interest of the superintendent of the prison, Captain Edward Denniston, and of his wife. Minera, in response to their kindness, developed for them an intense devotion. After Mrs. Denniston died and the superintendent married again, the second Mrs. Denniston succeeded to her place in Minera's affections.

Minera, says Captain Denniston, was a model prisoner as far as obedience to rules was concerned. She incurred not a single black mark on her record. She was also a satisfactory worker. Under the system at the House of Correction, prisoners are required to work and are paid small wages ranging from five cents to 20 cents a day. Minera was paid 10 cents a day. She worked in the prison canning factory, at sewing and housework, but mostly as a cook. Out of her microscopic earnings she sometimes bought fruit and other delicacies for prisoners who were in the hospital.

Urbane and non-aggressive, she got along well with other inmates. She says they were all good to her. In her leisure time, she sometimes knit, sometimes just sat and listened to her companions talk. After a while she began to speak a few words of English — at first, just "Hello" and "Good-morning," then complete sentences. She can now carry on a conversation in English, although her speech is strongly accented and far from fluent. And she has forgotten Turkish.

On entering prison she returned to her original Catholicism and during the years of confinement found solace in religion.

Almost from the first Captain Denniston doubted that Minera was guilty of the crime. As he learned more about the case and more about Minera his doubt turned into positive belief in her innocence. He set inquiries on foot looking to her release. There were appeals to the Governor and the parole board. They were fruitless, as Ahmed Mohammed, in the prison at Jackson, steadily maintained he had told the truth.

At last the superintendent enlisted the aid of a young Detroit lawyer, Fred B. Collier, chairman of a citizens' committee appointed to investigate pardons and paroles. At his own expense, Collier investigated the Abass case, became convinced of Minera's innocence, and appealed to Mohammed to retract his accusation of her. The lifer refused. Then one day in March of last year, he sent Collier a letter asking him to visit him again. And when the attorney called, Mohammed gave a statement in the presence of several persons admitting he had lied in implicating Minera.

"She never had anything to do with the murder," Mohammed said. "I told her if she told the police I would kill her. . . . Hussein Abass was dishonoring me. He said I had stolen a watch from him, a watch set with a ruby. For five years he had been going among the people in the coffee houses and the shops, telling them I stole his watch while I was in his home.

"I WAS drinking that night and I went to his house after I had been in his store. I had taken a key to his house from the top of a counter and while I was at the house door Minera Abass came to me and asked me what I wanted. I held the gun against her head and told her never to say she had seen me and I told her if she screamed I would kill her. I tied her up and put her in a room and shot Abass while he was asleep.

"I told her to get $1000 for my defense or I would see that she went to jail with me. When she didn't I sent her away, too. Maybe I was wrong because when I swore about her in the police station the police said Mohammed Karoub had heard that I had gone to the house drunk and he had told them. I tried to get Karoub, too, but he got away. . . . You can let her out now. If she told on me she deserved going to jail. If she didn't tell I'm sorry."

Armed with this statement, Minera's friends renewed appeals for her release. The Governor commuted her sentence to 25 years, which, with regular time allowance for good behavior, made her eligible for parole in 1940. But Captain Denniston put on her record a special good-behavior allowance, usually granted only for heroism, which made her eligible for parole last month. And on the Thursday before Easter, the parole was granted.

When Minera heard the good news, she kissed everybody she could reach, including Captain and Mrs. Denniston. These good friends brought her to Detroit to spend the $25 the State allows for clothing on such occasions. She spent it all on a coat with a fur collar. Then they took her to a suburban home where a job as cook had been obtained for her. She had $127, saved from her prison earnings, to start life anew.

Minera's dark hair is streaked with gray and she shows a gold tooth when she smiles. She says she doesn't intend to marry again, nor does she intend to return to Turkey. She doesn't know what has become of her parents or other relatives. She has no children. She can't read or write. She resists persuasion to see a movie because she says her husband didn't approve of them and she still wants to follow his wishes. She wants to work and go to church and be at peace.

"I'm so happy to be free," she says, "I want to laugh all the time."

brother might conceivably have wanted to kill his reluctant inamorata seemed to him suggestive. Suddenly it occurred to him that the chairman of the board of a chemical firm would have access to deadly poisons it is illegal to sell without a prescription in a drug store. The syringe supplied the answer to the riddle posed by the large amount of poison in the tooth paste. And the syringe as well as the tooth paste tube might very well have been wiped off to destroy finger prints. . . . All this made a logical pattern which Captain Marcu could apprehend instantly. It did not, however, explain away the suspect's original alibi. Dr. Ciulley had been away almost five days when the murder occurred and there was no reason to suppose that the actress hadn't brushed her conspicuously lovely teeth in that interim. But the good detective had considered that point before; no sooner was Dr. Ciulley out of Sinaia than the captain's secret agents were gathering data on his movements during the time he was staying at the resort. At this point a phone call from a railroad station became an intelligible hint.

At first this notion was fruitless. The inn keeper with whom Dr. Ciulley's family stopped recalled the latter's presence at the lunch table on Christmas eve and reported that he had gone on an afternoon skiing excursion with a young Greek couple. They had all been at breakfast next morning as usual. Where had Dr. Ciulley's skiing companions gone? They had left no forwarding address. All they said was that they planned to spend the carnival season on the Riviera.

But when Captain Marcu examined the time table of the railway between here and Sinaia he found that a local left the resort town at 3:23 in the afternoon, arrived here at 8:57. Another local left the suburban station to which the phone call had been traced at 12:47 Christmas morning and reached Sinaia at 6:20. A man who had a pass key to Mme. Christescu's apartment could have spent more than an hour there after 9 o'clock without anyone's being the wiser. Captain Marcu spent a day in Sinaia himself, noticed the location of Dr. Ciulley's ground-floor room. Then he began interviewing the conductors and porters on the trains that seemed to fit into the hypothetical time schedule which he had formulated for the murder.

Several of these interviews were useless. But one conductor recalled a stocky man with a square-cut Charlie Chaplin mustache who whistled a few bars of a popular Rumanian love song as he handed him his ticket. The man was positive in his identification of the architect's photograph.

Dr. Liviu Ciulley was arrested on January 27. Confronted with the overwhelming mass of testimony that had been accumulated in the month that had elapsed since Christmas, he was forced to admit his trip to the capital on Christmas eve. Several hours of intensive grilling elicited nothing more from him. But the following day he came across, admitted the killing and, the police report, verified Captain Marcu's and Deputy Christescu's suspicions that jealousy had been his motive. He has not been tried yet, but they have no doubt that he will have to ask for clemency and the trial can only bring out details of his relations with the lovely actress, which, while they will be of great interest to certain Central European papers, will add nothing to Captain Marcu's information on the case.

The latter is well satisfied with the outcome of his labors. Nobody had a chance to call Sir Bernard Spilsbury or anyone else into the case and the reputation of the homicide squad of King Carol's capital city has been upheld in the eyes of the bereaved public.

Every one who has suffered from constipation—and who hasn't at one time or other—knows that dark-brown taste—that half-sick logy feeling—the blotchy complexion that come from constipation. THE CHARACTERS

WILLIE WEBFOOT—A happy little duck.
WILMA WEBFOOT—Willie's proud mother.
PROF. HAMMERHEAD—A learned red-headed wood pecker.

Little Willie Webfoot and his mother were strolling down a winding road that took them through the school district. The road was deserted in front of the schools, but the air was filled with a steady hum of voices as the youngsters inside pored over their lessons. Little Willie didn't have to go to school, and he wondered what school was like. Wilma Webfoot didn't see the schools, nor did she hear the hum of voices. She was too busy thinking how she would make her new dress and how jealous everyone would be when they saw it, for she was very vain. A little farther down the road is Hilda Hoarder. She calls to Wilma as she and Willie come near, and the proud old duck stops to talk as

THE PLAY BEGINS.

HILDA HOARDER—Isn't this a beautiful day? I'll bet the children wish school was out.

WILMA WEBFOOT—I feel sorry for them. I never went to school. My mother taught me everything I know and I'm doing the same with Willie. All anyone really needs know is how to swim.

HILDA HOARDER—Hm-m. Swimming? Almost everyone can swim if they have to. Of course, some folks can't learn anything else. I send my boys to Professor Hammerhead's school. He teaches them all about trees and how to build homes in them. (And the two mothers talk for a long time. At last Wilma and Willie say good-by to Hilda and continue on their way.)

WILMA WEBFOOT—Huh, so that hussy doesn't think us ducks can learn anything but swimming—the very idea. (She stops and looks at Willie. Suddenly she has an idea.) I know what I'll do. I'm going to send you to Professor Hammerhead's school. We'll show her how smart us ducks are. It's late now and school is over, so she takes Will to Professor Hammerhead's home and demands that he let Willie attend his school.)

PROF. HAMMERHEAD—Hm-m-m. I never had a duck in my school before. I don't see how he's going to do much drilling with that bill of his, or why he should want to. But he may come to my school if you insist.

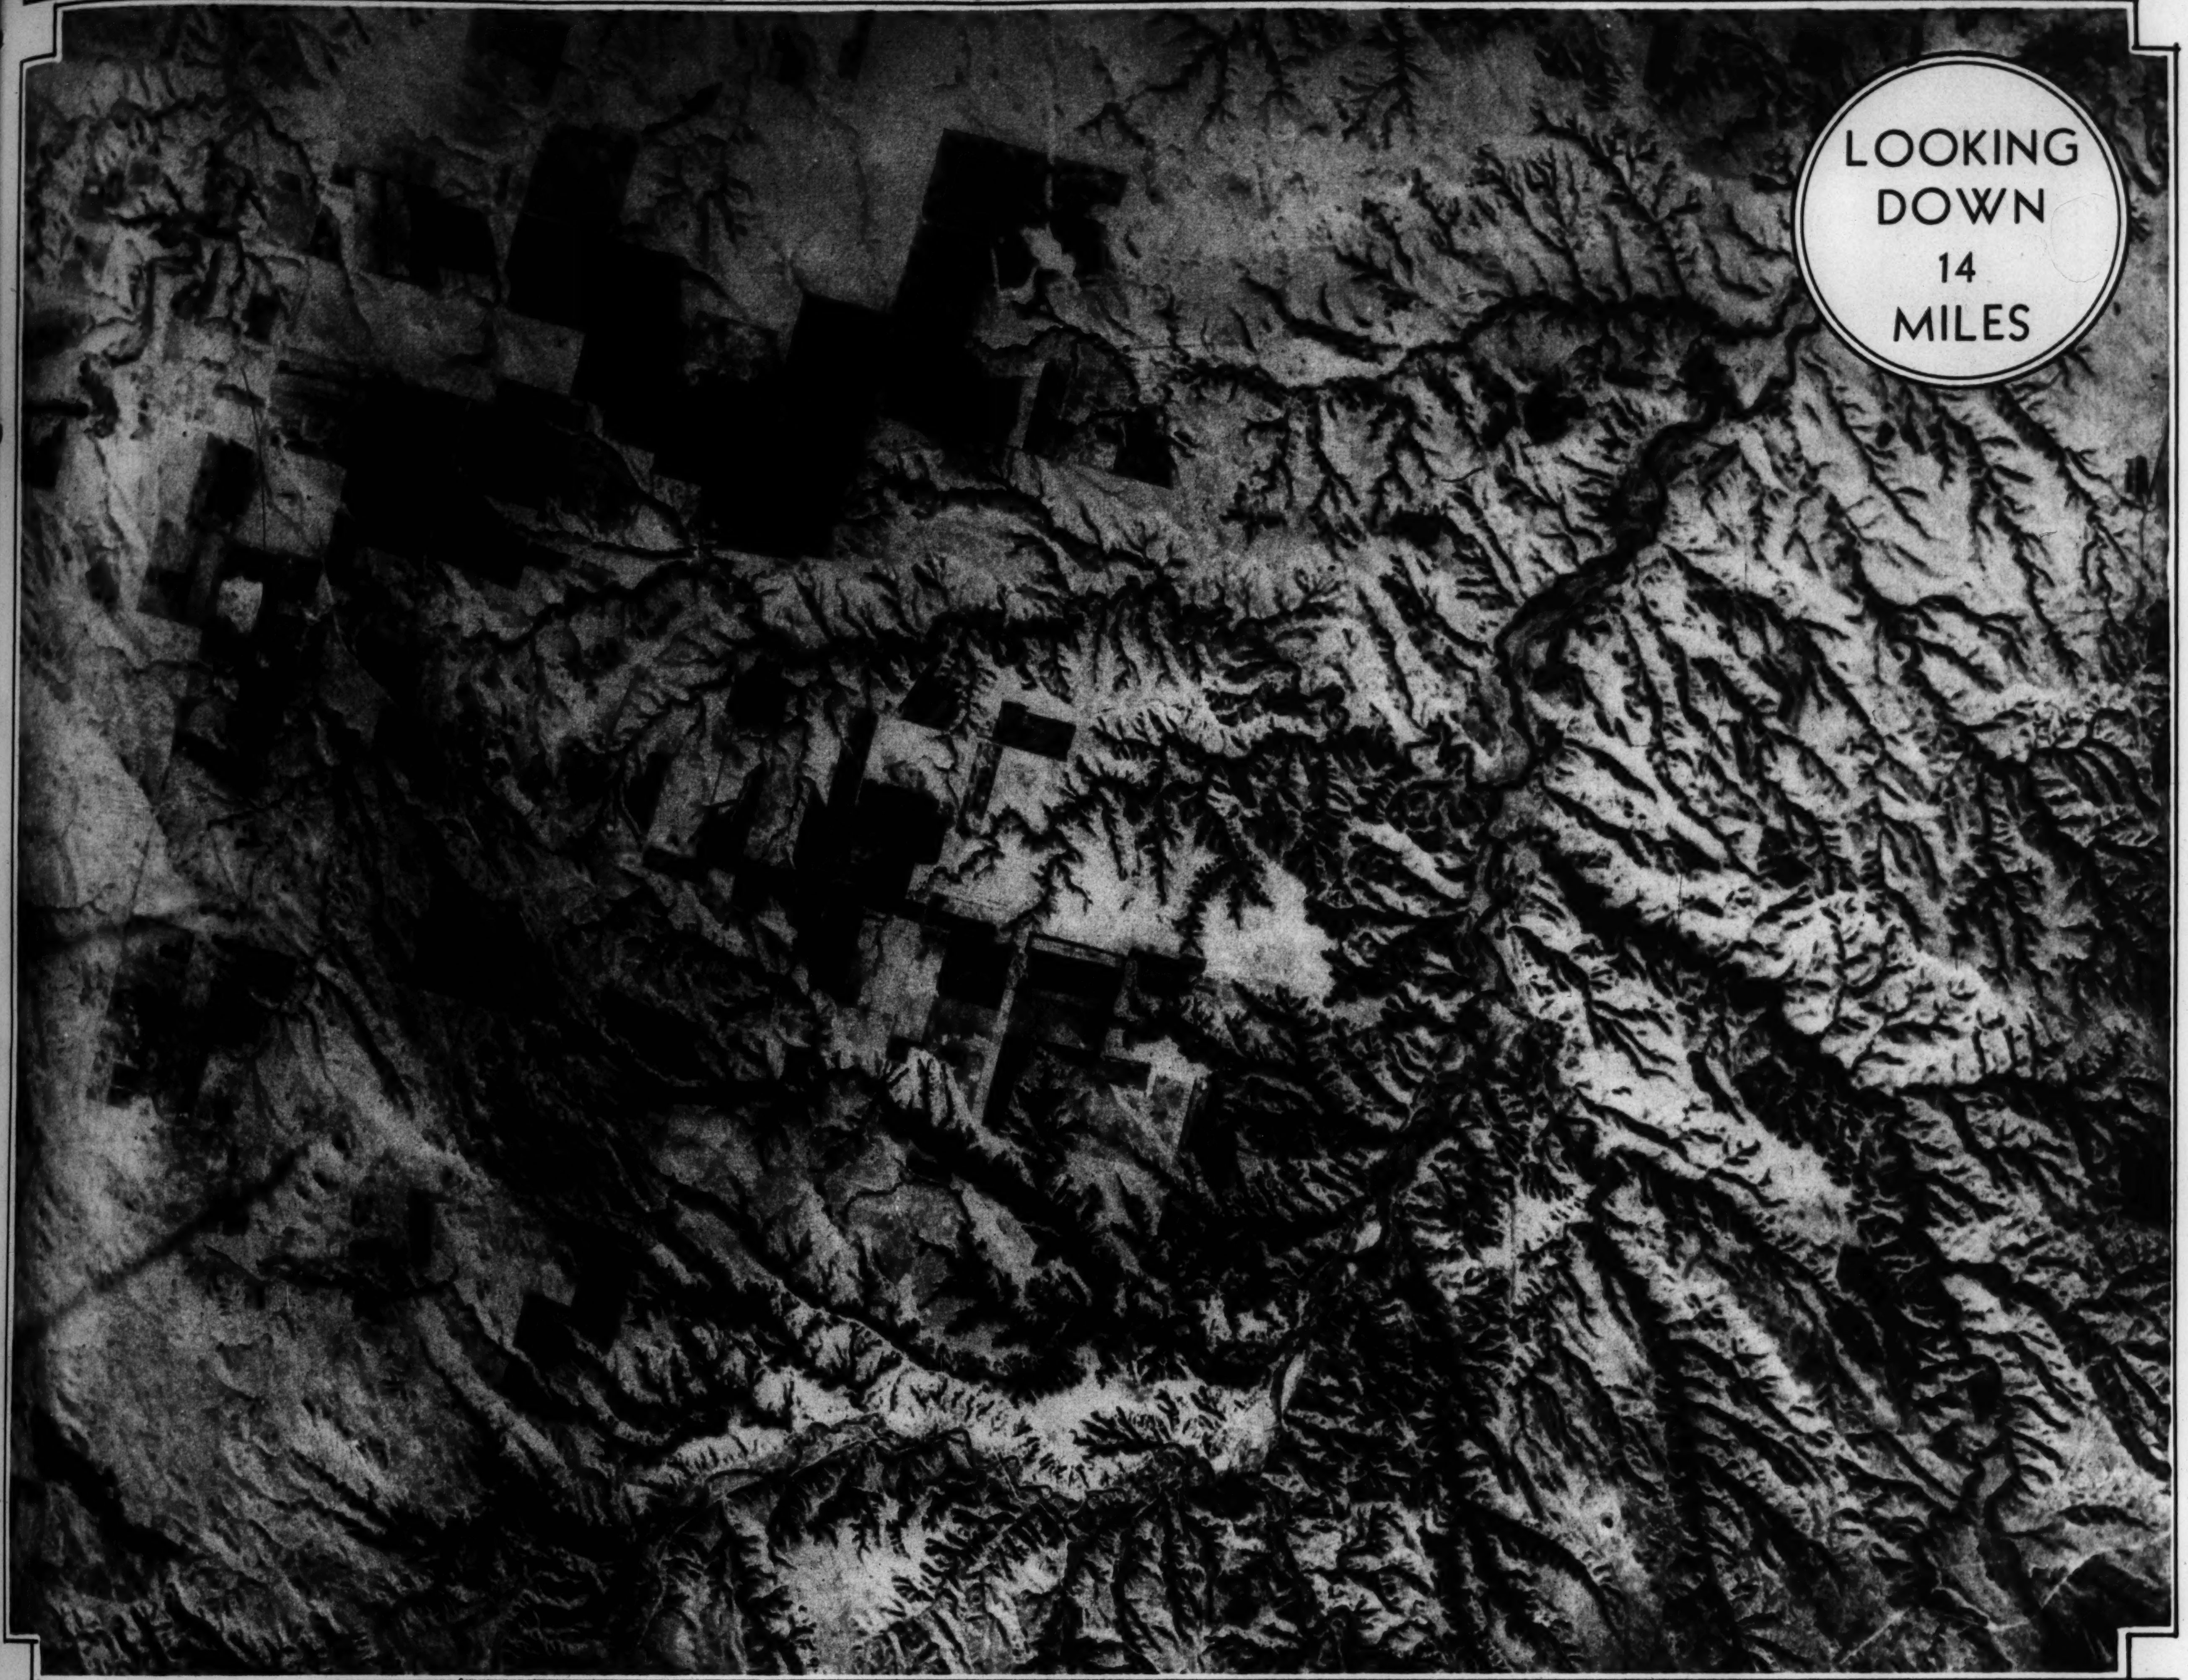
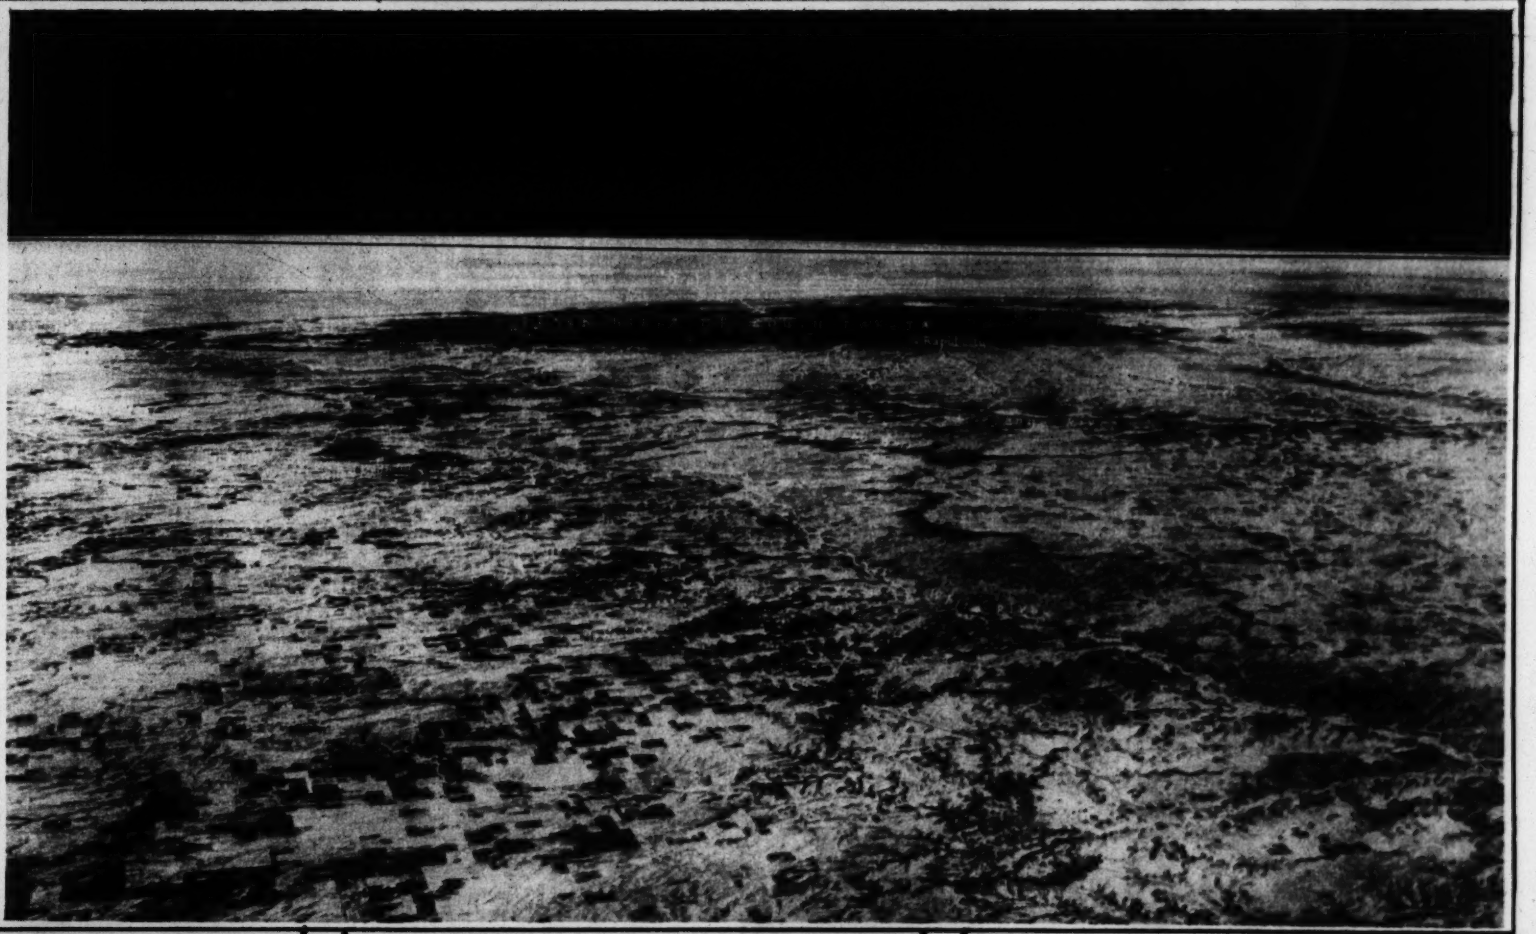
LOOKING DOWN 14 MILES





These remarkable photographs, just released for publication, were made by a camera mounted in the gondola of the balloon Explorer II when it made its record ascent of 72,395 feet into the stratosphere over South Dakota, November 11, 1935, in a flight sponsored by the National Geographic Society and the Army Air Corps, and carried out by Captain Albert W. Stevens and Captain Orvil A. Anderson. The upper picture, which takes in an area of approximately 105 square miles, shows the South Fork of the White River and its many small tributaries, and rectangles of cultivated land. The camera was pointed straight down. The lower picture shows the curvature of the earth. The curvature is apparent on comparison of the horizon with the straight line drawn on the photograph just below it. The special camera, photographing at a distance of 300 miles, screened out all light except penetrating infrared rays. The picture encompasses more than 40,000 square miles.

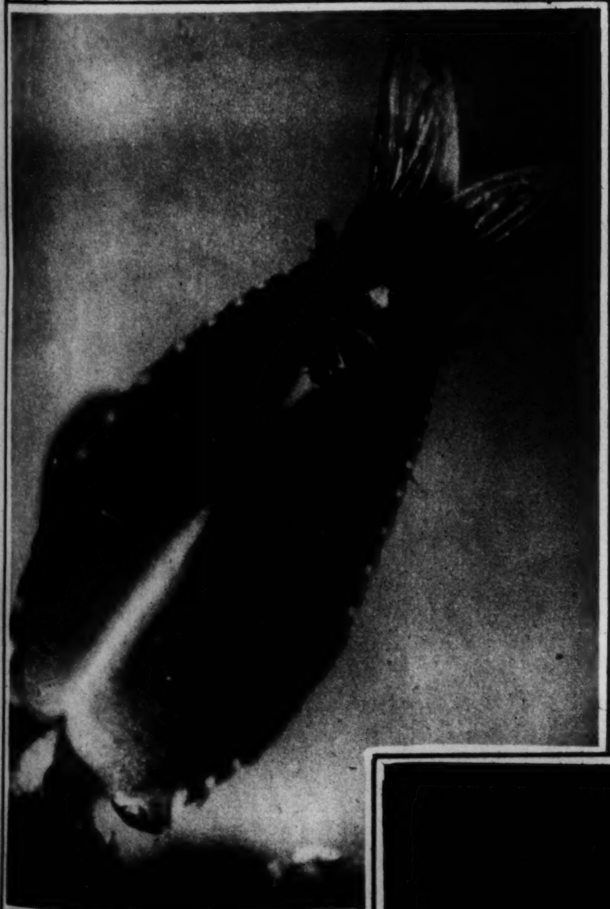
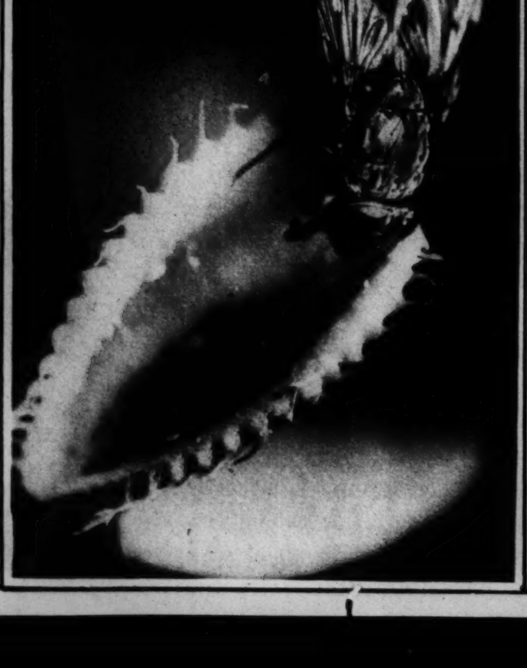
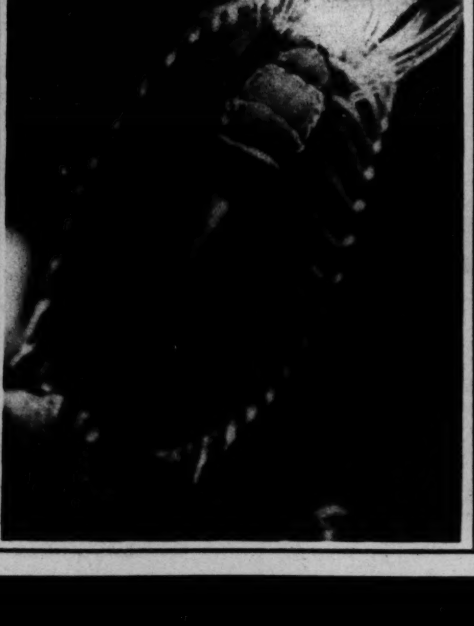
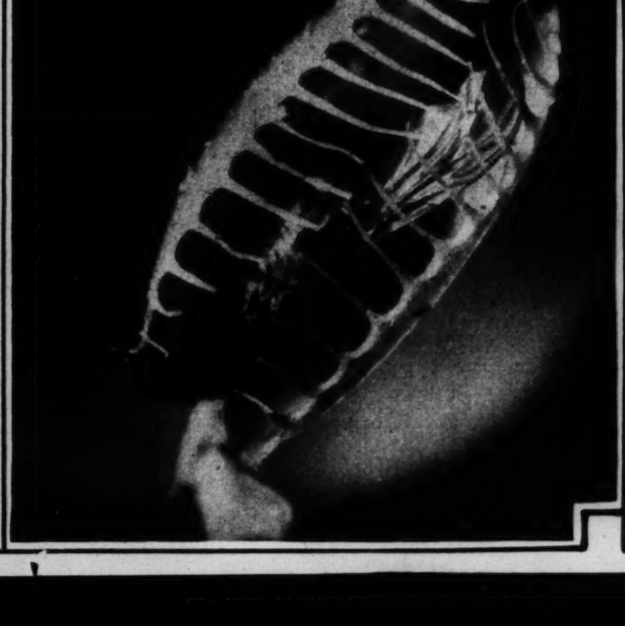
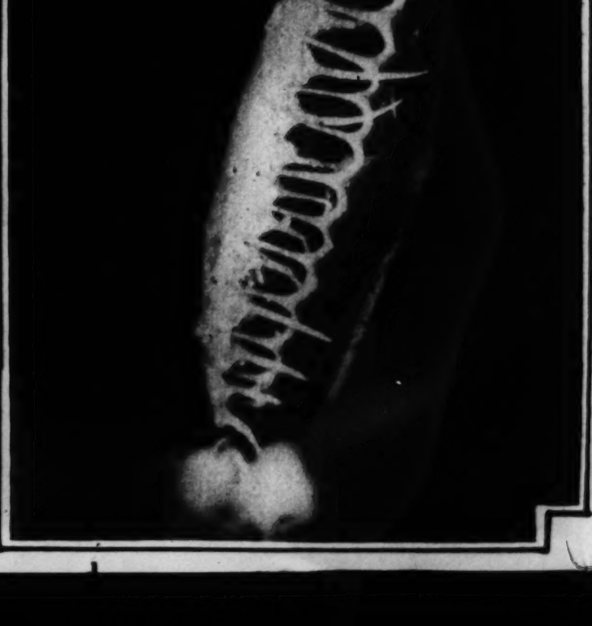
THE CAPTURE











This series of photographs, made with a motion picture camera, shows the plant popularly known as Venus's-flytrap (its botanical name is Dionaea muscipula) catching a meal. In the first picture (above) a fly has just alighted on a leaf of the plant. In the next scene the leaf, set in motion by the fly's contact with tiny, hair-like triggers, is starting to close. The closing movement continues in the next, and in the fourth picture the fly is well hemmed in. The last, photograph shows the trap closed, its victim held for the rest of its life. That is not very long; after the plant has taken all the nourishment from the prisoner, the leaf opens, allowing what is left of the fly to drop out. The closing of the trap is very rapid.

YOU can't help feeling sorry for her—the girl who seems to be "in wrong" with everyone.

She's pretty—but men avoid her. She's good company—but girls let her alone. She's simply out of things. And why?

Well, bluntly, because underarm perspiration odor makes her unpleasant to be near.

And the pity of it is, she has nobody to blame but herself. For it's so easy, these days, to keep the underarms fresh, free from odor all day long. With Mum!

It takes just half a minute to use Mum. And you can use it any time—before dressing or afterwards. Mum is harmless to clothing, you know.

It's soothing to the skin, too. You can use it right after shaving the underarms.

Exercise and strengthen the intestinal muscles

This is the story of a young lady who was determined to be healthy. Every morning, she did her setting-up exercises. Over the week-end—tennis and swimming. Yet, in spite of it all, she still suffered from constipation.

Then she heard of a new kind of exercise—a laxative with "exercising action."

Safe—Pleasant to take

After breakfast and dinner, she takes a teaspoonful of Saráka*—tiny granules which are easily swallowed with a glass of water. During the next two hours, these granules undergo an amazing change. Gradually they e-x-p-a-n-d. And turn into soft BULK.

"Get busy and exercise," this extra bulk signals to lazy intestinal muscles. "This is what you've been waiting for during all these sluggish months—something to exercise on—something to make you stronger."

*Bulk Plus Motility

In addition—to make sure that the extra bulk keeps in motion—Saráka contains a specially prepared frangula, which mildly stimulates the intestines to healthy activity. So you have Bulk Plus Motility—a combination not found in ordinary laxatives.

In fact, laxative is the wrong word for Saráka. Its results are so natural yet thorough that most users have no sensation of having taken a laxative. They are reminded of healthy childhood when constipation was unknown.

Ask your doctor about Saráka. We are confident he will tell you that it is absolutely safe and non-habit forming. It takes advantage of the most recent discoveries in intestinal hygiene. You will find this modern laxative at your druggist's. Or mail the coupon today.

LINCOLN V12 ZEPHYR AMERICAN AIRLINES
DOUGLAS A-85
U. S. MAIL

WHEN PERFORMANCE IS AS MODERN AS APPEARANCE

PEOPLE everywhere notice, and admire, the appearance of the LINCOLN-ZEPHYR. Every graceful flowing streamline stamps it the modern car. But use, rather than observation, reveals the LINCOLN-ZEPHYR's true virtues. . . . Performance is as modern as appearance!

The smooth, luxurious performance of twelve cylinders makes driving the LINCOLN-ZEPHYR a delight — through traffic, on the open road, or in the hill country. And, often to an owner's amazement, he discovers that the V-12 motor runs from 14 to 18 miles on a gallon!

Owners, too, are impressed with a new rhythm of riding—on bad roads or good, a comfort they have never known before. The long generous body is cradled on soft transverse springs. The weight of all six passengers is balanced skilfully "amidships." Seats are like divans. Head room and leg room and visibility are generous.

In this new kind of car are many forward-reaching ideas in design and engineering. Streamlines, for instance, mean much more than "style." They result from the new construction. Underneath them are light, strong trusses of steel, as in the bridge. Body and frame are one, welded together — a rigid structure, and a safe one. The man or woman used to expensive cars is the first to realize that within the last few years great progress has been made in the automotive art. In the LINCOLN-ZEPHYR the owner finds, today, the car of the years to come! The LINCOLN-ZEPHYR is the only twelve-cylinder car priced under $3000.

V-12 cylinder motor developing 110 horsepower. Wheelbase 122 inches. Springbase 133 inches. Room for six passengers and luggage. Choice of seven colors. Safety Glass throughout. Owners report from 14 to 18 miles per gallon of gasoline.

3 GIVES THIS SAFETY—BECAUSE TWICE AS SOFT

100,000 brushings on metal plates softer than your teeth prove Pepsodent Toothpaste twice as soft as the polishing agent generally used in most dentifrices. Dentists know Pepsodent Toothpaste is super-soft, therefore super-safe, even for children's teeth and as a massage for tender gums.

See the difference when you really High-Polish your teeth!

● "I've got it!" With these 3 words one of the Pepsodent scientists announced the end of an exciting 14-year search for an utterly new kind of toothpaste. One that would High-Polish teeth safely!

He had found the new Pepsodent! A toothpaste both Super-Soft and High-Polish. A toothpaste that gives 3 times the value of ordinary kinds because it polishes teeth to the greatest lustre ever known . . . with double safety.

This safe way to High-Polish teeth is the result of a sensational new ingredient. One never before used in a dentifrice. It is the secret of the astounding polishing power and cleansing action of Pepsodent's new toothpaste.

Imagine! New Super-Soft High-Polish Pepsodent Toothpaste gives your teeth twice the polish. Your teeth look whiter, feel cleaner and film-free, twice as long. Yet this new toothpaste is twice as soft! Being concentrated, it goes farther, lasts longer.

Even smoke stains quickly yield to Pepsodent's new patented toothpaste formula, developed at a cost of $200,000. Gently, with super-soft safety, it restores to your teeth the magnetic allure you admire in others.

So switch to New Pepsodent today. Look for the words "New High-Polish" on the box.

IMPROVED GUM MASSAGE! Your dentist will tell you that brisk finger massage with any toothpaste is good for the gums. It stimulates circulation; helps keep gums firm and healthy. But because the New Pepsodent Toothpaste is Super-Soft, it is especially suitable, extra safe for this purpose!

TIM CONTINUES TO READ THE OLD PARCHMENT FOUND IN THE PIRATES CAVE
WHAT A BUNCH OF BLOOD-THIRSTY CUT-THROATS THOSE PIRATES WERE! FIRST THEY CAPTURE RICHLY-LADEN MERCHANT SHIPS, THEN KILL THE CREW AND LATER HIDE THEIR LOOT ON SOME LONELY COAST
LET'S SEE NOW—AFTER CAPT. BARKER SECRETLY ORDERED SHARP, HIS FIRST-MATE TO BURN THEIR OWN SHIP, THE "VENGEANCE", WITH ITS ENTIRE CREW, THE TWO VILLAINS WATCHED THE FLAMING HULK FROM THE BEACH
SHE IS ABOUT TO PLUNGE TO THE BOTTOM, MATE
AND NOT A MAN SHALL ESCAPE ALIVE, CAPTAIN!
OUR SHARE OF THE GOLD IS TO BE DIVIDED EQUALLY, SIR?
YES, BUT THE SILKS AND SPICES WE MUST SELL UP THE COAST, BEFORE WE CAN DIVIDE FAIRLY, SHARP
I SHALL REMAIN AND GUARD THE LOOT WHILE YOU GO TO BARGAIN WITH THE ARAB TRADESMEN IN BARDAGOS
THE TREASURE IS WELL-HIDDEN, MATE
- AND NO GUARD SHALL BE NEEDED!
CRACK
THE BULLET MISSED AND THE MATE CHARGED WITH DRAWN SWORD
SUDDENLY, A SHOUT! AND THE TWO PIRATES MOMENTARILY HALT THEIR STRUGGLE — GEE - THE COOK OF THE BURNING "VENGEANCE" ESCAPED -!
HE SWAM TO SHORE AND WAS SO EXHAUSTED HE FAINTED AND FELL ON THE BEACH —

"My Son Gained 8 Pounds in 2 Months"

Writes Mrs. J. W. Eddy, Togo, Saskatchewan

OVALTINE is a delicious pure food concentrate first created in Switzerland and approved by thousands of physicians. Already it has gained world-wide recognition—and is particularly noted for the remarkable increases in weight and nerve poise which so frequently occur when it is added to the daily diet.

For example, Mrs. J. W. Eddy of Togo, Sask., Canada, writes: "My son was restless, thin and cranky—needed something to pick him up in weight and make him eat better. Now after taking Ovaltine for only 2 months, Warren is entirely changed—has gained exactly 8 pounds. Everyone who sees him asks what in the world we're doing to make him look so well."

Another mother, Mrs. Betty Ayres, 524 E. Martin Street, Roxborough (Philadelphia), Pa., writes: "My little girl is 9 years old, was very picky about her eating and had weighed only 51 pounds. Hearing so much about Ovaltine, I decided to get some for her. Now, in a little over 3 weeks, she has gained 7 pounds."

These letters, of course, cover only two individual cases. And we do not claim or guarantee that similar results will occur in every case where Ovaltine is used. But these two letters are so typical of thousands we have received, that we believe a thorough trial of Ovaltine is justified by every intelligent mother whose child is nervous and underweight.

Thousands of nervous people, men and women, use Ovaltine to restore vitality when fatigued . . . Ovaltine is also highly recommended as a strengthening food for nursing mothers, convalescents, and the aged—also for sleeplessness when taken as a hot drink just before going to bed.

Ovaltine is very inexpensive to serve—and can be obtained at all drug and grocery stores. You simply give it mixed with milk—either hot or cold—and children love its delicious taste. . . Note special offer at the right.

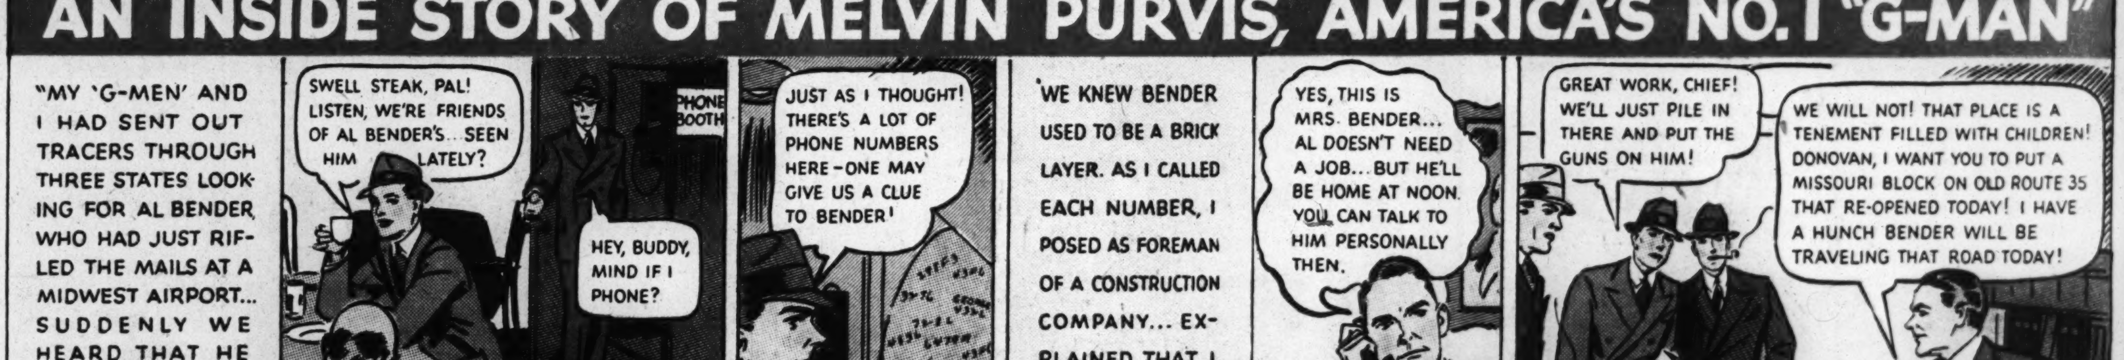
THE "MISSOURI BLOCK" OR, HOW AMERICA'S ACE "G-MAN" CAPTURED AL BENDER, THE AIR-MAIL ROBBER

AN INSIDE STORY OF MELVIN PURVIS, AMERICA'S NO. 1 "G-MAN"

MELVIN PURVIS, formerly the ace G-Man of the Department of Justice . . . who directed the capture of Dillinger, "Pretty Boy" Floyd, "Baby Face" Nelson, and scores of other public enemies. Mr. Purvis reveals here the methods used in capturing desperate criminals. For obvious reasons, the names of the characters involved have been changed. This inside story of the capture of typical law-breakers is herewith published as clinching proof that CRIME DOES NOT PAY.



"MY 'G-MEN' AND I HAD SENT OUT TRACERS THROUGH THREE STATES LOOKING FOR AL BENDER, WHO HAD JUST RIFLED THE MAILS AT A MIDWEST AIRPORT... SUDDENLY WE HEARD THAT HE HUNG OUT A LOT AT JOE'S COFFEE-POT' IN A SMALL MISSOURI TOWN AND SO . . "

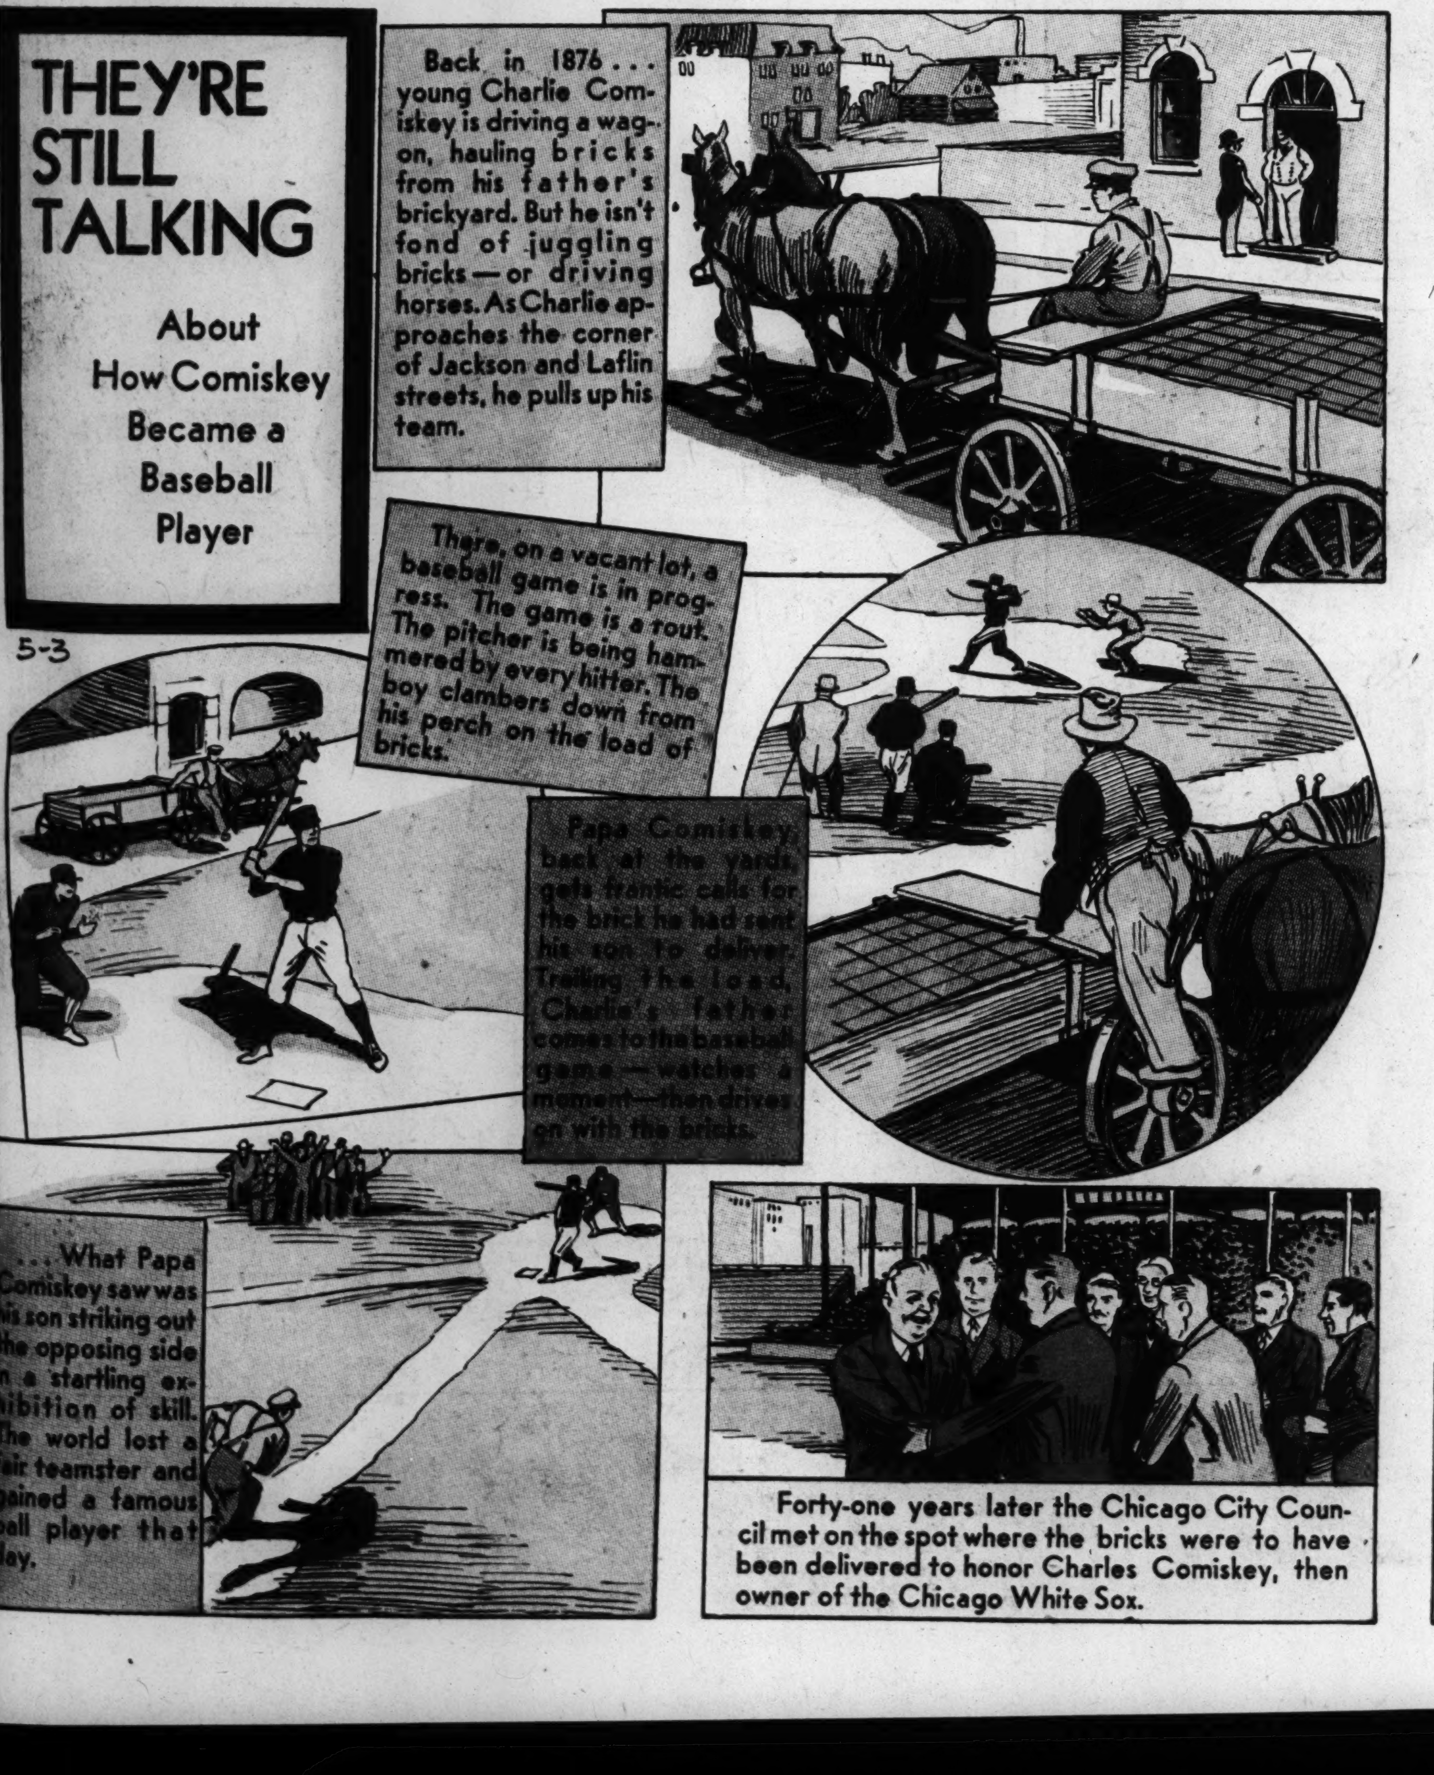
About How Comiskey Became a Baseball Player



Back in 1876 . . . young Charlie Comiskey is driving a wagon, hauling bricks from his father's brickyard. But he isn't fond of juggling bricks—or driving horses. As Charlie approaches the corner of Jackson and Laflin streets, he pulls up his team.

There, on a vacant lot, a baseball game is in progress. The game is a rout. The pitcher is being hammered by every hitter. The boy clambers down from his perch on the load of bricks.

Papa Comiskey, back at the yards, gets frantic calls for the brick he had sent his son to deliver. Trailing the load, Charlie's father comes to the baseball game—watches a moment—then drives on with the bricks.

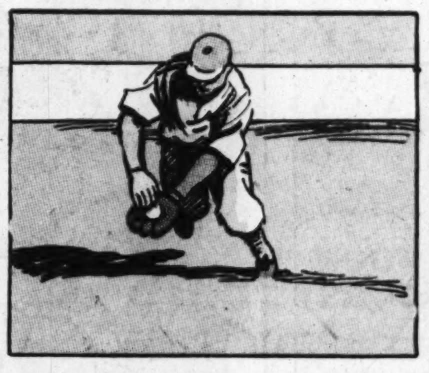
. . . What Papa Comiskey saw was his son striking out the opposing side in a startling exhibition of skill. The world lost a fair teamster and gained a famous ball player that day.

Forty-one years later the Chicago City Council met on the spot where the bricks were to have been delivered to honor Charles Comiskey, then owner of the Chicago White Sox.

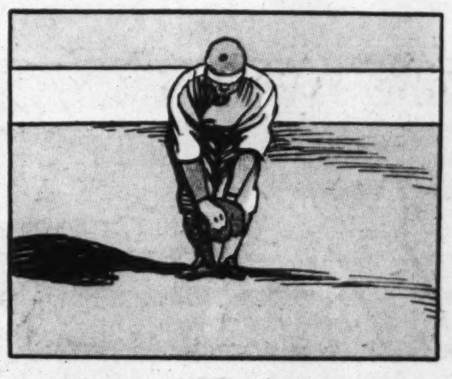
Baseball . . . . By NED BRANT

More About Outfielding

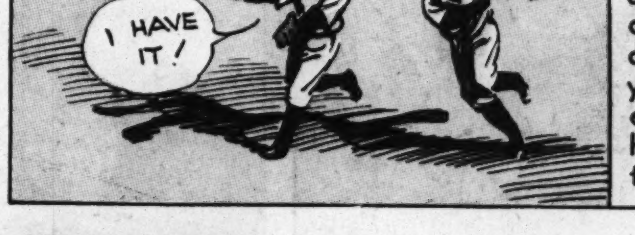
Learn to estimate the approximate spot where the ball will come down. Then you can race for that spot without keeping the eye on the ball constantly.



An outfielder does not go after a ground ball like this infielder is doing.



This is the safer way. Then if the ball is missed, it seldom goes past him to the fence.



This is how to avoid confusion and damaging collisions of players. When your fellow outfielder says he has it, let him take it, don't interfere.
